A Trenton man was taken to hospital in Kingston last night after his car rolled in the ditch on Highway 2 at Bayside.

Robb was alone at the time and police did not immediately determine the cause of the mishap.

Cablevue Status Is Clarified

The position of Cablevue (Belleville) Ltd., was clarified today by Gerald A. Morton, president of the cable television company which serves Belleville and Trenton.

Commenting on the Tuesday announcement that Bushnell Communications Ltd., of Ottawa had purchased the area firm, Mr. Morton said in reality only that percentage of the firm owned by Thomson interests was purchased by Bushnell.

Mr. Morton said that as a result of the decision made by the Canadian Radio, Television Commission, ownership of Belleville Cablevue now rested with both the Belleville interests and Bushnell.

However, the CRTC, in allowing Bushnell to purchase both the Thomson interest in Belleville cable and other Thomson radio and television stations, directed the Bushnell firm that it must sell its interest in Belleville cable before a date yet to be determined.

The CRTC made its decision in this fashion because the Thomson purchase was a package deal, Mr. Morton explained.

Meeting Tonight On Kente Project

PICTON (Staff) — An Ameliasburg ratepayers' group, The Committee for Quinte Education for Fair Taxation, meets tonight with members of the Prince Edward County Board of Education in Bloomfield to examine the Kente School project.

Discussion during the meeting, requested by the committee, will focus on questions prepared by its members several weeks ago concerning the proposed elementary-secondary school complex.

Among these are the following:

- The number of secondary students to attend this new school over the next ten years?
- What courses will be offered in the new secondary school?
- Have you (Prince Edward County Board of Education) taken an option on the Robin Lake site?
- Have other sites been considered?
- Has the OWRC been asked for its approval?
- Can the board advise this committee what the social implications may be in mixing primary students with secondary students?
- Can the board give this committee the relative cost of educating students in this new secondary school versus the present costs for 1970 in the Hastings system?
- Has the Department of Education given its approval to the new secondary school?
- What guarantee has the board as to the number of students who will attend the new secondary school when it opens?
- Is the board negotiating directly with Toronto or with the department of education in Kingston?
- What are alternative methods of providing similar opportunities and education?
- What is the total educational debenture debt at the present time?

The committee has suggested that tonight's meeting will offer a general discussion of the project with other questions raised by interested ratepayers.

The meeting is open to the public and will be held in the Bloomfield offices of the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

Dash and Carry Customer Frees Outboard

PICTON (Staff) — A shoplifter's power slay lasted yesterday indicates Picton merchants continue to be plagued by the non-paying customer.

The Quinte Sports Shop, Lake Street, operated by Donald Nugent, yesterday reported the theft of a 9½ horsepower motor valued at $500 from an outdoor display.

Although the motor had been chained outside, this precautionary measure did not daunt the dash and carry customer.

Police reported today the chain had been cut by the thief or thieves.

Investigation of the incident is continuing. The motor has not been recovered.

Summer Soldiers Present Arms... They Hope!

Under the soldierly ministrations of Cpl. Chris Lasby of the regular Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the 16-year-old students enrolled for the summer under the federal government's plan are put through their paces, presenting arms for inspection. The boys, most of them from the Belleville area, are today on their third day of training.

Mortgage Money Now Available

Ample mortgage money can be had for the asking, the Quinte district — and one place to go for it is Victoria and Grey Trust Company.

Jack Mosley, manager of Victoria and Grey's branch here told members of the Belleville Real Estate Board yesterday that his company now has an ample supply of mortgage money and hopes to continue increasing the volume of its mortgage loans.

Mr. Mosley told the realtors that last fall, when mortgage money was in short supply, Victoria and Grey was never without funds to lend, even when other companies had completely stopped the loans.

Now, the company hopes to continue to increase the volume of its mortgage lending for residential or commercial projects in the Quinte area.

"Because we have a great deal of local authority and autonomy, we make use of it and it is our policy to provide the fastest mortgage service in the area," he told his listeners.

We don't want to appear hoggish, and therefore we would be happy if we could capture only 90 per cent of the total mortgage business available in this area," he added.

But the manager made it clear that it is against the best interests of his company, the real estate firm involved

Collect $1,900

Members of the Trenton Dolphin Swim Club have done their part to keep Swimathon 76 afloat by collecting $1,900 to further the cause of Canadian amateur swimming.

Thirty percent of the total will be donated to the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, to be utilized in national programs, while the remainder will be used to aid the Trenton Club.

Among the project plans passed by the Dolphins are equipping the CFB pool with stop and turn judges' markers, paying off the remainder owed on the timing clock and purchasing track suits for the competitors.

Cheese Producers Ask for Subsidy

TORONTO (Staff) — Cheesemakers of immediate government action to help the cost-threatened Canadian cheese industry are uncertain.

The situation still remains indefinite for producers who still a prestige Quinte industry after more than a century — following a meeting here yesterday between cheese operators and Agriculture Minister — Wilbert Stewart.

The producers met with the minister to seek a subsidy of 2½ cents a pound for cheddar. In an interview after the meeting, Mr. Stewart said that although he sympathized with the cheesemakers, any price adjustment should be made at the federal level.

But John Fraser, acting president of the Ontario Cheese Manufacturers' Association, said that at earlier meetings the Canadian Dairy Commission and federal Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson refused to increase floor prices.

The producers say they are caught in a price squeeze between the commission and the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

They say the price they get for cheese has been held at 67 cents a pound by the commission. But the price of milk has increased 19 cents a hundredweight since the milk board was instituted April 1.

George Wood, operator of Beulah Cheese factory at Ivanhoe, was a member of yesterday's deputation that met with Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Wood said he agrees that any increase in price should be a federal action.

If a price change were confined to Ontario, buyers of cheddar cheese might switch to Quebec cheese.

Thus, any price alterations must be on a national level, Mr. Wood said.

On the present basis, unless noise relief is granted, most plants in Ontario will be forced to close," he said.

Mr. Fraser said the industry takes an average loss of six - tenths of a cent a pound because of cost increases and price differentials between the federal dairy commission and the provincial milk board.

WHY HARMFUL TENSION MAKES YOU SICK

Why do we get sick? Why do we die? The most reasonable explanation yet comes from Dr. Hans Selye, director of the University of Montreal's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery. He says, "A cause of disease is suddenly disease running because of old age. It stops because of some failure of some part that has worn out. It is the same with people. Under continuous stress — either physical or mental — some vital part gives away, leading to a variety of illnesses and eventually death". A fascinating article about Reader's Digest tells about different types of stress, and the ones you can do to minimize their ill effects. Hospital Costs

Magr. J. P. Sullivan's warning of the consequences of restrictions on increased health spending should be heeded by the federal and provincial governments.

Hospitals, like any other establishment, have a duty to keep operating expenses and costs within reasonable limits — but more than any, a hospital should be permitted to equip itself to perform its ministrations to the sick with maximum efficiency. For this reason any reasonable expenditure involved should be permitted.

The hospital board chairman points out that the possibility of health expenditures being limited to about 8 per cent would mean "a very rough time for hospitals," Belleville included, in the next year. To remain within such fiscal limits, he said, the hospital would have to either curtail services or lower their quality.

In this context we recall hospital administrator Philip Rickard's recent warning of increased pressure on the emergency facilities at Belleville General; and aggravating the problem is a shortage of general practitioners — this at a time when the city is expanding and more people are coming here.

According to Magr. Sullivan, Belleville General is being operated as economically as possible, with staff at the bare minimum and with two or three departments understaffed.

For, government to perpetuate such a situation would be a mark of irresponsibility and dereliction of duty toward the public. Ottawa and Queen's Park should think again, lest hospital care is to be permitted to suffer an intolerable lowering of standards.

Equality at the Beach

Do Canadians really unwind when they go to the beach or park? Compared with Europeans who tend to take it easy, bringing with them only the minimum of needs, Canadians vacation — even outdoors — in some luxury.

You know how it is on vacation; there is the boat or the trailer and even a day's outing calls for elaborate barbecue equipment, considerable quantity of food (designed for giant proportions), air-tight storage boxes and so on.

Another aspect of the vacation scene today is that far from being dormant, let alone extinct — as the feminists and psychologists would have us believe — family life, and father as the patriarch, are still very much in evidence.

One family we observed at The Outlet recently had father taking his ease in a camp chair while his brood of six — four girls and two boys aged about five to 15 — hovered around mother who (naturally) was laying table and preparing the food.

Indeed, it is debatable how much Mom gets from the holiday outing. We saw another woman making similar preparations . . . she was alone and dropping food and her emotion emerged from the barbecue which she was readying, presumably for the rest of the family enjoying themselves somewhere while mother did the spade work.

We did observe one father at Riverside Park last week, doing duty over a barbecue and absorbing a nice aroma of smoke which mother of course later would have to deal with in the family wash. In other words, while she may have been able to relax at the park, retribution would come later with home chores.

Whose Fault ?

The magazine lists others in this category, but Mrs. Onassis for one has long been a victim of the maliciousness and near slander of certain sections of the world's Press. Not a week goes by that she and her doings (and some of her non-doings) are not headlined in the movie magazines; the way these publications manipulate facts and information it is a wonder they don't get sued — and sued right often. Perhaps people like Mrs. Onassis find it easier simply to ignore such rubbish as is written about them, for short of having such publications banned by the courts trying to control their penchant for the sensational would be like the Dutch boy holding his finger in the hole in the dyke.

It is not Mrs. Onassis and other world personalities who are the bane but rather the publications which perpetuate such nonsense about them.

Participatory Democracy

Staff of 18 Deals With Prime Minister's Mail

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It begins to come through that perhaps Prime Minister Trudeau has something with his "participatory democracy," the way some things are starting to shape up.

For if "participatory democracy" means what the PM says it does — that everybody is fitting into the act — it seems to be working.

This becomes an astounding number of taxpayers, taking him at his word, have been sounding off on some of the issues.

It could be a sort of very selective hearing, with the PM listening only when he feels in the mood, or seems he thinks this kind of public playback could be helpful.

But he must be listening some of the time on some questions — for he is being influenced by public opinion — and this is good and different.

Different because, while most prime ministers are sensitive to public pressures, few openly invite the taxpayers to speak up.

This PM is one of the few.

To handle the response to his request of the public for opinion, he has assigned 18 members of his staff of 70 to do nothing but read the mail, sift out the best and most meaningful for his attention, and answer it all.

No other PM has had such a staff — or such politically intelligent specialists to read, assess and answer the letters, with 10 high - speed typists to spin them off.

This must — and there has been evidence of it — have had to be an influence in the backoff the Government has been making from three of the most objectionable aspects of Finance Minister Benson's White Paper on Taxation.

Another powerful and allied influence has been Conservative Leader Stanfield's cross-country crusade against the more punitive points of the White Paper.

These have been the backoffs, which could be made by Mr. Benson only with the approval — and perhaps the specific direction — of the Prime Minister.

1. The undertaking to raise tax rates in guard against the danger of federal revenues expanding in the path of rising taxation sources of the provincial and municipal administrations.

2. The promise that no individual home - owner would have to pay a tax on capital gains tax on the sale of his home.

3. The pledge to "re-think" the plan of proclaiming a "valuation day", when every taxpayer would have to declare the worth at most of his possessions down to such items as stamp collections, paintings and other personal effects.

Heyday made these yards, the taxpayer should keep the pressure on the PM.

It takes only a few words in a letter, and no stamp, with mail addressed to parliamentarians — and the PM is an MP — going free of postal charge.

There are all sorts of issues in which the taxpayer as a "participating democrat" should have his say.

Consider some of the principals at stake in the implications of the White Paper on Taxation:

a. Should the tax system be supported by the White Paper, or be used to enhance federal power?

b. Is individual thrift and private initiative to be encouraged, as it now appears, by the White Paper?

c. Is small business as inconsequential as the White Paper seems to imply to the national economy and the way of private enterprise life?

d. Will greater reliance on federal bounties, inherent in the White Paper, further open the door to Government direction and even control of business?

e. Has the individual taxpayer any real voice right in either income or property, or, as the White Paper hints, does he keep his mouth shut and let it by the whim and grace of the Government?

f. Whose man, actually is he . . . his own or, to read the "small print" in the White Paper, a human property of

Two Groups 'Uneconomic . . . Quarrelsome'

The Case for One Farm Organization

If ever in the history of Canadian agriculture we need one strong and powerful farm organization to lead us, it is now. Large million dollar corporations moving into agriculture, the government pushing wasteful, useless programs on to the farmer, cost price squeezes, and a surplus in almost all produce are only a few of our problems. To top all this, we have two farm organizations that claim to lead and help us, but at the same time quarrelling, bickering, and insulting one another so that nothing is accomplished.

There is no reason why the two could not amalgamate their two small memberships and leaderships, and thus automatically draw in the thousands of farm people who do not want any part of either the National Farmers' Union or the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, as separate bodies. With this amalgamation there would be new interest, power and money to go to work for the family farm way of life.

One strong organization would immediately have the respect of governments, corporations and consumers, whereas now they do not. Governments want some kind of guidelines for agriculture to be presented to them, but so far there has not been a strong, responsible farm organization that clearly represents all the farmers and could do this.

Farm people need a powerful organization to represent them in many ways:

— to talk to government, to urge and demand policy and marketing.

— to bargain with corporations about both input and output.

— to hammer Marketing Boards into line, which is long overdue.

The setup we have now of two organizations is worse than

He Learned the Hard Way

Reflections of A Young Man

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

With regard to the Peace Festival, I think some sort of festival should be held but not to the extent of 100,000 people. If I could, I would like to go to a dance or concert for a couple of days, but I can't. It would be fine, I think, to hold a function of this sort but on a...smaller scale.

Also concerning the proposed hostel and the suggestion it might be supporting people with criminal records, a lot of people make better of themselves after getting into trouble, myself for one. In jail, one has a chance to realize all the things he does not have — the love, understanding, freedom.

What I mean to say is that if I have learned my lesson and want to go back where I belong, with the public. But how can I when people won't give me a chance? I'll only get into trouble again if I have nowhere to go or no one to turn to.

Fortunately, I do have somewhere to go on release.

Australia Seeks Teachers

Hamilton Spectator

Australian education authorities are still trying to enlist Canadian teachers. "We've got the children, we've got the schools, we've got the money," says New South Wales, "but we need many more teachers."

Teacher "raiding" is an old established practice. Several years ago, Ontario and Quebec have advertised regularly in British newspapers. Teachers' boards of those days were interested sharply, claiming that boards should be certain that the teachers they hired would fill the jobs first before offering their services to the best advantage, even when there is a scarcity of secondary school teachers.

A good proportion of teachers hired overseas take the job because they think it will break the monotony of their lives, increase their experience and broaden their outlook. They are not thinking of settling permanently in a new country.

Many return to Toronto a few years after going to Australia. Others hang on for a while, then return to Britain.

Crowd Storms Police Station

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A crowd — estimated at 200 teenagers and young people — thronged outside the city's police station last night after a youth was arrested for suspected drug trafficking.

A window in the headquarters building was broken by a stone thrown from the crowd.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today no charges will be laid as a result of the incident.

"But the young people will have to be responsible for their actions in future," he warned.

"Like everyone else they must obey the law and we're not going to tolerate this kind of thing in the city."

The incident had its beginning with an encounter between an off - duty Toronto policeman and a local youth, said the chief.

The Toronto officer was with friends in a downtown bar when they met the young man and indicated an interest in drugs.

Shortly after, the youth and officer met outside the hotel. The youth showed what appeared to be hashish, said Chief Crosbie, and the Toronto policeman identified himself.

When he saw the officer's badge the youth fled with the policeman in pursuit.

The chase led to the Second Stage — a Front Street drop-in centre for youth.

Cans and sticks were thrown as the police cruiser as it left the scene, said the chief and young people began converging on the police station.

He was therefore released without charge, said Chief Crosbie.

Picton Playgrounds Popular

PICTON (Staff) — Picton youngsters are "doing their own thing" at five summer playgrounds in Picton this week. More than 250 children registered Monday at the town's five supervised parks for organized holiday fun. Opening on Monday were Rotary and Benson parks, the Fairgrounds park, the Angus Lebeau Delhi Athletic Field and Queen Elizabeth school park. Recreation director Wayne Ring expects registrations soon will double.

All playgrounds opened with safety week featuring visitors from the Picton police and fire departments. Children from each of the parks will tour the fire hall on Thursday and Friday escorted by their playground leaders.

Youngsters are eagerly awaiting next week's program of events which promote playground week. A neighborhood night and a talent night will be staged with special invitations to all parents.

An over-all community recreation program this summer has been subdivided into sports and youth clubs. Membership in either division costs one dollar while membership in both totals $1.50. Family enrolment costs $2.50. Included in the sports program which will form competitive leagues are lacrosse, volleyball, basketball, soccer and possibly tennis. Members of the youth club, (ages 10 to 16) will participate in gymnastics, track and field, and water skiing. Registrations for membership in the two summer clubs will be conducted at Benson Hall weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Ontario Police, Firemen's Wages on Upswing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Chamber of Commerce says that to attract top men to the province's police and fire departments, municipalities must be willing to pay top dollar.

Among recommendations in a recent brief to the provincial government, the chamber suggests that because the job of the policeman or fireman is the same whether he is on duty in a big city or a small town, uniform minimum standards of pay should be established across the province.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that in the case of policemen, salaries range from a high of $10,110 yearly for a first-class constable in Toronto to a low of $6,000 for the same classification in Petrolia, near Sarnia.

North Bay, which last year reported a sharp increase in crime over a period of several months, pays a first-class constable only slightly more—$7,072.

Toronto firemen also are top on the Ontario scale at $8,900 yearly, under last year's contract. Lowest are Kingston firemen, who earn $7,560 under the 1969 contract.

Both departments are negotiating a 1970 contract. Kingston firemen want a 27-per-cent increase but have been offered only per cent in a one-year contract.

Second highest paid are firemen in the province's police district, who now earn $8,483 and next year will get $10,044.

A spokesman for the Police Association of Ontario said the average wage increase across the province this year was 13.3 per cent, including improved fringe benefits. He said the force's work 35 hours a week and have an hour for lunch.

The spokesman said the six-per-cent maximum annual wage increase recommended by the federal prices and incomes commission apparently has not been followed closely in contract negotiations.

In Windsor, where negotiations for the 1971 contract will begin in the fall, wages range from $8,344 for a fourth-class constable to $10,016 yearly for first-class. Top city firefighters earn $8,308, a 20.5-per-cent increase over last year's figure.

Police departments at Kitchener-Waterloo obtained a new two-year contract last May providing a 23-per-cent wage increase during the life of the contract.

This year first-class constables earn $8,580—27 per cent more than last year. In 1971 they will get $10,160—five per cent more than this year.

Firemen in the twin cities now earn $8,100 under the old contract, but are bargaining for a 18.5-per-cent increase this year that will give a first-class fireman $9,597.

Few comparisons were registered when Burlington's 71-man police force won a 13.7-per-cent wage increase, raising a first-class officer's pay to $9,301 this year.

Niagara Falls is just a few dollars under at $9,500 yearly, up 13.5 per cent from last year. Firemen there increased their wage package by 17.5 per cent to $9,100.

At Chatham, a new contract signed in March gave first-class officers a 21-per-cent boost to $9,400, just $100 more than Sarnia and Woodstock officers get this year.

In April, Point Edward first-class officers won a 12.5-per-cent increase to $9,200 while nearby St. Thomas officers managed 12 per cent for $9,150.

A two-year contract for St. Thomas firemen which came into effect Jan. 1, 1969, now is in its second year, providing first-class firemen with $8,756 a year. The two-year increase was 23 per cent.

Kingston officers now earn $8,185, up 8.1 per cent from last year.

In Orillia, a new two-year agreement was ratified in June providing for a 39-per-cent increase. This accounts for $8,000 this year for 6 first-class constables and will jump to $10,844 next year.

Officers in Wallaceburg won a 15-per-cent increase this year, to $8,880. The former police force at Midland, 38 miles northwest of Barrie in Georgian Bay, got a 15-per-cent increase for $9,500 for a first-class constable.

In Oshawa, officers now earn $8,179 under last year's contract. They are demanding a 28-per-cent increase this year to $9,994.

City firemen, who recently signed a two-year contract giving them a 34-per-cent increase, now earn $8,379 and next year will get $10,265.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Revolutions Aren't Made

Thoughts at Large:

People become the lack of "leadership," but what most people want is a leader who will go where it pleases them to be taken, not one who will persuade them to change their preconceived notion of the "right direction."

• • •

Those who look for "conspirators" or "outside agitators" as the causes of revolutionary movements should recall the words of Wendell Phillips more than a century ago: "Revolutions are not made; they come. A revolution is a natural growth as sin oak. It comes out of the past. Its foundations are laid far back."

• • •

Odd how speech can sometimes be an index of attitude: I have noted that most of the people who pronounce "Viet-nam" to rhyme with "ham" want the war to go on while those who pronounce it to rhyme with "balm" want it to end now.

"Obscenity" is not a disease of the feed mind, but merely a symptom of society's suppression and distortion of natural sexuality; when we grow up to our sexuality, in all its manifestations, then obscenity will disappear as a social phenomenon, and will lurk only in a few immature and pitiable perversions.

• • •

Militarism is the same the world over; the minute a man puts on a uniform he begins to resemble his enemy far more than either of them resembles his countrymen in civilian dress.

• • •

There is a vast difference between "looking up to greatness" and "hero-worship" — looking up to greatness means finding a model we can shape our actions upon, whereas hero-worship means expecting someone else to act out our frustrations, hopes, angers and dreams of power.

• • •

Using "human nature" as a limiting factor in what man-kind can achieve is the way of a better society ignores The-reau's far-sighted observation that "Man's capacities have never been measured; nobody yet knows what he can do by any precedents, so little has been tried."

• • •

The great vice of bellicosism is that it drives out true patriotism: people become so proud of their country vis-à-vis other countries that they neglect their sense of collective responsibility in maintaining the high standards that profess to the rest of the world.

• • •

When people who insist they "want the truth" begin to love it more than they fear it, only then will it be vouchsafed to them.

• • •

If we cannot understand that the statements "Everybody is equal" and "Everybody is unequal" are not contraries, but are both true and must stand together, we cannot begin to discuss politics intelligently.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Cold weather and the associated difficulties in starting your car are over for another five months or so — we sincerely hope. But those who may have purchased a new car, or those who may need a vehicle after arriving at the destination of a motoring vacation may still experience difficulty.

There's more to starting a car than simply turning the ignition switch until the car engine fires. A lot of motorists simply don't realize that a certain co-ordination between fuel and spark must be present before an automobile engine will start.

Leaner fuel mixtures to overcome exhaust emissions and specially designed carburetors and distributors require proper preparation of the automatic choke before, or in conjunction with, cranking the engine.

Starting procedures vary for different makes and models, and here, briefly, are the procedures recommended by the major manufacturers, compiled by Golf Canada:

American Motors: Depress gas pedal about halfway, then release. Turn ignition key and hold until engine starts.

Chrysler: Depress gas pedal to floor and release. Turn key and hold until engine starts.

Ford: 6 - cylinder engines — Depress gas pedal to floor and release. Depress pedal about half way, turn key and hold until engine starts. V-8 engines — Depress pedal to floor and release. Turn key and hold until engine starts. Flooding will likely result if the gas pedal is pumped in successive crankings. Wait for 15 to 30 seconds, then turn the key without depressing pedal.

(3) Never hold the ignition key in "start" position (engine cranking) for more than 15 seconds. Overheating and possible damage to the starter motor can result.

(4) Observe the correct polarity when starting engine with a booster battery or damage to the diodes of alternator - equipped cars will result. Connect positive terminal from booster battery to positive terminal of car battery.

(4) Don't race a cold engine with transmission in neutral. Contrary to popular belief prolonged idling is not the best way to warm a cold engine. Most manufacturers recommend that the engine be allowed to idle for one-half to one - and - one - half minutes, then driven off immediately, maintaining moderate speed until the engine reaches operating temperature.

1) Have mail held at the Post Office?

2) Take your OML membership card, car ownership certificate, insurance documents and driving licence?

3) Take an extra set of car keys and a record of their serial numbers in case of loss or theft?

4) See your bank manager about emergency funds or letters of credit?

5) Leave insurance policies, your will and other documents in a safety deposit box and advise your lawyer?

6) Give a neighbor your trip itinerary, your car licence number, color, year and model?

7) Notify your local police?

8) Stop milk and newspaper deliveries?

9) Arrange boarding for your pets?

10) Have your phone disconnected?

11) Disconnect electrical appliances and turn off the lights?

12) Turn off gas jets, including water heaters?

13) Remove food from the refrigerator and leave the refrigerator door open?

(4) Dispose of perishable foods?

15) Lock doors and windows?

16) Leave house keys with your neighbor in case of fire or other emergency?

Air-fare Increase Mixed Blessing

OTTAWA (CP) — Although air-fare changes proposed Tuesday by Air Canada and CP Air would mean higher costs on most domestic routes, passengers would get a break through new 14-to-35-day excursion fares included in the airline applications to the Canadian transport commission.

Even the Montreal-Toronto run, for example, the economy one-way fare would be increased to $28 from $25. The return fare would be $56.

But a traveller returning between 14 and 28 days would get a special return rate of $42.

Although commission analysts are still working on the figures in the airlines' applications, the trend would be to higher fares on all but heavy-traffic routes.

An airline spokesman said Wednesday reductions would only occur on the smaller lines "that nobody uses." Examples given were Toronto-Sault Ste. Marie, cut to $27 from $28, and Ottawa-Windsor, cut to $34 from $39.

Discounts for youths and people over 63 will be lowered to 60 per cent from 50 per cent of the economy fare.

Children between 12 and 21 flying with both parents would pay two-thirds instead of the present one-half the fare. Those under 12 would pay one-half instead of one-third the fare.

Another innovation would be a $5 surcharge for stopovers lasting more than four hours.

The new rates would go into effect Aug. 5 if approved by the commission's air transport committee. A decision will be made this month, officials say.

The new rates are based on a formula of 110 plus 1.7 cents a mile. Current fares are based on the total costs of running various types of aircraft, over various distances.

On short-haul routes the increase has been limited to $1 up to 150 miles and $2 up to 300 miles.

Regional airlines competing on the major routes, such as Toronto-Winnipeg, have filed applications along with the major carriers.

Following are some proposed economy fares, with present fares bracketed:

Calgary-Montreal $116 ($119); Edmonton-Toronto $165 ($96) Ottawa-Toronto $22 ($21); Toronto-Vancouver $128 ($138); Montreal-St. John's $87 ($86).

Subsidy Limit Voted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to limit at $20,000 annually the amount a farmer can be paid for not growing crops. The proposal is given a good chance of becoming law.

Chief targets of the move are high crop-subsidy payments to large corporations, banks, state governments and, other giant land holders who have received individual payments of more than $4,000,000 for keeping land out of production.

Senator James O. Eastland, who last year received $146,000 in subsidy payments on his Sunflower County, Miss., cotton plantation, voted against the measure which curbs payments to producers of wheat, cotton and feed grains.

Just a year ago the Senate refused, 53 to 34, to approve an identical subsidy limit. Spurred by sentiment the program has strangled the small family farms it was supposed to help and angered city dwellers, the Senate approved it, 49 to 35, Wednesday.

The vote highlighted action on the pending agricultural appropriations bill for fiscal 1971.

The subsidy curb is expected to win acceptance in the House which twice has passed similar measures only to see them killed in conference with the Senate.

Auto Workers List Demands

Pension After 30 Years Asked

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers have added a new item—the financial security of laid-off members—to a list of priority items to be taken up with the industry next week in new contract talks.

Leonard Woodcock, newly-elected president of the UAW, told a news conference Wednesday he is hopeful new wage pacts can be worked out without a strike.

"We fully intend to have a settlement with one of the Big Three—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—by Sept 14 and if not, we will have to take some other action," he said.

Contracts with the Big Three run out Sept. 15. The contract with American Motors runs out a month later.

Woodcock said the auto-makers overcharge for their cars, that dividends have risen twice as fast as payrolls since 1967, and that auto-makers can win the battle against foreign imports and still meet wage demands if they will make the effort.

Woodcock repeated the union's top three demands:

1. Optional retirement on a $300-a-month minimum pension after 30 years service regardless of age.

2. Elimination of a limit on cost-of-living wage clauses.

3. A substantial wage increase.

He also said that "financial support for our supplemental unemployment benefits program is grossly inadequate."

Th fund was created primarily to provide benefits to workers to supplement unemployment compensation when plants are shut down, such as at model changeover periods.

Workers with two years seniority receive 95 per cent of their salary in supplementary and unemployment compensation benefits during periods they are laid off.

Woodcock said that the "General Motors SUB plan in Canada already has been bankrupt. We have other substantial companies where SUB payments have been stopped because of funds insufficient to meet present benefits."

A UAW spokesman said later no other supplementary funds with the major auto companies were bankrupt, but that such funds in some other industries with which the union has contracts have been used up.

Those included, he said, McDonnell-Douglas Aircraft Corp., Continental Motors of Muskegon, Mich., Bendix Corp., I.T.V., Electrosystems, and Martin Marietta Corp.

Asbury Park Is Calm

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) — Calm returned to the racially-troubled resort city of Asbury Park today while black leaders discussed with the Negro population an agreement worked out during a marathon meeting.

Four days of racial disturbances left at least 165 persons injured—62 with shotgun pellet wounds—and at least 126 arrested.

Mayor Joseph Mattice and Willie Hamm, a Rutgers University administrative assistant and an unsuccessful candidate for the city council, emerged from the closed meeting just before midnight Wednesday night to announce that agreements had been reached.

Hamm, who said he represented the black community—40 per cent of the 20,000 persons who live here—chose to present the results of the discussions to the black populace before making them public. He would not say how they would be discussed.

Hamm entered the meeting, which included several other black leaders and the city council, with a list of 22 demands. They asked for better housing, more jobs, increased efforts at stopping use of narcotics and black representation on various civic boards.

Both men agreed that the meeting was a step toward peace.

While Hamm returned to the West Side, where four days of violence left 12 blocks of buildings either burned out or looted, state police patrols remained.

They made six arrests, mostly for curfew violations, Wednesday night, but most residents remained in their homes or on front porches.

The curfew has been in effect since Monday.

Prisoners in Cages Communist Criminals

SAIGON (Reuters) — The South Vietnamese government said today prisoners in so-called "tiger cages" on Con Son Island were "Communist criminals."

A statement from the national press centre neither denied nor confirmed press reports of bad prison conditions on the prison island, 168 miles southeast of Saigon in the South China Sea.

"But in war circumstances, owing to the poor facilities of our nation, everything at Con Son cannot be performed exactly as the government wishes," the statement said.

"Nevertheless there have been many efforts for improving the re-education system. This has been confirmed."

The statement said that of more than 9,000 "criminals" at present held on Con Son only about 400 for disciplinary measures are "temporarily detained in separate quarters."

"They are neither political prisoners nor prisoners-of-war but Communist criminals," the statement said.

Summer Jury Trial Arranged

TORONTO (CP) — A 48-member jury panel has been called to serve in mid-summer for the first time in York County history to keep a United States citizen from spending the summer in jail awaiting trial.

James Williams, 28, of Montgomery, Ala., is charged with robbing a drug store of $123. He has been in custody since last Oct. 16.

Judge Colin Bennett said Wednesday he ordered the jury panel because of the length of time Williams already has been in custody.

At Williams' last court appearance July 2, Judge Harry Waisberg said he would have to wait until September for a trial date because no jury was available. He was remanded until Sept. 8.

Film Found In Plane May Help

TORONTO (CP) — Police will develop undamaged camera film found in the wreckage of Sunday's plane crash on the off chance it will provide clues to the disaster in which 109 persons died.

Provincial police Insp. Fred Hunter said Wednesday that although it would be sheer luck if any film was taken during the last stages of flight of the Air Canada Super DC-8, the possibility cannot be ignored.

In any case "it certainly may be a help in identification of people on the plane," he said.

Police and department of transport investigators continued to probe the debris at the crash site four miles north of Toronto International Airport for clues both to the cause of the crash and to the identity of the victims, whose bodies are virtually unrecognizable.

Personal belongings including wallets, purses, watches and jewelry, were placed in boxes and taken to nearby Woodbridge Memorial Arena to be sorted and catalogued.

Meantime, teams of doctors, dentists and document experts worked at the arena—now serving as a temporary morgue—to identify the victims. The dead, mostly from Quebec and California, included 99 passengers and nine crew members.

Twenty-five bags of mail, most of them sodden, were recovered from the debris Wednesday. Insp. Hunter said the light bags were able to absorb the force of the impact.

There has been no indication how long the on-site investigation will continue.

Waldorf School Has No Competitive Incentives

TORONTO (CP) — At first glance, there seems little to distinguish the Toronto Waldorf school from any of the scores of elementary schools scattered over the city.

Located in a flat-roofed one-storey building, it has three grades, a kindergarten and nursery school, four full-time teachers and four specialist teachers. There now are 63 students.

But the school has no competitive incentives, no marks or prizes, no specialization or pressures to hurry students through childhood and into adulthood.

The concept is progressive, but it is not new.

The Toronto Waldorf school, the first and only one in Canada, was founded in 1968, but the first Waldorf school ever was into being in 1919.

Emil Molt, executive director of the Waldorf Astoria Cigarette Co. in Stuttgart, Germany, was convinced that reconstruction of society should begin at school.

He turned to Dr. Rudolf Steiner, an Austrian philosopher who had become known in Europe for his position on social problems and adult education, and asked him to found and direct a school for the children of his factory workers.

Dr. Steiner began selecting and training a faculty of teachers, giving them an intensive course of three lectures a day.

Within seven years after its opening in 1919 the Stuttgart school had 1,000 pupils. Soon afterwards, similar schools began springing up in other cities, first in Germany, then all over Europe, then in other continents.

The first Waldorf school in North America was founded in New York City in 1928. To date, there are 78 such schools scattered over four continents.

The principles of Waldorf education are:

—Allow the child to develop his individuality to the fullest possible extent;

—Give him an all-round education so that as adult he can make the best possible use of his particular gifts and talents;

—Give him an education that fits his various stages of development so that inner development can stay abreast with physical development;

—Let the same teacher accompany him through all years of grade school so that the teacher can get to know the child intimately and be a constant companion;

—Surround him with people and activities worth imitating.

"All this is terribly important for a child's development," says Alan Howard, a lanky, pipe-smoking Englishman who has headed the Toronto school since its founding.

"Why have adolescents gone for drugs, sex, rock the way they have? Because they have not been getting an education that corresponds to their stages of growth and deeper needs.

"The education we provide today is top-heavy—it's all in the head.

"What have we made of our kids? Little walking computers."

A public school teacher in England for most of his working life, Mr. Howard became interested in Dr. Steiner's philosophy when his two children were ready to attend school. They went to an English Waldorf school and Mr. Howard himself switched jobs to become a Waldorf teacher. He came to Canada two years ago to help found the Toronto school.

The Toronto Waldorf school, of necessity, had to be private, he said. It has no support from the public school system and has to raise funds through admission fees and special fund drives.

"What we are after is to let children have an education on the human humanitarian basis so they won't feel after leaving school that there is a lot of deadwood they have to cut out or that they have been brainwashed," he said.

"We use education as a means for the pupil to find himself so he will feel later that school has given him a picture of the world, which is a comprehensive picture, which has enabled him to see that basic and ultimate values are not property or position but social values."

When the children enter Grade 1, they meet the teacher who expects to accompany them through the next seven or eight years of school.

He begins each day with the main lesson—a two-hour period—given when the children are at their best. He keeps to one subject for three of four weeks, then turns to another.

This method has two chief purposes. Every morning for several weeks the children concentrate on a subject, for example history, English, arithmetic, geography or nature study. The teacher has the opportunity to go into the subject deeply and in a variety of ways.

After the class teacher leaves off, special teachers take over. The subjects are limited to complements of the main lessons and include music, eurythmy (an art of movement based on speech and music), wood-working and other handicrafts, languages and physical education.

Languages are taught because, teachers say, the small child is a natural linguist and can readily master songs, poems and games in French and German. Grammar is left until later.

The Experts Say

Birthday Party Food Should Be Familiar

MONTREAL (CP) — When children go to a birthday party they like to be able to recognize the food as being exactly what they eat at home every week.

Mothers with long experience in giving parties for the under-eight group agree, however, that a birthday cake, preferably chocolate, is essential. If the food budget is limited, the cake can stand alone as a treat.

One mother of three says she always bakes her own cakes.

"I've stopped buying birthday cakes for $2.25, those with rosettes on the corners. They go stale overnight and, even fresh, taste as if made with water instead of milk."

Better pastry shops charge $5 and up for a cake decorated to order.

"You do that for your first child's first party, but not again," another mother commented.

But Jacqueline Cernak, washing of four, finds children often eat the cupcakes, then ask: "Where's the birthday cake?"

Sandwiches and hot dogs are welcomed with equal enthusiasm. Sandwich fillings, for the most part, should be plain. Peanut butter with jelly, egg without onions and honey are the most popular.

Cut a little seal to the food tray, one mother suggests cutting sandwiches in fancy shapes with cookie cutters, or rolling them in pinwheels.

Potato chips and cheese straws rate high, as do soft drinks, especially orange. Ginger ale, while acceptable, is not first choice, with swinging youngsters these days.

Some nutrition-minded mothers advise fruit punch or chocolate milk instead of pop. To make the former appealing, add soda water to make it bubble. A clever hint is to: Chocolate milk is improved if, using a blender or rotary beater, it is whipped up to resemble a milk shake. Add a fluff of beaten egg white and sugar on the top and sprinkle with shaved chocolate.

Decorations can be quick and simple. Turn a hamburger into a turtle by adding a carrot curl for a tail and slivers of pickle for head and feet.

Or place a scoop of ice cream on a plate, top it with an inverted cone and add raisin eyes and cherry nose for a happy-faced clown.

A tasty low calorie meal was provided by two members of the Moira Belle Tops at the last regular meeting of the Chapter held at the recreation centre, which was appreciated by all.

Members decided to disburse with lengthy meetings during July and August except for weigh - ins during the hours of 6.30 and 7.45. Oshawa Boy Establishes A World Record

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — It took 11-year-old Leonard Swartz 1¼ weeks, but when he finished he had established a world record.

In what?

"Our teacher got a perception bag and we all had to pick a project out of it to do," he said. "I picked this particular one."

So he decided to make an extra good job out of it and beat the world record.

The record was established by Shirley Kempster of England, who put 308 items into a matchbox much larger than Leonard's. Her record in a matchbox the same size as Leonard's would have been only 152 items.

When Leonard checked on his mother's kitchen, he took a piece of fish, a bread crumb, a peel from an orange, a kernel of corn, one piece of cheese, an apple seed, a piece of celery, a grain of coffee and a piece of chicken skin.

Then Leonard went on to prowl through the house, picking up a bristle from a brush, one strand of cotton, one hair, a paper clip, a postage stamp, a sliver of wood, a piece of sandpaper, a photo corner and a square of film.

The other items, including an ochlocan, came from outside.

An ochecan?

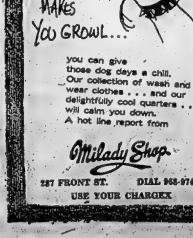
Gospel Ministry Ordains Pastor

Earle Nelson Wanamaker was recently ordained as a pastor in the Gospel Ministry by the Hilda and Golden Prairie Churches of the Greater Alberta Baptist Association at a service held in the Hilda Church with the Rev. I. H. Schmuland, Temple Baptist Church, Medicine Hat, presiding.

Rev. E. Wanamaker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wanamaker of Frankford. The Wanamakers have five children, Eric, Ivan, Jo-Anne, Janis and Lynn.

Rev. C. T. Semple, Grace Baptist Church, Medicine Hat read the scriptures and led in prayer. A personal friend of the Wanamakers, the Rev. B. Voss, Emmanuel Baptist Church, Morris, Manitoba preached the ordination sermon, "The Man God Uses".



Dr. E. Wahl, President Emeritus, North American Baptist College, Edmonton led in the ordination prayer. Dr. William Starbuhn, district secretary of the North American Baptist general conference, gave the charge to the churches and the ordained Rev. Wanamaker to the Baptist ministry.

More than 250 friends and guests attended.

Rev. Wanamaker received his early schooling at the Bethel Public School, Toronto. During his late teens he enrolled in the Emmaus Bible Correspondence School, Toronto and two years later he enrolled at the same school as a student from 1945-47.

The Burnbrae Presbyterian Church called him to serve as pulpit supply in 1956. While serving the Foxboro, Roslin, Fuller Churches as pulpit supply they confronted him with a call and he became pastor from 1958-63. During 1961-62 he undertook studies at Albert College, Belleville.

Experiment At School Successful

TORONTO (CP) — The Fieldingdale Road public school at 36 North York has become known as "the hugging school," thanks to a unique experiment.

It began last September when Principal J. J. Montgomerie gave instructions for teachers to show warmth, love and understanding to the children.

Dorothy Hart, school guidance counsellor, said: "It was the first time I'd ever heard a principal come out with a real, lovely, Christian, charitable attitude."

The project, in which teaching of hands and hugging is a common classroom occurrence, aroused concern among some parents when they heard of it first on an educational television show.

"I don't want strangers hugging my kids," said one mother.

"We don't employ strangers," said the principal at a meeting between staff and parents held to outline the project.

"I think it's possible to love every child," she said. "Some times it's hard, and some times but you love people for themselves, not for their behavior."

Teachers like Mrs. Forsythe have always shown affection to the children, said Mr. Montgomerie. What he did was make it a matter of school policy, breaking down the old professional maxim that it's a mistake to get too involved with the children.

Reserve teacher Candy Young said she felt "there are horrible children that totally involved."

Mr. Montgomerie said: "When you get involved and the kid doesn't make it, you feel you've failed.

"But you've got to learn from the experience, and if you learned something, it wasn't a failure."

Accepts $500 Cheque Then Reneges on Bet

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Four months ago my husband bet me $500 I could not give up smoking. I knew it was an ill disguised bribe, but I had been wanting to quit cigarettes for a long time and I never had the will power. This was just the incentive I needed so I accepted. He handed me the cheque 99 days later, which was our agreement.

Two weeks ago I received a phone call from Mom saying Dad had suffered a massive heart attack. I boarded the next plane and headed for Houston. The man seated next to me offered me a cigarette. I took it.

I stayed with Mom for a week. Dad passed the crisis and I smoked a pack of cigarettes every day I was there. I decided to quit smoking the minute the plane landed in Atlanta, and I did. But my conscience is bothering me. Do I owe my husband $500? After all, I did quit. What do you say? — GRINDED.

* * *

DEAR G.: You quit, all right, but you started again. In my book you should return the $500. But ask your husband to put the $500 back on the line for a second bet. And this time decided together that quit means permanently.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your "forgive and forget" philosophy needs remodelling. And your additional counsel — "especially if it's the first time" — should narrow the field somewhat, but in my case it didn't help. My husband is still with his first affair. I have been patiently waiting for three years hoping it would "burn itself out."

My options are pitifully few, to be frank. I must forgive even if can't forget. Divorce is out of the question for a long list of reasons, starting with religious, and ending with financial. What does a mother say to her teen-aged daughters when they begin to ask leading questions? It seems to me that they are becoming cognizant of their father.

Since you are the lady with all the answers, please tell me what am I supposed to do, Ann Landers? — OSTRICH WHOSE CHILDREN HAVE GOOD VISION.

* * *

DEAR OS.: You're supposed to protect the heel — even though he doesn't deserve it. Hold up your head and cover for him.

If your children learn the truth from someone else, they will have the satisfaction and the emotional support that comes with the knowledge that their mother is a loyal woman who has real class. And if you want a good definition of class, it's the ability to conduct yourself with grace under pressure.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You mentioned in your column recently that the first prize for the most "earth-shattering" question went to the girl who asked if her high school ring should be worn with the emblem facing herself or the person who would see it. The girl didn't ask for a prize. She asked for an answer and you failed to give her one. If you didn't know the answer, why didn't you say so? Here it is and I hope you'll pass it on.

Before graduation the emblem is worn facing the wearer. After graduation the emblem is worn facing outward. The switch is made the day of graduation. — SUNNY: CLASS OF '68.

DEAR SUN: I learned something today. Thank you very much.

Interesting Tips in Keeping Weight Down

By DORIS CLARK

If you feel overweight — Thinner means healthier. 25 per cent overweight means 30 per cent less chance of living out a normal life span: more vulnerable to heart disease, diabetes, cerebral hemorrhage.

— Avoid crash diets.

— Eat balanced meals.

— Satisfy the psyche as well as the palate. A small portion of a sweet dessert can be satisfying.

— Snacks count-up. If you must snack, adjust the meal count in proportion.

— From The Dieter's Daily Dozen, CCB Outlook.

Dear Doris: I found out that the boy who has been taking me out thinks that I didn't like him because I didn't talk much. He said he was going to come over and have a heart - to - heart talk with me. He said he wanted to find out how I felt about him.

I didn't say "I like you a lot" which I do — but said that I didn't really know what to think. Someone interrupted us then and when he drove me home he said that he didn't have a very good talk and stupid me said, "No, I guess we didn't." Then I said good night.

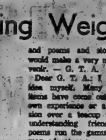
Now I think he really thought all along that I don't like him. He's going to the city this week, and was going to phone him, but I thought he would probably think I am chasing him. I'm 17, he is 21. The way I act — I can't figure it out. Am I thinking I am nuts. — No Talker.

Dear No Talker: All the signs were there. He continues to take you out, he wants you to talk to him, and all you do is withdraw into your shell.

It is one thing to show in some tangible way that you like the person who takes you out; chasing a fellow is quite different.

I think your friend has a friendly overture coming to him from you. Unless you hear up you are going to end up talking to yourself.

* * *



Dear Doris: I would some day like to see you put a little booklet together with all your cute little sayings and poems and stories. It would make a very nice souvenir. — G. T. A.

Dear G. T. A.: I like the idea myself. Many of the items have come out of my own experience as a homemaker. Others I've picked up from an understanding friend. The poems run the gamut of humor to inspirational.

But — a book? Sounds more like a job for retirement. Right now there don't seem enough hours in the day to answer my pile of letters — from you, dear readers!

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Variations for Donna's Sugar Cookies

By MARY MOORE

"Cookie time, Donna."

This is all Betty would have to say to 11-year-old Donna to start her beating up a batch of cookies. Now Donna is 14, and an old hand at cookie baking. Her mother, my secretary Betty, brought me some of her sugar cookies. This batch was made without the cookie jar was empty and Donna had run up to the corner for a package of store cookies. "Oh Mom these aren't as good as homemade" and got to work and made her own.

DONNA'S SUGAR COOKIES
(4 dozen 3")

½ cup margarine
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. nutmeg
1 cup granulated sugar
1 large egg
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. baking soda
1 level tbsp. milk

Into heater bowl measure margarine, salt, nutmeg, sugar, eggs and vanilla and beat until blended — about 2 min. on med. speed. Remove heater. Sift dry ingredients over; add milk and mix until blended.

Drop from silver teaspoon (using another teaspoon to help slide off the batter) onto greased cookie sheets 2" apart to allow for spreading. Flatten cooking by stamping with flat-bottomed glass dipped in sugar to give a sugary finish. (Wet glass once with water for first cookie only, to make sugar stick.) OR if desired sprinkle with colored sugar or colorful cookie "sprinkles". Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 7-10 min. until edges begin to brown. With spatula remove to wire cookie racks immediately.

VARIATIONS:

1) Omit nutmeg and sprinkle cookies with cinnamon before baking.

2) Press three raisins (rinsed and drained to prevent scorching) into centre of each cookie before baking.

3) Press a split almond or chocolate or butterscotch chip into centre of each cookie before baking.

CN Chef Retires After 31 Years Service

HALIFAX (CP) — Jack Wilmot of Lants, N.S., has retired after 31 years service as a chef and instructor of chefs for Canadian National's dining car service. Now he's making plans for a trip across Canada to visit a son and two daughters — by train, of course.

Gas, infra-red ovens and microwaves have changed dining cars an "awful lot" since the 1940s, says Mr. Wilmot, and so has the elimination of the European service where the waiter brought you everything on a silver platter.

Passengers, he recalled, spent two or more hours in a dining car because they took their meal. Now it can be a matter of 45 minutes or less.

Mr. Wilmot's culinary art drew the admiration of the famous.

Nova Scotia-born industrialist Cyrus Eaton had the CN "lean" his services to him so that he might cook for guests at the Eaton summer home at Blandford, N.S. The "loan" arrangement worked for nine summers from 1954 to 1963.

Mr. Wilmot recalls that among guests he served at Blandford was the first man to enter space, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin.

Orphans' Mound Staff Mows Down 17 Lions in 22-4 Rout

The action was hot and heavy in the Belleville Minor Baseball Wednesday night as four games were played in three divisions.

Belleville's East Hill bantams found their Trenton Gilbert Hotel opponents too much to handle as they dropped it 8-3 decision. In tadpole action Eric Watkins' Eaze wiped Motorlead Chrysler 9-8 and tyke games saw Albamac 100 beat Harvey's Hamburgers 12-0 while the Orphans were bombing the Lions Club 22-4.

Jim Conley fired the Gilbert Hotel win fanning six batters and walking seven. Hitting support in the form of a triple by Don Armstrong and a double by Mitch Yost supplied the winning number of runs.

Peter Molaski went the distance for the East Hill batting eight and walking only four. Terry Ray was the best at the plate against Trenton cranking a homer and two singles.

John Dent pitched the Watkin's 9-8 tadpole victory striking out 14 Motorlead batters and walking only four. His home run and Brian Calbury's double were the only extra base hits by the Georgetown.

Steve Belch and Brad Begbie fanned 12 men in defeat while walking only three. Mark Davey had a homer and a single to lead Motorland at bat.

Greg McEachern and Gary Stapley's 13 strikeout performance led the Albamobs tykes to their 12-9 victory over Harvey's. Stapley contributed his fine play at the plate by punching a homer, single, and two doubles.

Mike Burke and Andy Lepeniete were tagged with the loss giving up 13 walks and striking out six batters. Tony Simard's triple and single was the best effort for Harvey's.

Peter Hall fanned six pitching with a home run, single and two doubles.

Barry Riddell and Howie Coons took the loss for the Lion's Club fanning 11 batters and walking three. Howie Coons had two singles to lead his team against the Orphans.

Read Makes Point

Reid left little doubt to their right to first place in the South Hastings Baseball League standings as they clobbered Plane's Concrete 12-3 last night. The two teams had been tied for top spot in the standings.

A six - run third inning by the winners erased a 2-0 Plane's lead and opened the door for the runaway victory.

Three infield errors, a scratch single and Ken Abbatte' grand slam homer accounted for the Read markers.

Bob Chappell started for the losers, giving way to Garnie Adams and Bernie Coughlin. The threesome were touched for ten Read hits, walking four and striking out nine batters.

Frank Farrell kept the Plane's hitters off - balance for most of the night, throwing six - hit ball and walking one man. He fired third strikes past five batters.

Clutch hitting and superior fielding told the tale for the winners, with leftfielder Ed Lauder pulling off the game's defensive gem with an over-the-shoulder grab of a seventh - inning blast.

Ken Abrams collected six RBI's for the winners with a grand slam homer and a double. Paul Hanley cracked two doubles and a single and Gerald Brennan added a pair of singles. The other hits went to Larry Coffey and Pete Enright.

Parsons Still Perfect

The Belleville Parsons proved of their league dominance over CFB Trenton Wednesday and retained their undefeated status as they whipped the Flyers 6-0.

With the regular season a little over half - finished the Parsons have failed to lose a game and hold down first place in the Bay of Quinte Soccer League.

Against CFB the Parsons had control of the game and held the Flyers in their own end the majority of the 90 minutes. A stout Flyer defence kept the score as low as it was and excellent goal tending by Parsons netminder Chris Humphrey, back from a four-week layoff with an injury, kept the Flyers off the score-board.

Kevin Kirby opened the scoring early in the game, heading in a shot at the eight - minute mark of the first half. Seventeen minutes later Dennis Jones made the score 2-0, Lloyd Read's penalty shot goal and John O'Neill's score with two minutes left in the half stretched the Parson's lead to 4-0 after 45 minutes of play.

16 Bantam Teams Entered

Golden Bat Tourney Only Needs One Good Call

By ERIC EMERSON
(Staff Sportswriter)

The most important call of the Belleville "Golden Bat" Bantam Baseball Tournament won't be one made by any of umpires-in-chief, Ed Christopher's staff, but rather a long distance decision by the weatherman.

"Rain is the only thing that could really ruin us," says tourney chairman Ron Lupenette. "With a tournament this size it's hard to re-organize it for another date. But the long range forecast for this weekend calls for fair weather — so we're keeping our fingers crossed."

Joining the chairman in maximizing discouraged digits will be close to 40 volunteer workers involved, some of whom have put close to six months' effort into the event.

"It seems like it's almost a year-round job," says Lupenette. "You have to clear the date with the EOBA, send out your invitations to the various teams and arrange things like fields and billets."

The work paid off last year, when the first tournament proving to be an unqualified success, and indications are that this year's could be even better.

A total of 16 teams are entered in the three-day competition, which gets under way at six o'clock Friday night, and another four or five have had to be turned away, Five Toronto teams are entered, along with clubs from as faraway as Welland, Brampton and Hamilton.

Among the pre-tournament favorites are Scarborough Village, which won the "A" title last year, Peterborough, Toronto Legion, Hamilton and Lasalle.

Play will be held on four Belleville area diamonds: Parkdale, YMCA, CNDRA and Carnahan. First round losers will drop to the "B" tournament with the wining teams remaining in the fight for the "A" title. The winners in each section will meet in the grand championship game, held at Parkdale at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Belleville's Branch 99 Legion Bantams, defending "B" titlists, will play their first game 6 p.m. Friday at Parkdale.

Grand champions this year will receive the "Golden Bat", lathed from a 35 - pound slab of maple and imbedded with gold lettering. Trofia is the first year that the award will be presented.

Champions of the "A" section will receive the Ross Bennett trophy, along with medallions and crests, while the "B" winners will be awarded the Branch 99 Legion trophy, along with individual crests.

The social aspects of the weekend will be in evidence Saturday night with a dance being held at the Park Dale Community Centre.

Other volunteer workers will include the 16 hosts, each of whom will be assigned to one team for their stay in Belleville.

Dusting Him Off

Belleville Branch 99 Legion bantam, Gary Christopher puts the tag on teammate Terry Ray in a final tuneup before the "Golden Bat" Bantam Baseball Tournament this weekend. A total of 16 teams from across southern Ontario will be competing in the three-day Belleville tournament, with the host team playing their first game at 6 p.m. Friday at Park Dale field.

Golden Mile Get Distance

Net Gain

Doug Grant, low net winner of the Belleville Real Estate Board Annual Tournament, gets congratulations from consolation winner Joyce Smith, who carded 190 at the Bay of Quinte course yesterday. Also pictured is low gross winner Jim Wilson, whose 85-stroke total was best in the field of 75 golfers. Grant carded a 72 to win the Victoria and Grey Trust Trophy for the low net performance.

Lefties Meet August 17

August 17 will find the St. Thomas Golf and Country Club and the Sunningdale Country Club of London overrun with golfers swinging from the left side as they host the fourth annual Ontario Amateur Southpaw Golf Championship.

Approximately 206 golfers will be vying for the trophies offered by the sponsoring Corby/Wiser's Distilleries. The Corby Cup goes to the Class "B" higher handicap winner and the Wiser Trophy to the winner in the Class "A" low handicap category.

An added attraction will be the appearance of former Canadian Open winner Bob Charles.

Meads Making Run for First

Mead Johnson kept their first place hopes alive while strengthening their second position standing by dumping U.I.C. 12-8 in an Industrial Softball League game Wednesday.

Larry Marshall fired third strike past 12 U.I.C. batters and gave up only six hits in picking up the victory.

A home run, double and single by Ray Frake and two singles and a triple by Marshall were the big shots for Meads.

Kingsley gave up 14 hits in defeat for U.I.C. while fanning three and walking one.

Two singles each by Chase and Ford plus singles from Collins and Cassidy were the only other hits off Marshall.

Kingston had pulled ahead with five runs in the top of the final inning, before the home team knotted the contest.

Sue Morton and Barb Breadner looked after the pitching duties for Belleville, giving up a total of 15 hits.

Irma Barbernick paced the 18-hit home team attack with two doubles and a single. Sue Morton slammed two doubles, while Linda Prudden and Evelina Hill connected for homers and Kathy Brown and Verna Hill had singles.

Bermuda Bound

The fortunes of holy wedlock shone brightly on Mr. and Mrs. Roy McDannold of Napanee over the weekend as they won the annual Mr. and Mrs. Tournament in Cobourg.

Trevino Up

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Lee Trevino of El Paso, Tex., still fuming about a decision made Wednesday, went out today and slammed into the early lead in the second round of the British open golf championship with a pair of 69s for a 138 total.

Trevino's eight-under-par total put him in the clubhouse with a one-stroke lead over Tony Jacklin of Britain, the defending champion and recent U.S. Open winner who followed an opening five-under-par 67 with a disappointing 72.

Both Jacklin and Trevino had completed before starting out today about the decision made Wednesday to have golfers pick up where they left off when rain halted play. Trevino and Jacklin, therefore, had to complete their first rounds before beginning second-round play.

67 Only Good for Third

Jacklin Fails to Parlay Opening 29

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (CP) — Defending champion Tony Jacklin of Britain completed his rain-halted first round in the British Open golf championship today with a five-under-par 67, after picking up the ball on the 16th hole for a one-stroke penalty.

He lost his chance for a course record after shocking a remarkable 29 on the first nine holes Wednesday before a downpour halted play with 38 golfers still to be heard from.

The 26-year-old U.S. Open champion end up in the bushes with his second shot on the 16th when play was called off to the wails of the twilight storm that turned St. Andrews from a pussycat into a tiger.

Jacklin completed the first 13 holes eight strokes under par. He had a good chance of setting a championship record round when he set out to complete the 18 holes this morning—but first he had to decide what to do about being in the bushes.

After talks with the chairman of the championship committee, Wilbur Muirhead, Jacklin decided to pick up under a one-stroke penalty.

Jacklin went back 35 yards behind the hillock of grass bushes and dropped his ball. He was blind to the green from his new position, but he wedged over the hillock and on to the green, the ball ending 18 feet from the pin.

The champion's putt for a par five missed by an inch, and he was down in six, dropping his first shot of the round.

Another Briton, Neil Coles, equalled the record of 65 Wednesday to hold the first-round lead among the golfers who finished before the downpour.

One shot behind, with 66, was Tommy Horton, also of Britain.

Officials allowed those on the course when the storm broke Wednesday to mark their balls and complete play today, a big break for Jacklin, who otherwise would have had his brilliant first-nine 29 scrubbed.

"That was the best nine I ever played," said Jacklin. "I'll always remember it."

The fickle weather turned after a dozen of the world's best golfers benefitted from perfect conditions to conquer the 6,951-yard, par-72 links.

Stretched out behind Coles, Horton and Jacklin were such greats as Americans Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Doug Sanders, and Australia's Peter Thomson, tied with 68s.

In between were unexpected challengers Floreniino Molinari of Argentina, Harold Henning of South Africa, and England's John Richardson and Maurice Bembridge, all with 67s.

The other par-busters such as Gdy Brewer of the United States with 69, and a large contingent with 70 and 71, were in no real position to complain, knowing the Open isn't won on any one day except the last one.

"I think the whole round should have been rubbed out," he said.

"By deciding that players continue from the place where their balls lay was not fair. It meant we had to play one round on a different course and in different weather."

Lee Trevino, a Texan, completed his round for a 68 and supported de Vicenzo's view.

"We should all have started from scratch today," he said.

Moody, the former U.S. Open champion, had a 71 and was dissatisfied. Gary Player at 74 was keeping his thoughts to himself.

Two oldtimers on a sentimental journey were clearly unlikely to get past tonight's cut-off. Playing together, Bobby Locke and Denny Shute, chairperson of a past sev, shot a 75 and an 82 respectively but conceded that they didn't really expect much better.

Canadians Bleary

EDINBURGH, Scotland (CP) — Canada's team to the British Commonwealth Games arrived Wednesday, bleary-eyed after a transatlantic flight in two jetliners from Montreal, a three-hour bus drive over narrow, winding roads from Prestwick. The Canadian team of 168 athletes, second only to England in size among the 42 participating countries, was officially welcomed by a military pipe band. More than 1,800 athletes and officials and 1,000 representatives will be on hand for the Games July 16-25. More than 300,000 spectators are expected to view the Games.

Royal Sendoff

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The baton carrying the Queen's good wishes to Commonwealth Games officials at Edinburgh, Scotland, was started on its way Wednesday from this Northwest Territories capital. The Games open July 16. The Queen's message, to say, as it is called, began in her presence at Yellowknife's grassless Petitot Park with the logging participation of teams of Canada's lumber jack many. Starting the baton on its way from the platform where the Royal Family had assembled were Canadians Harry Jerome and Abigail Hoffman and Jamaican George Kerr.

Gayford Sixth

LA BAULE, France (Reuters) Marcel Rozier of France won the 11th event, a time trial, at the world jumping championship Wednesday, going around with no faults in 1:18.8 minutes. Tom Gayford of Gromley, Ont., was sixth riding Dreamy Joe. Jason Lefebvre of France, riding Troubador, won the 13th non-qualifying event with 1,316 points. South Africa Stays

PARIS (AP) — The International Lawn Tennis Federation easily defeated a Hungarian proposal Wednesday to expel South Africa, a move that would have barred South African players from all international competition. Federation president Dan A. Barnett of Australia said most delegates were swayed by a letter from the non-white South African National Lawn Tennis Union pleading on behalf of 16,000 colored players not to be barred from international tennis.

Finley Has Week

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There is a difference of opinion today over whether or not Charles O. Finley failed to meet the $4,500,000 purchase price for Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League. Trans National Communications Inc. contends Finley, owner of the baseball Oakland Athletics of the American League, failed to come up with the money at what they said was the deadline Wednesday. Finley said the money is in the bank and that he expects to close the deal today. In Montreal, Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL which had approved the sale of the Seals by Trans National to Finley, said: "I don't know what they're talking about." Finley, Campbell said, has until next Wednesday, July 15, to come up with the money. He said that was the date agreed on at the NHL meeting in June.

Women Hit Woodbine

TORONTO (CP) — Joan O'Shea of New York City will become the first female jockey to race in Ontario when she rides impetous Red today in the third race at Woodbine Racetrack. Mrs. O'Shea, who has two seconds and a third in nine races in the United States this season, is also scheduled to ride Amanda's Treasure Friday. Although women have ridden at almost every major racetrack in the United States and in every other province in Canada with thoroughbred tracks, Mrs. O'Shea will be the first woman jockey in Ontario. Eric Barber, an Ontario Racing Commission steward, said the commission granted Mrs. O'Shea's licence after her application form was received Tuesday. "She holds licences in Florida and New York and I expect a sterling performance," said Barber.

Tomlin's Romp Last Straw for Riders

TORONTO (CP) — A spectacular interception and 110-yard touchdown run by Jim Tomlin capped a 39-8 exhibition football victory for Toronto Argonauts over Ottawa Rough Riders before a crowd of 29,913 at CNE Stadium Wednesday night.

The Rough Riders defeated Toronto in last season's Eastern Football Conference finals. They were threatening from the Toronto six-yard line late in the final quarter when Tomlin, a speedy defensive halfback from McMillen, Tex., picked off a pass by Tom Dimuzio on his own goal line and went the length of the field.

Mel Profit, Mike Schmiesing and Gwen Cooper scored the other Toronto touchdowns. Tom Johansen converted all but Tomlin's touchdown and added two singles on missed field goals.

Dimuzio, who replaced a tired Gary Wood in the fourth quarter, collected Ottawa's only touchdown on a nine-yard run.

Toronto's Gerry Sternberg contributed Ottawa's other two points in the first quarter when he retreated into his own end zone on a punt by Bill Van Burkleo.

Ottawa outrushed Toronto 209 yards to 127, but the Argonauts rolled up 329 yards passing to 138 for the visitors. The net yardage favored the Toronto club 338 to 267.

Toronto had 21 first downs to 17 for the Rough Riders. Argos led 9-3 at the half.

Stamps Run Down Eskies

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders tossed some good passing kicks a powerful running attack to throttle Edmonton Eskimos 31-10 in a Western Football Conference exhibition game before 16,611 fans Wednesday night.

The Stampeders ran for more than 200 yards to successfully open their exhibition campaign with Hugh McKinnis, a job-hunting rookie halfback from Arizona State, turning in 75 yards and a touchdown.

Gerry Shaw caught a five-yard pass from Jerry Keeling for Calgary's other touchdown, as the Stampeders fashioned quarter leads of 7-0, 8-3 and 13-3. Larry Robinson chipped in with 24- and 25-yard field goals, two of converts and a single.

Edmonton was ineffectual under the guidance of quarterbacks Corey Colebour and Don Trull, collecting only Dave Cutler's 43-yard field goal in the last minute of the first half. They didn't get rolling until Rusty Clark took over signal-calling duties against a second-string Calgary defence later in the fourth quarter.

Clark, from the University of Houston, completed four passes for 65 yards as Edmonton marched 80 yards to a two-yard touchdown drive by Henry King. Cutler was good with the convert.

Weaver Partial to Three Oriole Hurlers for All-star Lineup

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Manager Earl Weaver named three pitchers of his Baltimore Orioles' staff—Dave McNally, Pete Cuellar and Jim Palmer—to the American League all-star team Wednesday after manager Gil Hodges selected only Tom Seaver from his New York Mets for the National League side.

Weaver picked only starters for the American League team that meets the Nationals Tuesday night in Cincinnati.

In addition to the three Orioles, Weaver added New York Yankees Mel Stottlemyre and Fritz Peterson to the nine-man staff. He selected five left-handers and four right-handers.

Clyde Wright, who recently pitched a no-hitter for California Angels, and Sam McDowell, Cleveland Indians' strikeout ace, joined McNally, Cuellar and Peterson as the southpaws.

In addition to Palmer and Stottlemyre, the other right-handers picked by Weaver were Jim Hunter of Oakland Athletics and Jim Perry of Minnesota Twins.

Weaver said he did not pick any relief men because there would be "five or six that are qualified to be placed in the same category."

"I made up my mind that the staff would consist of starters whose records, if taken away from their respective clubs, would lower the clubs considerably in the standings."

If Weaver should elect to start one of his three Orioles, he would have four Baltimore players in the lineup. Boog Powell at first base, Frank Robinson in the outfield and Dave Johnson—named by Weaver to replace the injured Rod Carew of Minnesota—are the three starting Orioles.

Other starters selected in the two vote were Bill Freehan of Detroit Tigers, catcher, Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox and Frank Howard of Washington Senators in the outfield, Luis Aparicio of Chicago White Sox at shortstop and Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota Twins at third base.

Hodges' eight-man pitching staff includes rookie Wayne Simpson and Jim Merritt of Cincinnati Reds.

Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals, Gaylord Perry of San Francisco Giants and Boyd Wilhelm, the veteran knuckleball relief ace for Atlanta Braves, joined Simpson and Seaver as the five right-handers.

Clocksmith is already secured of two men in the starting lineup. Tony Perez at third base and Johnny Bench as the catcher. Simpson, with a 13-1 record through Tuesday's games, is a possible starter.

Other National League starters included Atlanta's outfield pair of Hank Aaron and Rico Carty, Chicago's second short combo of Glenn Beckert and Don Kessinger, St. Louis's Richie Allen at first base and San Francisco's Willie Mays in centre field.

The pitchers (won-lost records include Tuesday's games):

American League—Mike Cuellar, Baltimore, 10-5; Jim Hunter, Oakland, 12-5; Sam McDowell, Cleveland, 13-4; Dave McNally, Baltimore, 13-4; Jim Palmer, Baltimore, 12-5; Jim Perry, Minnesota, 12-6; Fritz Peterson, New York, 10-5; Mel Stottlemyre, New York 8-7; Clyde Wright, California, 12-3.

National League—Bob Gibson, St. Louis, 12-3; Jon Hoerner, Philadelphia, 5-3; Jim Merritt, Cincinnati, 14-4; Claude Osteen, Los Angeles, 11-7; Gaylord Perry, San Francisco, 12-4; Tom Seaver, New York, 12-4; Wayne Simpson, Cincinnati, 13-1; Boyt Wilhelm, Atlanta, 3-3.

McLain In $400,000 Hole

DETROIT (AP) — "A series of bad investments and over-extensions of a lot of things" resulted in his money problems, Detroit Tiger pitcher Denny McLain testified Wednesday at a bankruptcy hearing.

The pitching star filed bankruptcy papers June 9, showing a total of about $400,000 in debts. He said he had virtually no assets.

McLain's lawyer, Archie Katcher, asked for a stay in proceedings against McLain from creditors pending the work of a court-appointed trustee. Detroit lawyer Mjrion V. Bonds, in analysing McLain's affairs, Bankruptcy Court Judge Harry Hackett did not set a date for a future hearing.

McLain, meanwhile, said he was not going to talk about the fine against him for knocking balls into the stands at a league hitter in pre-game warmups.

McLain was charged $2.50 for each ball he hit into the stands July 2. Tiger manager Mayo Smith said McLain had been assessed a small amount last year for similar practices.

"It's not a fine," said Tiger general manager Jim Campbell. "We're just asking McLain to pay for the balls that he deliberately knocks into the stands."

Giants Gotta Have Hart!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JIM RAY HART

Jim Ray Hart is alive and well and wielding a big bat for San Francisco Giants.

The once-feared hitting star, sent to the Giants farm team at Phoenix earlier in the season, returned to the National League club Tuesday and enjoyed one of his finest games Wednesday night against Atlanta Braves after rebounding from a shoulder injury.

Called up to replace retired third baseman Jim Davenport, Hart equalled a 56-year-old league record by driving across six runs in one inning as the Giants pounded Atlanta 13-6.

Elsewhere, New York Mets opened up a 1½-game East Division lead over Pittsburgh Pirates by beating St. Louis Cardinals 7-3 as the Pirates fell 2-0 to Philadelphia Phillies, San Diego Padres defeated Cincinnati Reds 3-1, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Houston Astros 6-5 and Chicago Cubs split a twin bill with Montreal, winning the first game 8-1 and dropping the nightcap 5-4 in the Expos.

"It's great to be back," said Hart after his Wednesday night performance, which included a single, a double, a triple and a home run in five at bats.

The league record for runs batted in in one inning was set May 13, 1911, by Fred C. Merkle of the old New York Giants. The major league record is seven, by Edward Cartwright of St. Louis in 1890 when the American League was known as the American Association.

The 23-year-old Hart drove in seven runs Wednesday, the other coming in the third before he paced the Giants' 11-run fifth inning.

He homered with two on in his first trip to the plate in the fifth, then came back to smash a bases-loaded triple.

The Mets racked up their sixth straight victory, longest winning streak for the defending National League champs this season. Rookie Jon Singleton's third-inning homer with two on put the Mets out in front to stay after St. Louis had gone ahead 3-0.

Cincinnati's four-game victory string was stopped by the Padres, but the Reds still maintain an 8½-game West Division lead. San Diego's runs came in the third with Clarence Gaston and Ollie Brown hitting run-scoring singles.

The Dodgers exploded for five runs in the ninth to beat Houston with Manny Mota's pinch-double driving in a pair.

The Cubs' first-game victory over Montreal was highlighted by two-run homers by Ron Santo and Billy Williams. Jose Bocabella's pinch single drove in two runs in the eighth to give the Expos the nightcap triumph.

Oakland Swallows Twin Punch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland took a dose of Minnesota muscle but it wasn't nearly as hard to swallow as the tuna-bout trick Cleveland pulled on Washington.

A homer and three singles by Tony Oliva led Minnesota Twins to an 8-6 victory over the Athletics Wednesday night, completing a three-game series sweep.

And light-hitting Buddy Bradford walloped a grand-slam homer in the eighth inning that brought Cleveland Indians from behind for a 9-5 victory over Washington Senators.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday night Baltimore Orioles roared from behind to beat New York Yankees 9-8, Chicago White Sox nipped Milwaukee Brewers 3-1, Detroit Tigers shaded Boston Red Sox 3-2 and California Angels edged Kansas City Royals 3-2.

The Athletics knocked out Jim Perry with a ninth-inning rally that included Dave Duncan's three-run homer. But Ron Perranoski came out of the bullpen to nail own Perry's 13th victory.

Oliva had three singles, a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly, driving in four runs and scoring two.

Bradford, who carried a .189 batting average and two homers into Cleveland's game against Washington, exploded for his first career grand slam in the eighth inning as the Indians wiped out a 5-1 Senators' lead.

It was Cleveland's straight victory over the Senators.

Frank Robinson's second homer of the game started a three-run Baltimore rally in the ninth inning that moved the Orioles past the Yankees. Dan Buford, who had opened the game with a homer for the Birds, capped the winning rally with a two-out, two-run single.

The Yankees had come from behind to take the lead on eighth-inning homers by John Ellis and Curt Blefary.

Municipalities Want To Control Quarries

TORONTO (CP) — Rules governing gravel pits and quarries should be administered by municipalities in which the pits are located, a special committee representing four major municipal organizations told the Ontario government Wednesday.

The committee, in a brief to Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, also criticized government proposals for new legislation to control the establishment and extension of all pits and quarries in the province.

The government's mineral resources committee earlier had recommended removing entirely control over pits and quarries from municipalities not having an official plan with provincially-approved provisions.

"The significance of this proposal becomes apparent when we realize that less than one-quarter of the municipalities in the province are covered by official plans ..." the committee's brief said.

In effect, this would shift jurisdiction to the Ontario government, it said.

The committee representing the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves, the Ontario Municipal Association, the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario and the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities.

The committee brief also suggested that many of the shortcomings in the government report are because the 16-man mineral resources committee had four representatives from the quarry, mining and road building industries, and no municipal representatives.

The committee recommends that no pit or quarry operation should be started or extended without application to the local municipality for permissive zoning.

It said any bylaw granting such permissive zoning would be preceded by notifications to all interested authorities and by a public hearing and a decision by the Municipal Board

Oil Policy Threatened

Federal Authorities Trapped in Squeeze Play

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal authorities are trapped in a squeeze play by rival gasoline dealers that threatens to puncture the government's half-century, half-voluntary national oil policy.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene declined comment Wednesday.

The oil policy, toughened up with new gasoline-marketing rules just two months ago, seeks to reserve all Canada east of the Ottawa River valley for the piped product of Canadian oil wells. The Atlantic and Quebec regions and part of eastern Ontario are open to cheaper imports.

The policy worked reasonably well for 10 years through voluntary compliance by the major petroleum companies.

Expanding leakages of foreign-refined gasoline into the Ontario market—Canada's richest—prompted proclamation in May of the first formal controls. The National Energy Board was empowered to restrict the marketing of imported gasoline to east of the demarcation line.

Left to voluntary compliance, however, was an agreement to limit Ontario sales of gasoline refined in Quebec from imported crude oil. Some Quebec-refined imports—notably those of Petrofina Canada Ltd. and Murphy Oil Co. and its Spur outlets—continue to enter Ontario.

The revised national oil policy now is being challenged on two fronts—by the importers of foreign gasoline, the one side and the Ontario refiners of Western Canadian crude oil on the other.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., one of seven major Ontario refiners of western crude, blames the seepage of lower-priced imports into the province for an announced reduction in gasoline production.

Gulf said Monday it would reduce output at its Clarkson refinery Wednesday by 40 per cent to 40,000 barrels a day at its Clarkson refinery. Gulf had planned output earlier this year in anticipation of greater demand.

Ontario refiners say their main problem now is Quebec-refined imports. Total leakage in the last year amounted to less than six per cent of Ontario requirements of between 140,000 and 150,000 barrels a day.

The government could empower the National Energy Board to control inter-provincial distribution of Quebec-refined gasoline in the same way that it imposed controls over distribution of gasoline imports in May. Some received experts say, however, that present refinery capacity in Ontario is insufficient to supply that market's requirements at present and at least a trickle of outside gasoline would have to be let in.

Further, the trans-boundary operations of Petrofina and Murphy Oil predate the 1961 national oil policy.

Distributors of Quebec-refined gasoline in Ontario say the big oil companies have been codified and the result is artificially-high gasoline prices in Ontario. Imported crude oil can be delivered in Montreal for about $2.50 a barrel, piped Canadian crude in the Toronto area for up to $3.40.

On the other side of the argument, the seven big Ontario refiners say they were encouraged to expand capacity, providing a market for Canadian petroleum, on the understanding that their market and price would be protected.

Caught in the middle of the dispute, an energy board official said Wednesday it would be up to the government to invoke any new control measures. Mr. Greene's office said comment would have to come from the energy board.

Golden Calf Platform Found

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — A monumental platform which may have supported the golden calf which the Bible says King Jeroboam set up nearly 3,000 years ago has been unearthed in northern Israel.

Dr. Avraham Biran, director of the government antiquities department, says in a report on this season's excavations at Dan:

"We simply cannot think of anything else it could possibly be.

"The structure is systematically built as a platform and there is no sign of any other architectural intention."

King Jeroboam founded the breakaway kingdom of Israel (or Samaria) around 930 BC after rebelling against Solomon's son, the king of Judea, and apparently intended Dan to serve as a counterweight to the temple worship in Jerusalem, Biran says.

Surrounded on all sides by walls of hewn stone, it has a flight of eight steps attached to one side.

Loyalist Days Cancelled

PICTON (Staff) — Since some likely hot, disorders of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce have decided to bypass their usual summer promotion program.

Several merchants attending a recent directors' meeting agreed their business improved during the summer months as a matter of course.

These men felt that a winter promotion scheme could prove more valuable to their stores. Following discussion, Loyalist Days, an annual event in Prince Edward County for nearly a decade, was cancelled.

Wide Disparity Is Reported In Prescription Drug Prices

TORONTO (CP) — There is a wide disparity in the prices of prescription drugs across Ontario, a joint meeting of the Canadian Home Economics Association and the Canadian Dietetic Association was told, Wednesday.

Mary Butler of the college of family and consumer studies at the University of Guelph said a study she did on comparison shopping for prescription drugs showed costs can vary by as much as $5.15 among 19 drug stores.

She said the consumer should insist on getting the least expensive suitable form of a drug available and should work to have legislation passed that allows a pharmacist to substitute a less-expensive drug in a prescription when the only difference is price.

She said her study convinced her that doctors often prescribe out of habit without concern for the cost to a patient and that pharmacists, worried about their professional status, consider retail price competition undignified.

Metro's Programs for Young People Found to Be an Uncoordinated Mess

TORONTO (CP) — A three-month study in Metropolitan Toronto concludes that the financing of programs for young people and the services that result are an uncoordinated mess.

The study has been a waste of some public and private funds and the failure of the program is the result of the needs of young people.

In making 18 recommendations for improvement, the Project 70 report to Health Minister Thomas Wells criticizes provincial and general hospitals for failure to provide adequate emergency services for young drug users.

The report accuses some agencies of hindering the work of the study group, and trying to cover up its failure or inadequacy of the programs offered.

Robert Cockburn, director of the study financed by the province, said Wednesday that after three months he still does not know the total amount of provincial and private funds available for youth programs in Ontario.

Project 70, a Toronto social group which originated the study, is continuing with this area.

The six-man group studied 108 of Toronto's 240 youth-oriented private and public agencies and reported on 31 of them. The other nine agencies which did not provide sufficient data included those which opposed the study and impeded its work, Mr. Cockburn said.

The study group headed by Dr. Reva Gerstein was announced by Premier John Robarts in April.

The recommendations, which Mr. Wells said he will consider as the basis for integrated programs across Ontario:

—Provide government support for community-based, multi-service centres initiated by youth, professionals and citizen groups.

—Form within the provincial government an interdepartmental committee on children and youth services to plan and financing to support services within the community.

—Provide financial support from provincial and municipal governments for Project 70 to establish a consulting service for youth agencies.

—Change the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario into a federal-provincial foundation with expanded research laboratory, educational and intensive-treatment centres.

—Establish small youth residences, hostels and special foster homes in the boroughs of Toronto with financial support.

—Establish special units for emergency treatment of critical drug-abuse cases and related illnesses in all general and psychiatric hospitals, with medical and psychiatric personnel also working as consultant-workers in crisis - intervention street centres;

—Units special education, attendance, guidance, psychology and child adjustment services into one department.

—Establish long-term residential treatment centres to provide intensive treatment for chronic drug-abuse problems.

—Increase grants from the addiction research foundation to youth service projects.

—Limit short-term research projects into young people's needs as they arise so that problems can be avoided.

Mr. Cockburn told a news conference that while many of the recommendations refer to the use of drugs by youth, it is only one of many problems for which programs are needed.

Others are recreational, social, housing and medical problems, he said.

The study group said it expected to meet resistance from several major youth agencies but was surprised at the degree of resistance from some of Toronto's general hospitals.

Only three of 17 hospitals replied to a questionnaire within two months, and there was reluctance to the group's efforts from many of the other hospitals as well as the North York board of education, Toronto board of education and some sections of the Addiction Research Foundation.

Some agencies had understandable reasons for their attitude, the report said, but, "several agencies are not providing an effective service for youth and they are reluctant to let this be known to the public."

Open-air Bedroom

Short on funds and with little in the way of cheap youth hotel accommodation available, scores of transient youths are turning stretches of sandy beach at English Bay in the heart of Vancouver into an open-air bedroom. Each night they pile their belongings on and around logs, curl up in blankets or sleeping bags and sleep in full view of residents of high-rise apartment buildings. (CP Photo)

Over Hundred Countries Send Delegates to Youth Conference

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant has been a rather confused and lonely-look World Youth Assembly.

For the next 18 days 628 youths from 110 countries plus some organizations and non-self-governing countries will discuss matters relating to world peace, development, education and human rights and environment.

Although all the delegates are supposed to be here as individuals, already some groupings have become apparent.

The delegations from 14 Arab countries banded together Wednesday to reject an invitation to all delegates to a garden party by New York Mayor John Lindsay. They said they could not attend because of the mayor's "Zionist" policies.

The Soviet Union, Byelorussia, and Ukraine also made it clear they will act as a solid group of 15.

A Canadian, meanwhile, and a Jamaican were elected as delegates from North America on the assembly's steering committee.

The Americans, the other member of the three-country North American grouping, surprised some by deciding not to nominate a candidate for the committee which will deal with such things as assembly rules and agenda.

The Canadian is Gordon Cleveland of Toronto, a political organizer for the New Democratic Party youth organization in Ontario whose home is Hoklatchewa and who has lived in Ottawa.

Cleveland, who said in an aside in response to the Canadian UN mission earlier in the day that Canada is a "colony" of the United States, declined to speak to two of the same reporters after he was elected at a closed meeting.

Cleveland is a graduate in economics from the University of Kings College in Halifax and at one time worked for the Canadian trade and commerce department.

Other members of the Canadian delegation are: Dorothy Dunn O'Donnell, 19, a University of B.C. student from Vancouver and a participant in the women's liberation movement. She said she supports the separatist movement in Quebec.

Michael Pearson, 25, a former president of the International Chemical Workers Union in Calgary, who left school at 15 and plans to return to study social science.

Francois Gilbert, 18, of Chicoutimi, Que., a high school student who says he does not engage in political activities because there are better things to do. He is a federalist, he said.

James Roland Delacriex, 19, of St. Catharines, Ont., who now is living in Halifax hoping to establish a free pre-school there. He moved to Halifax after working for Canadian Relief in Toronto.

Armories Will Be Used To Provide Hostel Beds

OTTAWA (CP) — A major, emergency expansion in youth hostels aimed at providing a additional 2,000 beds in 14 locations across Canada for young people travelling across the country, was announced Wednesday.

The project is sponsored by the state secretary's department in co-operation with provincial and municipal authorities from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver.

The hostels will use space made available by the department of national defence in armories and other militia installations.

The hostels set up in national defence facilities will be operated by local committees of the national hostel task force, an association of about 20 organizations which serve transient youth.

Skeletons Discovered

WAWA, Ont. (CP) — Police discovered Wednesday the skeletal remains of at least two people in a plane that crashed 40 miles south of here last August.

The Cessna 180 float plane was piloted by W. Lorne Gray, 43, vice-president of the St. Lawrence Starch Co., who was accompanied by his wife Judy, 27, and their four-year-old son Gordon.

The family was on a flight from Sault Ste. Marie to Wawa last Aug. 29 when their plane disappeared.

The wreckage of the plane was spotted Wednesday by a commercial pilot flying in the area.

Passenger Train Is Robbed

L'ASSOMPTION, Que. (CP) — Four bandits armed with machine-guns held up a passenger train here Wednesday night and took only 30 seconds to escape with a strongbox and several bags containing money and postal orders, provincial police said today.

Police and Canadian National Railways officials said they did not know how much money was stolen nor who owned it. The robbery took place at 8:30 p.m. in l'Assomption station, about 15 miles east of Montreal, on train No. 76 bound to Chicoutimi from Montreal.

Police said they have broadcast across the province a good description of the robbers who escaped first in a truck then a car after grazing a guard in the arm with a warning shot.

The name and condition of the guard were not immediately known.

One policeman said: "Obviously, they knew the strongboxes were there and what they were looking for."

He said the money could have been part of a payroll due in Chicoutimi today.

A CNR spokesman said the train normally stops in l'Assomption and carries more than 180 passengers.

Strike Continues

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 400 Teamsters involved in a three-month dock strike walked out in the British Columbia cement industry Wednesday night rejected the B.C. government's moves to get them back to work.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Tuesday gave both sides in the dispute 10 days in which to resume work and said they lose their heads the threat of compulsory back-to-work orders if work does not resume.

After-inflation Pay Drops

OTTAWA (CP) — After inflation took its bite out of workers' pay cheques, average wages were lower in March than in four of the previous six months, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

The bureau's report covers average weekly wages paid in Canadian manufacturing industry, "deflated"—in the statistician's say—by changes in the DBS consumer price index.

In this analysis, the bureau reduces the average wage by the amount the consumer price index rises, thus producing a figure which shows the real amount of wage increase after taking into account rising prices.

The bureau cautioned that its figures on wages are averages only. Individual pay cheques and individual circumstances will vary considerably from the average.

However, the average weekly wage in March was $117.09, down 35 cents from the average in February but significantly higher than the $114.87 six months earlier.

Applying the increase in the consumer price index, the current computes that the March average manufacturing wage was $80.28 in terms of the purchasing power of the 1961 dollar.

This was down from $81.56 in February, and below the figure for most of the previous six months. The only major exception was in December, when average wages always show a slump because of shortened work-weeks connected with the Christmas-New Year's holidays.

In the year from March, 1969, average wages in ordinary terms rose $6.12, to $117.09 from $110.97. But in terms of the 1961 dollar's purchasing power, the increase was only $1.22, to $80.28 from $79.06.

Two-car Collision Injures Three

PICTON (Staff) — A two-car collision on West Lake Road yesterday sent three persons to Picton Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Injured were drivers of the vehicles, Reginald Windatt, 68, and Henrietta Huff, 61, both of RR 1, Picton.

Mr. Windatt sustained a fractured collarbone, scalp lacerations and numerous cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Huff was treated for facial injuries and a lacerated knee and arm.

A passenger in the Huff vehicle, Patrick Munnings, 18, RR 1, Picton, was treated for neck and head injuries.

A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police said today that the collision, causing an estimated $2,500 damage, occurred near Wardsville stand operated by Mr. Windatt.

South-bound in his new model car, Mr. Windatt apparently blacked out crossing into a path of a north-bound car driven by Mrs. Huff.

Damage to the Windatt car was estimated at $1,500 while damage to the Huff car was given as $1,000.

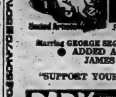
AT THE DRIVE-IN — "Shaft" is when the new Cinema 7 opens at the Quinte Drive-In Theatre, Trenton, Saturday, July 10. The movie will be shown at 10:30 p.m. and 1 a.m.

AT THE PARK — In Color ... For those who have been asking for more adult entertainment, the Park Theatre in Belleville has announced that beginning tomorrow, Friday, it will present a program of adult entertainment.



Informed sources claim the move here was prompted by actions taken in Toronto. Early this month, Toronto police raided the Towne Cinema theatre and charged the manager with showing obscene films. Last fall Toronto police raided the Odeon Carlton theatre and charged the manager with showing obscene films. Both theatres were closed down.

Police in Toronto have been cracking down on theatres showing pornographic films. Police in Belleville have said they will not tolerate such films here.

New Guinea Tribesmen Stage Riot

Gorton had struggled to make himself heard above intense noise and catcalling as he told 10,000 members of the Tolai (Native) Matanggan Association they must solve their inter-tribal disputes themselves.

The association has violently opposed Australia's system of local government in the New Guinea trust territory.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Before Exercise, Take Examination

Some reputations — good or bad — are undeserved. For example, I am considered by many to be irrevocably stubborn against exercise. Even my closest friends have me down as a proponent of the rocking-chair brigade as opposed to those who enjoy golfing, tennis, bicycle riding and jogging.

Enjoy did I say? Well, some do, and some don't. They do it simply because it's supposed to be "good for you."

It is true that I have recently written another book "against" exercise. But if read, rather than hastily skimmed, the reader will discover that I'm not so much against exercise if you are able and healthy. I say: but don't unless you have been checked recently and have been given the nod by your physician.

As I see it the danger is distinctly present when a man with a blood pressure of 250 overexerts; or if a man with bad coronary arteries jogs for three miles; or if a man 30 or more pounds overweight lumbers around on a tennis court; or if a housewife, already exhausted and anemic, is talked into taking calisthenics twice a day in conjunction with a slender young lady on TV.

Some people are born lazy. For them I say that the bannock or rocking chair is all right. They get enough needful exercises in the course of a normal day's work to keep healthy. Others are so constituted that they "need a workout every day." For them I say, go to it, within reason. Don't overdo. But my standard admonition — which gives me the reputation I do not deserve as an anti-exercise man — is: Don't engage in your physical gyrations unless you have had a recent physical checkup. That's where the danger lies.

Recently I was asked what percentage of people had annual physical checkups. My estimate was way off. I gave people credit for more sense than they have. "Oh, about 2-3 adults out of every ten," I said.

Actually how many Americans visit their doctors for annual examinations? According to Dr. Alex M. Burgess Jr. of Harvard Medical School, only four in 10,000. He says, "Clearly, the adult population, males in particular, are receiving little preventive attention."

To repeat, that is where the danger lies. That's why you read about people dropping dead after jogging or other physical over-activity. They were completely unaware that they were suffering from "silent" hypertension, coronary disease, or some other physical inferiority.

Do you like to exercise? Have fun. But don't think I'm a fuddy - duddy simply because I've warned you to be sure you have it.

For Mr. L.: I suppose you will have to leave the final judgment up to your eye specialist. If in doubt about what he advises, consult another before making your decision.

Although it's true that in most patients, special drops for the eye to lead glaucoma in check, there are times when excessive eye - pressure is not controlled by medication and an operation is necessary to relieve it and prevent further deterioration of sight.

* * *

For Mrs. O.: It is true that some people have become so sensitive to poison ivy that just standing near a plant will cause skin-blistering. Sometimes, just petting a dog who has recently run through a patch of the ivy plant will bring on an attack. In such cases, I'd suggest treatment by a skin specialist rather than self - experimentation.

For July 7

Your birthday today: Spiritual growth is the most important factor in your coming year. So much depends on your healing and working with your natural limitations. Established loved contacts clock off; new ones are not so readily formed. Any project requiring a mind-stretching search holds the hope of lasting results. This could be the most important year of your life in the development of your basic philosophy. Today's natives often face hidden restrictions and must concentrate on adaptations for constructive results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You are not very alert now — check details carefully. Keep going at an even pace. Once past the temptation to be hasty, everything improves steadily.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your first question today should be: "Is it practical?" Don't allow any pressure to rush your decisions. Health and dietary matters are important.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You may easily get involved in so many things today that nothing actually gets done. Your determination and motivation are tested. Attend the needs of loved ones.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Most of the day seems lots highly satisfactory effort. Clear up unfinished business, round up unwanted materials for your favorite charity.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You have much to think about. Put in a full day of conscientious work. The answer to some old riddle may occur to you, spurring you to action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Early decisions almost certainly have to be reversed. The day is normal and productive. Catch up your budgets, vacation plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): An early interruption upsets your schedule. You're being pushed into unplanned action. The practicality of some of your suggestions will be lauded today and could be a lot of fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Let your intuition lead the way. Old problems, old concerns now are susceptible to experimental solutions. Make your main effort but the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Unplanned situations, perhaps exciting but more likely embarrassing, may beset you today. Your impulsive behavior makes them more intense. Your friends are even more certain.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Sudden moves are not helpful. Start on time and work diligently. Much can be done to clear unfinished obligations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Remain unruffled during the morning, and the rest of the day takes care of itself. The latter hours provoke you to look ahead and think big.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Decide where you are heading, then make corrections. Wind up your workweek smooth — it's unlikely you will ever pick up the exact threads of anything half-done.

Vessel's Actions Strange

ALBANY, Australia (Reuters) — Port authorities here are puzzled by the inscrutable behavior of the 8,783-ton Chinese freighter Lin Tong which will not accept fresh food or water, won't allow a health officer on board, and will not go away.

A load of fresh food, including three live ducks, was put at the foot of the gangway Wednesday after the Lin Tong signalled for stores and water.

After several hours it was still untouched, and the supplier took it away.

Dock workers offered a fresh water hose, but the Lin Tong's crew refused to lower a rope to haul it on board.

Soon afterward the ship hoisted two signal flags saying: "I require water."

The skipper was refused four times to allow health officers on board to make the routine check of the crew members required before they can be permitted ashore or port workers are allowed to board the vessel.

Londonderry Air

If It's Dry Burn It, if Wet Drink It, if It Moves Shoot It

BELFAST (Reuters) — A Protestant bride who dared to marry in a Roman Catholic district of Belfast was pelted with eggs when she left the church.

And in the riot-scarred Catholic ghettoes of Londonderry, a new slogan is grimly going the rounds: "If it's dry burn it. If it's wet drink it. If it moves shoot it dead."

Not since Ireland's civil war of the 1920s has sectarian hatred run so high in Ulster, where the death toll after a week of street fighting stood at 13 by the morning of July 4.

Automobiles have grown since the conflict first hit world headlines 18 months ago. Then, few ordinary Protestants would have admitted much fondness for hell-fire preacher Ian Paisley and his violent crusade against Catholics. Now the Paisley bandwagon is becoming more and more popular.

The nightmare haunting Protestants is that Catholics might succeed in detaching Northern Ireland from the British Crown by which it clung when the rest of Ireland gained independence in 1921.

The 1,000,000 Protestants in the North now outnumber their Catholic fellow-citizens by two to one. If Northern Ireland merged with the Irish Republic to the South, Protestants would be in a one-to-four minority.

Loyalty to the Crown is thus a cornerstone of Protestant principle. This has not stopped Protestants from railing at successive British governments for trying to placate the Catholics, or from hurling stones at British troops who try to keep them from assaulting Catholic districts.

One of the many paradoxes of the situation is the spectacle of Protestant rioters waving Union Jacks and launching attacks on the ranks of the British Army.

The British government faces a constant dilemma. Granting any concession to one side calls forth a violent demand from the other for counter-concessions.

The trouble started with Catholics demanding an end to what they claimed was discrimination against them by the Protestants.

The British government urged the Northern Ireland government, late last year into embarking on a program of reforms.

The old system of unequal voting rights in local elections was abolished, allocation of housing was taken over by a central authority from the Protestant-controlled municipal councils, and the predominantly Protestant police force was radically overhauled.

Still, the Catholics say that reform has not gone far enough. They claim, for example, that discrimination continues to operate against them in obtaining jobs.

Protestants, on the other hand, say the reforms have already gone too far and that the balance has been unduly tipped in the Catholics' favor.

One of the most bitter Protestant complaints is that the Catholics control their own enclaves in Belfast and Londonderry in virtual independence of the Northern Ireland authorities.

For nearly a year now, ordinary policemen have not dared to venture inside these districts. Law and order is maintained by the army and by vigilante bodies known as citizens' defence committees.

Protestants say the real power in the Catholic enclaves now is exercised by the Irish Republican Army, an outlawed nationalist organization rooted in the republican South.

After smouldering relatively quietly for some eight months, the sectarian conflict now has blazed into the open with the season of religious parades.

This month it is the turn of the Catholics to parade, providing yet another potential flashpoint for violence.

Canada to Exchange Old Voodoos for New

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will exchange 88 of its CF-101 Voodoo armed forces interceptor aircraft for superior United States Air Force F-101 Voodoos and obtain, as additional eight of the American models, the defence department announced Thursday.

The American planes have improved low-level flying ability, greatly improved weapons firing control, and more sophisticated equipment to overcome electronic interference from invading bombers.

Arrangements for the exchange have been under discussion between Ottawa and Washington for months, and the switch will be carried out by the fall of 1971.

The Canadian Voodoo interceptor planes are part of Canada's contribution to North American air defence, and are based at Chatham, N.B., Bagotville and Val d'Or, Que., and Comox, B.C.

By obtaining the additional eight American Voodoos, the Canadian Air defence command's strength will be brought up to the original inventory of 66 aircraft, the department said.

The deal includes the expenditure of about $7,000,000 by Canada on the aircraft, and on new facilities for repairing and overhauling the aircraft's fire control system.

In addition, Canada will continue to pay U.S. operations and maintenance costs at some Pine Tree line radar stations until July 31, 1971 — about $31,000,000.

Cost-sharing arrangements between the two countries on the Pine Tree Line after that date now are being negotiated.

CF-101 engines, and the Voodoo pilot-ejector system and navigation and communication equipment, have been modified by Canada and these will be fitted to the American aircraft.

Aviation Medicine Team Probes Crash

TORONTO (CP) — A team of specialists in aviation medicine is investigating the human factor involved in Sunday's crash of an Air Canada Super DC-8 with the loss of 108 lives.

Frederick Hemming, chief of civil aviation medicine with the department of national health and welfare, said the investigation might take up to three months.

Laboratory tests on tissue of the pilot and other persons aboard the aircraft can tell investigators the degree of stress they were exposed to and their mental state, he said.

Dr. Hemming said such tissue tests would first be performed on the bodies of Capt. Peter Hamilton and First Officer Donald Rowland who have been identified.

Canada Tries To Sell Curbs

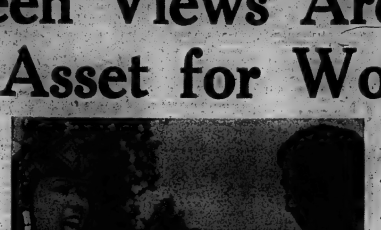
OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is holding quiet discussions with its far-north neighbors to try to persuade them to accept this country's claim to a 100-mile offshore pollution prevention control zone in the Arctic.

Officials say the discussions have been friendly and appear to have been successful so far.

However, it was much too early to say that Canada's initiative in international law of the sea had been found acceptable by a majority of states.

Canada's Arctic neighbors are the United States, the Soviet Union, Norway and Denmark.

Direct talks have been held with the U.S., Russia and Norway and also with Sweden, which is deeply interested in the pollution problem. Denmark, which owns Greenland, has been briefed through the Canadian embassy in Copenhagen and direct talks between officials of the two countries are likely to follow.



Ivan Head, special assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau for legislation, was in Moscow last month to help explain the Canadian anti-pollution measures in the Arctic.

The prime minister has told the Commons that the government's basic Arctic policy is to protect national sovereignty, develop the economy, protect the environment against pollution and act responsibly to avoid alienation by the international community.

The Arctic anti-pollution legislation passed by Parliament at its spring session covers the last two points.

It is designed to prevent oil pollution by controlling ship movements and safety standards up to 100 miles from the Arctic coast and to avoid unnecessary dispute with other countries by not making any territorial claims beyond the 12-mile limit.

The initial U.S. reaction was pretty negative but talks with both the U.S. and Russia since then have been most friendly officials say.

Duke Voices Objection To Public Inquiry Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Oakville businessman George Clinton Duke, 54, said Thursday he objects to Attorney-General Arthur Wishart calling a public inquiry into alleged connections between Mr. Duke, senior officers of the provincial police and alleged members of the Mafia.

Mr. Wishart said Wednesday he will ask for a public inquiry because of "misstatements in the press."

Premier John Robarts, in Honolulu on his way to Japan, said in a telephone interview Thursday he would order an inquiry as "it seems to me that there is lot of misunderstanding."

Mr. Duke held a press conference in the Toronto office of his lawyer, Harvey Dasker.

He said he is determined to proceed with libel actions he has instituted against Mr. Wishart, OPP Commissioner Eric Silk and Randell Dick, deputy attorney-general.

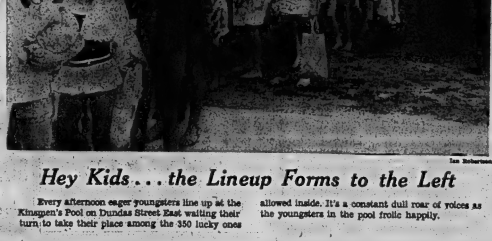
"I have placed all matters in issue by taking recourse in the courts. All matters can be aired there that can be reviewed by an inquiry which is now unnecessary and redundant."

Referring to his conviction on a charge of robbery in the United States, he said:

"It is an odd state of society when reference can be made to an act which occurred in 1928. I have never before heard of references to a person's criminal record more than 40 years old."

He answered questions about his relations with police and alleged relations with three Hamilton men who had been named in the legislature by Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member for High Park, as members of the Mafia.

He denied that he had personal or business relations with John Papalia, William La Barre or Daniel Gasbarrini, whom Dr. Shulman had named. Nor did he have any knowledge of the Mafia.



There was nothing unusual in provincial police attending the annual display at his home of equipment manufactured by his firm, Duke Lawn Equipment Ltd.

"Everybody comes, firemen, policemen, government representatives and contractors. We carry almost every type of equipment for property maintenance. Our equipment is at work on highways from coast to coast."

Care Needed In Use Of Area

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Queen Elizabeth ended a five-day visit to the Northwest Territories Thursday night with a pointed message on the importance of developing but not destroying the 1,300,000-square-mile area.

The Royal Family was to fly to Churchill this morning to begin a week-long visit to Manitoba, also celebrating its centennial.

The Queen said that "thoughtless building and the unchecked exploitation" of northern resources can be as harmful as wanton destruction.

"In this territory, vast tracts of land and water are still unspoiled," she said. "This places a heavy responsibility upon the authorities in plan and manage its development, not just for your benefit or even for the benefit of Canada, but as a vital part in the balance of nature of the world."

Her address, made at a banquet in her honor on the eve of her departure, was broadcast over Yellowknife's Radio Hall to the 22,028 residents of the territories. The message went out in English, four Indian languages and Eskimo. Two paragraphs were spoken in French by the Queen.

Such royal statements generally are subject to approval of the government. Sitting beside the Queen through a dinner of caribou, arctic char, smoked caribou and strawberries were Northern Development Minister

China Releases Bishop

HONG KONG (CP) — China released today Roman Catholic Bishop James Edward Walsh after nearly 12 years in captivity, but it said another American prisoner, Hugh Francis Redmond, committed suicide three months ago.

The bishop later was taken for a medical check to Maryknoll Hospital in Kowloon, where a hospital spokesman reported that his condition was "pretty good."

Bishop Walsh, a longtime missionary in China, was bishop of Shanghai when the Communists took over in 1949.

Eventually he was arrested in 1958 and later imprisoned for 20 years on charges of spying and sabotage.

A New China news agency report from Shanghai, monitored here about the same time as news was received of Bishop Walsh's release, said Redmond, 36, of Yonkers, N.Y., died April 13.

Shutdowns Annoy Postmen

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Postal workers in seven centres in Ontario and British Columbia and in Regina went on strike today as the Council of Postal Unions continued to apply pressure to back contract demands.

Post offices in the Ontario centres of Midland and Newmarket and Station W — the northwest end of Toronto — were closed by postal authorities.

The Council of Postal Unions said Thursday it is planning legal action against Postmaster - General Eric Kierans in retaliation for shutdown of local post offices.

The council said in a statement that "Kierans' action is not only a violation of various laws and regulations, but is also a vicious act, taken without regard for the citizens of Canada and the postal system."

Board Fields Questions on Kente School Complex

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Speaking for the committee for Quality Education with Fair Taxation during a meeting with the Prince Edward County board of Education in Bloomfield last night, chairman Ellen James declared, "We have no axes to grind."

Six representatives of the committee made up of Ameliasburg ratepayers joined with Mr. James in questioning the board members of ten specific points relating to the proposed Kente school complex.

Early during the meeting, requested several weeks ago by the committee, Mr. James stressed, "Our group in Ameliasburg is not opposing the board's embarkation on a school. Our concern is whether or not these new facilities will be used to the utmost. We added that board members could simplify the committee's task and their job, too, with clear-cut information relating to the suggested elementary - secondary school complex.

The first questioned directed to Prince Edward trustees involved the number of secondary students expected to attend the new school in the next ten years. Director of Education for Prince Edward County, John McNeil, remarked, "The question is who can determine such figures. By 1975 all across Ontario there will be a student exodus — but not in Prince Edward County — in this way we are different, from grades 7 and 8 pupils are an integral part of this proposed school and we aren't setting up a 7 - 13 secondary high school. Pressed for approximate figures, Mr. McNeil suggested committee members receive copies of a five - year forecast for student attendance at the proposed school complex for grades seven through thirteen, plus a total figure.

Describing courses that will be offered in the suggested complex, Mr. McNeil noted pupils in grades 7 through 13 will have 24 subjects to choose from. Students in grades 11 and 12 will have a range of 28 subjects while grade 13 pupils can choose from 12 subjects. There are more than 50 options in both the Prince Edward and Hastings school systems according to Mr. McNeil.

Special opportunity students will be integrated rather than isolated in the classrooms of the proposed complex, observed education director. Questioned about how these students could secure on-the-job training in local industrial plants and they do now in Belleville, Mr. McNeil felt this program could continue. He pointed out that Belleville industry enjoys "very good relations" with the Prince Edward school system. He also recommended that these opportunity students might be welcomed in Prince Edward business for short training programs.

Business administrator E.A. Short clarified several questions directed to trustees by the committee beginning with the matter of a land option. He informed committee members the board has optioned "the Robbie Lots and adjacent to Kente school in Ameliasburg. Mr. Short added that Prince Edward trustees have sought approval from the department of education, not for a secondary school but for a complex. Approval, however, has not yet been granted.

Urged to explain what guarantee the board holds concerning student population during the new school's initial years of operation a spokesman replied that there is none. "Population," he said, "is influenced by many factors and is a forecast solely on department of education formulae.

Tapering off on the number of children who will be coming into the system," said Mr. James.

Director of education John McNeil noted that no department of education officials have suggested improvements of the Prince Edward county board's plan for the Kente project.

Additions to existing schools were not favored as an alternative to the proposed new school. He said department of education officials considered the plans for the proposed school sound and educationally good.

Describing the relative cost of educating students in the proposed school system in comparison with present costs for 1976 in the Hastings system, Mr. Short said there could be no definite prediction. Reinforcing his statement, he pointed out that neither the Hastings board or the Prince Edward board knows the Hastings cost for 1976 or for 1980. They have not yet completed their financial statement for last year."

He added the cost of educating secondary school students in the proposed complex depends on several unknowns," he emphasized. Two of these are the annual debenture costs of the complex and the portion of these debenture costs charged to the secondary population of the complex. A third unknown is the actual savings in tuition fees, pupil accommodation charges and transportation costs which would no longer be payable to Hastings. An additional saving would result from non-operation of three Ameliasburg schools and portables.

Mr. Short did offer several definite statements on the proposed new complex however. "On the basis of the lowest of four different tuition fee figures received from the Hastings board to date, it costs the taxpayers of Prince Edward County more per student to educate the Ameliasburg secondary students in the Hastings system than it does in the Prince Edward system.

"With the variable of debenture charges outstanding at both schools, the cost per secondary pupil at the proposed complex should be no greater than the cost per pupil at Prince Edward Collegiate institute - which on the basis of present information is less costly than buying secondary education from Hastings. Also, the variable of debenture charges between the complex and PECI, based on an estimated complex cost of $3 million, is ten dollars per secondary student."

The committee learned the present debenture debt involves a principal of $2,926,187 and an interest of $2,694,842. In the board of education's annual budget, secondary charges were calculated as $538,695 with an interest of 11.89 per cent.

Speaking for the committee as the meeting between trustees and ratepayers closed, Ellen James remarked, "The thing that's concerning us is the increasing cost of education. No one is opposing the complex if it is required. If prices show a tapering off of population in Prince Edward and if this trend continues, we will require not more space but less. The committee has our assurance — it's a question of public relations. The people in the county must realize that if they have to have it they'll have to pay for it."

Ameliasburg Group 'Good Cross Section'

Included were three housewives: Ben Simpson, headmaster of Albert College; George Zimmerman, a Trenton secondary school teacher, and a farmer (Mr. James).

He noted that this Ameliasburg ratepayers group had attracted a large following in a short period of time.

"If there is a possibility we don't need this school right now, perhaps we could get along without it for another three years," said Mr. James.

Stressing a decline in population figures for Prince Edward from 1994 to 1980, Mr. James reasoned "Prices will become the county's future growth centre.

He felt that lack of sewerage and water facilities in Prince Edward at Bloomfield hampered industrial development and home building.

"There has been a drastic

OWRC Okay Not Received

BLOOMFIELD (Staff)—Although the Prince Edward county board of education has optioned the "Riddin Lake site", a land parcel adjacent to Ameliasburg's Kente elementary school as the building site for the proposed new school project, the Ontario Water Resources Commission has not yet approved this choice.

One of ten questions presented to school trustees last night by the Committee for Quality Education was, "Has the OWRC been asked for its approval?"

Business administrator for the board, E. A. Short, said other sites were considered before trusteed decided to option the land adjacent to Kente school.

Youth Kicks Constable, Charged with Assault

A Belleville youth has been charged with assault following an incident last night during which a Belleville police officer was kicked in the head.

Police chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning that police received a call from 67 West Street about 11.30 last night. On the second call Const. Alan Kirby charged Graham with causing a disturbance.

The officer was then kicked in the head and Graham was consequently charged with assault.

Const. Kirby was taken to Belleville General Hospital where he was treated and released. He received stitches to his head as a result of the injury.

Cheesemakers Studying Whey Disposal Means

Only government financial assistance can resolve the whey disposal problem in the Belleville area, says a report of the six - month study of the situation.

Arnold Johnston of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and secretary of the whey disposal action committee set up in December, 1973, has released a report on the committee's findings.

When the liquid residue remaining after solids have been extracted from milk in the form of curds — is now being disposed of by dumping into district waterways.

A solution to this pollution is long overdue, the committee concluded.

It places the blame on lack of awareness of the dangers of pollution, inertia, low profit margins and inefficiency in these processes.

A whey drying plant in the Belleville - Stirling area is the best method of disposal of the cheesemaking by - product, the committee agreed, in common with the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

But several factors make this economically unfeasible unless the government contributes money toward the scheme.

The widely scattered locations of the district's 28 cheese factories and the difficulty of transporting the whey to a central point for spray drying is one factor.

Others are the high initial cost of establishing a spray drying plant, the cost of transportation of raw materials and the relatively low about the volume of milk that will be produced socially in the future.

But the committee concluded that the wide market for whey powder and the pollution-free aspect of spray drying disposal method made it the best solution to the pollution problem.

No firm queried by the committee was interested in operating a whey drying plant unless government assistance was available. A multi-purpose milk plant integrated the farms more than a straight drying plant.

"Quinte surprisingly, the only processing firm in the area (within 25 miles of Belleville) that is engaged in whey drying showed very little interest in expanding its whey drying operations to serve the wider area," the committee reported. This appears all the more surprising since this firm received more than $65,000 from the province of Ontario in 1969, ostensibly to improve its processing facilities."

The committee's second choice for utilizing whey in a lactose and lactalbumin processing plant. These two compounds are the solid constituents of whey and their extraction would involve only the re-adaption of existing cheese factory facilities.

If neither of these methods can be used, the committee advises encouragement of a revival in hog production in the district.

In the past, farmers who sent milk to cheese factories received the whey in return, for feeding their hogs.

"Traditionally, this was considered the ideal 'drip-and method," noted the committee. "It does not involve costly processing equipment. The hog is an efficient sewage disposal system."

Hog production in the Quinte district is in a decline, with western Ontario taking over the leadership. Hog feeding techniques have also changed. A major drawback in the return to the hog disposal system is the fact that the biggest whey production comes in spring, but the biggest demand for whey for hogs comes during the fall.

"The feeding of whey to hogs is by no means a simple solution, and while it is carried on in many parts of Ontario, as well as elsewhere on cheese producing areas, the method would require changes in agriculture on Belleville's area farms," the committee observed.

Other uses for whey, practised in Europe and the United States, were explored by the committee, but it concluded they were impractical because of lack of market demand or technical underdevelopment of the equipment needed.

The committee called for denial of Belleville's for new cheese factories unless the applicant shows that he has "entirely satisfactory method of whey and wash-water disposal."

Finally the committee has asked for university-sponsored research into whey pollution.

In this way, the appraisal of new processes could take place in a planned manner and new procedures of merit could be introduced," it concludes.

Now It's Taxpayer Versus Computer

For the average Canadian taxpayer, April 30 is a date of relief; his income tax has been filed on time for another year.

Although Apr. 30 may be the end of the year for most taxpayers, for the Taxation Division of the federal government it heralds the beginning of a summer - long pro-

The method of verification is called MAT 4 — the code name for an operation carried on by computer which, among other things, matches millions of T4 slips issued by employers against information reported by the taxpayers in their income tax returns.

Where they find a lapse of memory, a revised assessment notice is issued. Where fraud is suspected, the cases are turned over to the Special Investigations Branch.

One way or another, matching helps keep the taxpayer honest.

The employer creates the basic ingredients of the matching program when he fills out T4 slips for all employees before the end of each February.

He is obliged to give T4 slips to everyone to whom he pays a salary, wage, commission for other consideration which constitutes income for the recipient.

He sends one copy to National Revenue, Taxation, and gives two copies to the employee, one of which the employee must attach to his personal income tax return.

Canada's self - assessed income tax system boasts a voluntary compliance rate of approximately, 97 per cent. In other words most taxpayers report their incomes and calculate their taxes in accordance with the law.

Not long ago, the matching of T4 slips was done by hand. It was a slow, laborious undertaking and sometimes taxpayers took chances knowing it was actually impossible to check everyone.

Now the computer swiftly and efficiently matches all income reported by employers with that reported by employees. This year more than 11 million T4 slips will be matched.

Preparation of the data for the computer is a large job which is carried out at several regional tax-payer centres. These centres send the information to the Data Centre in Ottawa in the form of magnetic tape, ready for computer use.

In addition, a number of large employers in Canada, who keep employee payroll information in their own computers, send the department magnetic tape and so reduce the volume of paper work and the cost of converting records to tape.

The computer data obtained for T4 slips is also used to create a record, in tape form, of all earnings and contributions to the Canada Pension Plan.

This goes to the Department of National Health and Welfare to form the basis for CPP pensions and benefits which are calculated on the basis of a person's income and contributions over a number of years.

Reassessment resulting from computer matching in 1968-1969 resulted in increased tax revenue of $4,882,683 — considering that total 483,717 owed by Belleville district taxpayers was turned up by matching.

The tabloid newspaper published in connection with Quinte Exhibition will earn a special mark for accomplishment this year.

The edition to be printed ahead of the Exhibition opening August 18, will establish a record for largest press run at The Intelligencer plant here. The run, set at 40,000 copies, doubles any previous undertaking.

Distribution of the issue is to be concentrated in the Quinte area with a 50-mile radius of the city. It will be circulated with the Belleville daily newspaper and delivered to as many more householders free by special delivery.

Included in the issue will be the official program for grandstand shows, a keyed map of the grounds and general information as a guide for fairgoers.

There will also be the usual features with photographs to stimulate reader interest.

Jean Chretien and Territorial Commissioner Stuart Hodgson.

The Queen was radiant in a diamond-and-sapphire tiara, diamond necklace and turquoise gown. She wore, for the first time, the sovereign's badge of the Order of Canada, presented to her recently in London by Governor-General Roland Michener. Decorated with rubies, diamonds, sapphires and emeralds, it is similar in design to the badge of a Companion of the Order but somewhat smaller in size.

She smiled in delight as two Eskimos carried in a huge white polar bear rug after dinner, a gift of the Northwest Territories. [Princess Anne was given 46 arctic fox furs, Prince Philip a painting by Canadian artist Robert McVicar of the entry of Sir John Franklin's two ships into the Northwest Passage, and Prince Charles a chess set of ivory figures modelled on northern animals and a soapstone board.

It was a black-tie dinner, with the princesses and the guests ranged from old northern hands, in plain suits, to bemedalled military figures.

The Royal Family have travelled more than 5,000 miles since beginning the tour in Frobisher Bay, on Baffin Island, last Sunday. The visitors showed a fondness for the north's people, but in private conversations expressed concern about pollution.

Prince Philip and Prince Charles made side trips during the week to oil exploration sites 800 miles from the North Pole on Melville Island, one of the Queen Elizabeth Islands, and the Pine Point lead-zinc mine south of Great Slave Lake, where great 250-foot-deep mining pits scar the scenery.

Some observers have interpreted the arctic visit, first by a Royal Family, as a "show-the-flag" effort in Canada's defence to protect the Arctic from pollution.

She hoped her listeners would remember that except for the competitive fur-trade days, French, English, Scots, Indians, Eskimos and Metis had worked and lived together in a difficult and dangerous environment.

"They faced the rigors of a harsh climate and natural obstacles of a new land and, under these testing conditions, only the true value of the individual had any importance. This is a lesson we should always remember."

Big Load in Belleville Yard

Gigantic Generator Is Problem for CNR

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

The CNR, Rideau Area, has a big problem on its hands and the solution is being handled with considerable skill.

The generator is heavier than several regular carloads put together, weighing in at 742,000 lbs. Total weight of car and contents is 1,346,000 lbs.

The most troublesome feature of the generator for CNR people is its extreme width: it is more than 13 feet wide and with this dimension no other train may pass it on either side.

"It is so wide, it would rip a passing train to pieces," one CNR spokesman said.

The CNR took charges of the gargantuan carload on Wednesday at Black Rock near Fort Erie as it crossed the Niagara Frontier into Canada.

J.A. Lomas, superintendent of transportation for Belleville-centred Rideau area told The Intelligencer that it was handed over to him around 2:30 a.m. Thursday early yesterday morning.

It will reach Montreal late today according to Mr. Lomas.

Crews changed at Belleville and Rideau area officials got a chance to see the short train that has required so much attention.

Mr. Lomas reported that the train, with its exceedingly wide and heavy load, must dodge about 40 regularly scheduled trains a day on the high-density Toronto-Montreal line. Regular service is not being disrupted for its extraordinary freight special.

Because it must have a clear track on either side, the train edges forward from one siding to another as it proceeds to up-state Maine.

The generator's excessive weight makes it necessary to ship it on a unique 30-axle Schabel car owned by the Westinghouse Corporation. This, Mr. Lomas explained, is used to adequately distribute the weight.

The Rideau area staff is handling the load at 25 m.p.h. on straight track and at 1 m.p.h. on curved sections as it proceeds to its U.S. port of entry, Island Pond, Vt. The CNR will take the generator through to its Maine destination.

Bayside School Effluent Said Purer Than City's

Effluent from the proposed sewage treatment plant for Bayside Secondary School will be of better quality than either Trenton's or Belleville's would be after secondary treatment.

Lloyd Ellenton, chief inspector with the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit made the comment at an Ontario Water Resources public hearing on the treatment plant yesterday at Sidney Township Hall.

The hearing was attended by interested citizens concerned about the pollution hazard connected with the proposed new school, accommodating about 1,200 students.

Four OWRC officials from Toronto were told that present sewage treatment plants at Trenton and Belleville were inadequate to handle the material now being pumped into them. Hooking the school to existing sanitary sewers would therefore be no solution to the sewage disposal problem.

No decision was made following the hearing and no date was set for the OWRC to forward its findings to the Hastings County board of education.

Mariners' Memorial Service At South Bay United Church

PICTON (Staff) — Anchors, riding lights, binnacles, ships models will decorate South Bay United Church on July 18, when old salts from Prince Edward and surrounding districts gather for a Mariners' Memorial Service.

A revival of the Mariner's Services, organized by Philip Dodds and conducted in Cherry Valley Church for 15 years, this salute to seamen welcomes all sailors and fishermen.

Adjacent to the church, where services will be held, is the Mariner's Memorial Park, a Centennial project initiated by South Marysburg Township and boosted financially by Athol Township.

Displayed in this shrine to seamen is the light from Main Duck's Island, anchors, an old ship's engine, and a tile boat from the Protestatih, a Greek ship that once ran aground off Point Travers.

A flag raising ceremony will open the mariner's service followed by the sound of ship's bells tolling the hour.

President of Prince Edward Marine Society, Commodore James Plomer, Black Creek, will read the scripture. A brief history of the Marine Memorial Park will be told July 18, when old salts from Prince Edward and surrounding districts gather for a Mariners' Memorial Service.

Following a tribute by Philip Dodds to sailors who have crossed the bar, a basket of flowers will be placed on the altar in their memory by Captain James Saylock. Guest speaker will be Reverend Wesley Neeland, minister of South Bay United Church.

Paper Mill Union To Monitor Plant

The Ontario Water Resources Commission has named, among companies being closely watched as less serious polluters, Dorster Pulp and Paper plants at both Trenton and Bath Road.

A blacklist of at least 11 pulp and paper companies causing pollution throughout Canada has been compiled by the Canadian section of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

The 41,000 member union of workers in these plants has advised the management of the companies that they will bring unfashioned pressure against them if the mills are found to be damaging the environment.

The list was compiled from information provided by the government in reply to requests made by the Canadian Labor Congress - affiliated union.

Prince Edward Island was the only province excluded from the questionnaire and all but Quebec and British Columbia replied.

Although in some cases the information was said to be incomplete, it also revealed that Ontario had the most offenders.

Named as serious polluters by the OWRC are: Eddy Forest Products, Espanola; Kimberly-Clark of Canada Ltd., St. Catherines; Abitibi Paper Co., Smooth Rock and Stanton Falls; Thurso Wood Fibre Co., Thorold; Gardon City Paper Mills Co., St. Catherines and Dryden Paper Co., Dryden.

The commission also said it is watching closely Canadian International Paper Co. at Hawkesbury, Kimberly-Clark at Terrace Bay, Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper at Fort Frances and Abitibi Provincial Paper at Thorold.

Ten Old Schools Realize $36,992

The capital fund account of Hastings county board of education is $36,992 richer through the sale last week of 10 schoolhouses.

The buildings were sold by tender to the highest bidders.

The eleventh school slated for sale — old Herman School — was retained by the board, presumably because the tender prices were too low.

The tenders were examined by trustees and the decision regarding their acceptance and rejection was made during the closed caucus session of the board following the June 29th meeting in Marmora.

The schools, with their buyers and the selling prices are: Quinte View School, Locas Axis, Trenton $8,000; Hogle's School, Gerald Hudson, Gananoque, $830; Wallbridge (old) G. Purvis, Belleville, R.R. 2, $1,300; Wallbridge (new), Thelma Hagman, Belleville, $5,500; Turners (old), Galway Realty, Toronto, $2,000; Turners (new), Galway Realty, $5,000; Glen Ross, W. Roberts, Central, Marmora Branch Royal Canadian Legion, $5,500; McArthur's Mills, George Unsh, Trenton $2,780; Fort Hill, Trenton, Township of Carlow, $4,000.

Cold War Again

The abrasive but relatively friendly and interesting days of former Premier Khrushchev are long since over in Russia, and indeed it appears that under the present regime life is taking on something of the still older Stalin ers.

Busts of the departed leader are back in vogue and other indications of the repressive conditions of his day are seen in the harassment of Western correspondents. There now is stricter censorship of what newsmen are sending out of the country and two United States correspondents have been expelled in recent days.

Canada is involved at another level; a report from Ottawa says that a September visit to Russia by Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien has been cancelled because of disagreement on the itinerary.

A spokesman in Mr. Chretien's office said the Minister wanted to see "the real Soviet North," but the Russians insisted on an itinerary equivalent to a commercial tourist route. Mr. Chretien decided he had better things to do at home.

We admire Mr. Chretien's decision; for one thing he will be saving the taxpayer money on what in any event might be regarded as just another ministerial "junket."

Provocative

In, recent years the big July 12 parade celebrating the Protestant victory in the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 has passed without incident in Northern Ireland. But now the region once again is in political ferment there is no doubt this year's turnout, scheduled for Monday (July 13), can only be regarded as an act of provocation.

An indication of the impotence of the Ulster government in this situation is the fact that Prime Minister Chichester-Clark has merely said he would be greatly relieved if the parade were cancelled. Since the administration relies almost totally on the vote of the Protestant Orangemen his dilemma may be appreciated.

Aggravating the situation is the intrusion of the Irish republican government in Dublin — with the secret visit to Catholics in Belfast's embattled Falls Road of Foreign Minister Patrick Hillery and his subsequent call for the Ulster government to either ban or re-route the Orangemen's parade.

The southerners' interference in Ulster's affairs of course makes any ban on the parade less likely. This means that Monday may well spark another explosion in the region's violent history. British troops will be out in force, but whether they will be able to maintain order remains to be seen.

Village Happening

What are the young people doing these days? Of course we are all aware of some of the more eccentric youthful fads that get into the papers and cause alarm and general consternation among people generally. But here is a report from The Globe and Mail which caught our fancy. It was accompanied by pictures of two pretty girls and Mail writer Nancy Dolman clowns by modelling one of her lampshades at a display of her craft yesterday at Mirvish Village. Her stall was one of many featuring a wide variety of crafts as pottery, leatherwork, candles and hand-dyed textiles. Folk singers, a Greek bouzouki band and a Moog sythesizer (a unique instrument, we understand) added to the fun. Cooking provided entertainment on a specially-built stage. Members of the cast of Hair roamed through the street following their matinee performance. Over in a potter's corner and a fortune teller was kept busy. The sun kept out of sight during the afternoon and there was a downpour that dampened the crowds gathered on Markham Street. The fair was arranged by Hair's Gale Garnett to celebrate Dominion Day and to raise funds for the United Nations World Youth Assembly." A good time we should think was had by all on this occasion in Toronto.

Almonte Scores

When it comes to attracting industry some communities are luckier than others. The Ottawa Valley town of Almonte has just broken what might be termed a 75-year run of bad luck — at least in the industrial aspect — by did so by with the opening of a $166,000 plant by Danline Canada Ltd., manufacturers of power-driven industrial brushes.

The firm, which has affiliates in the United States and Denmark, expects to build up a staff of 50 during a five-year period.

We trust that during this period the town will attract other industries as well. And really, it is not just a matter of luck; as Belleville has proved; a community must work at the business of promoting industry.

Clyde Kennedy's The Upper Ottawa Valley

Renfrew County Goes Into the Publishing Business

Ottawa Journal

It's easy to get caught up in a book on the Upper Ottawa Valley that begins with the refreshingly new outlook of dedicating itself "to the skilled explorers, lumbers, prospectors, artists and craftsmen who discovered and travelled the Ottawa River and its tributaries — the Indians." Starting from this proper and up-to-date point, Clyde C. Kennedy provides an absorbing history of the Valley in "The Upper Ottawa Valley, a glimpse of history," published recently by Renfrew County Council.

Mr. Kennedy's 228 page book stretches back to Indian copper workers who lived on Morrison's and Allumette Is lands 1,000 years ago. It is a chronicle of the personal triumphs of the Champlains and Brebeufs, of Archibald McKellar, J. R. Booth and Philemon Wright. Here is the lost but still living dream for an Ottawa Canal that began a century and a half ago, the discovery and disfigurements done to the U. S. of Champlain's astrolabe, and the story of life in the lumber camps and on the river boats.

Mr. Kennedy relies to some extent on work done by Harry Walker and Charlotte Whitton, and on the writings and photographs of the men who worked in the valley in the great lumber days. But for the most part his book is what Mr. Walker says in the introduction is "a fascinating fraction" of it. Kennedy's own knowledge gained in 25 years of travel and study in the Valley.

How many residents of the Valley know about the "Archaeology of the Ottawa River Drainage Basin" The "Stages in Explanation?" The story behind the fascinating places such as "Wesso (Wesson) Rock and "De Berlahs" (Barlow) Cut and Joachim?" The names of the canal being driven by the young Prince on his royal Australian tour Cobden in 1857 (Buck and Brie).

A writer who makes possible a description of the Ottawa River as having "elbow-ed its way across the Canadian Shield, venting its flood-time furies in rock-lined channels" and on the natural obstructions that forced the sharp turns in its course."

Mrs. Kennedy says, rightly, that to appreciate fully the unique backgrounds of the Valley one needs some personal experience there, but probably means more than just driving up to look at the scenery, or for residents of the Valley more than simply working there. We suspect he'll challenge his readers, both resident and visitor, to learn a bit more about the fascinating history of this area, and in this way learn to appreciate more fully our heritage and surroundings.

"It's times like these that make one proud to be an atheist."

Adult Contribution to Delinquency

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Some time ago I wrote you an article which was entitled, "The Permissive Generation Now and Then". I want to thank you for such an appropriate title. Since then I have come across a very fitting poem that goes along with what I had written to you. It goes like this: —

WHO'S DELINQUENT?
We read in the papers, we hear on the air,
Of killings and stealings and crimes everywhere:
We smile and we say as we notice the trend,
"This young generation, where will it end?"
But can we be sure it's their fault alone?
That maybe part of it isn't our own?
Kids don't make movies, they don't write books
That paint a gay picture of gangsters and crooks.
They don't make the liquor, they don't run the bars,
They don't make the laws, they don't buy the cars.
They don't make the drugs that addle the brain.
It's all made by older folks greedy for gain.
In far too many cases we find this to be true,
The label "DELINQUENT" fits older folks too.

The Go Go Generation is a terrific book for all youth to read. I found it very informative and full of understanding to the feelings of our youth today.

Praise for City From Motorcycle Competitor

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Recently I competed in the Muscular Dystrophy Benefit motorcycle race put on by the Belleville Firefighters and the Pirate Pushers Motorcycle Club.

I would like to comment on the fabulous and friendly treatment given to my mechanic, Lewis Pitch, and myself. Your sports editor, Maurice Fortner, did a story on me in your fine paper. He is a benefit to our sport of motorcycle racing which oddly enough is frowned upon by many people. We need all the good publicity we can get. I gave me pleasure to race in a meet knowing that the proceeds will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Organization.

Bert Waters and the Belleville St. John Ambulance should be commended too. At the race, the Pirate Pushers presented the St. John Ambulance with an attendance. I don't think this could be published enough to take the edge off some of the bad publicity we motorcyclists are getting.

We were guests at the Belleville Elks Lodge and received a warm welcome from them. We would like to thank them too. We are looking forward to competing in such a clean city as Belleville this coming July 24.

Church reformer John Calvin was born 461 years ago today—in 1508. His doctrine of Calvinism asserted the dogma of predestination, which said that God had chosen certain souls for salvation and others for damnation, and that these decrees were unalterable. The reformer was born at Noyon in France where he received a chaplaincy in the cathedral. Most of his reform work was done in Geneva.

Senior Citizens Enjoyed Zwick's Island Outing

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am taking this opportunity to thank the Belleville sponsors of the Sunday, July 5 free bus ride to Zwick's Island for the Senior Citizens to hear a real musical treat by the Belleville Band, under the direction of their able conductor Mr. Aseltine.

I would like to mention the young lady who so ably handled that awkward instrument, the big bass fiddle; she was a real artist.

Belleville has a band to be proud of. I would also like to mention our bandriver (Ernie) who was very courteous and informed about our comfort and care while on the bus.

Problems and Solutions

"The problems posed by life are a part of life; they are born; they wax great; and then they die. It is not always a question, complete with insight and enlightenment, that spells the end of a problem. In the social sciences, like biology, psychology, and politics, solutions have a way of shifting problems from one area to another, of solmating them, and, often, of "dkrying them to death. In fact, solutions are rarely a solution. In those sciences I have mentioned, problems die away, more often than not, of weariness and unprofitable." — George Dimbarnel.

Royal Visit

Devotion to Duty—and an Assertion of Sovereignty

Windsor Star

The current royal visit to the Maritime Provinces and Maine has may have as often in the future of the monarchy in Can ada. Indeed already it is proving two points — that the monarchy still serves a purpose for Canada, and that the affection of the throne are in good hands.

The visit of Queen Elizabeth and her family to the Arctic is a subtle yet powerful assertion of Canadian sovereignty in the far north. Every time that any show of military strength — and at a fraction of the cost — is displayed around the world that Canada is in charge in the Arctic.

The personal character of the Queen and the members of her family, as they go again unstreted through the widespread coverage of the northern trip. Canadians are once again seeing the Queen for what she is — a gracious, dignified woman conscious of her duty to the world that Canada is in charge in the Arctic.

Canadians are once again seeing the Queen for what she is — a gracious, dignified woman conscious of her duty to the world that Canada is in charge in the Arctic.

It is a curious anomaly that while many Canadians are showing a vast apathy toward the royal visit, one of the benefits to Canada of the visit will be the attention it attracts in the United States. Attention from that determinedly republican country has always been considerable, and is now concerned. That royalty is in the Arctic may bring home to Americans Canada's sovereignty there, at a time when its value is becoming important for the production and transportation of oil.

Thus the Queen fulfills her royal duty to a country where her services are so little valued that discussion of them is postponed as low on the official priority list. For her afternoon in Maine alone, she deserves a royal salute from Canada.

People Are Staying Younger Longer

How About Another Name for the Old-age Pension

Letter to
The Hamilton Spectator

Old Age Pension may or may not have been an apt name for the "benefit back at a time when man's life expectancy was only three score years and ten. Whatever one opines, it doesn't seem to belong in the context of 1970 when recipients now receive pension cheques at age 65 with a promise of a further lowering of qualifying age.

This is particularly so in a world where everything i's geared to "thinking young", and the so-called "oldsters" are busy doing things that once applied to middle - aged folk or even younger ones, and are destined to go to their graves at a much later date.

The time seems ripe to go after the changes one expects from such a "swinging Prime Minister" — a title he seems to have earned not only here at home but in our neighboring country to the South (Indeed, it is refreshing to find men and women there who know our PM's name — something that rarely happened in the past).

In any case, I feel sure the dear ladies who prefer their eager cheeks for bestowal of Mr. Trudeau's kisses now and then will be eternally grateful to him for any change in the name of the pension plan, as it might be forthcoming, come time when they will have to sit down and fill in an application for this stipend. And I believe the age of the dame would not suffer either from the benefit of a new and less inaccurate name.

In these days when Parliament has to grapple with so many grim problems in the usual course of events, it might be a nice change if one hour afternoon to take a little time out to deal with a light-hearted subject that does seem to have some merit.

It might be an idea to throw open to the whole nation the re-naming of the pension plan as was done in designing our new flag, and later to offer everyone a chance to choose a suitable theme song.

A suggestion to start the ball rolling:

"Retirement Earnings Appropriation Act" (REAP).

Committee Formed To Select Y Head

Russ Davey of the YMCA National Council was in Belleville again Tuesday evening to attend an executive committee meeting of the Family Y.

Mr. Davey presided at the meeting with a list of seven candidates as potential replacements for general secretary Jim Mowrey who handed his resignation last month.

A six - member hiring committee was immediately formed. The committee is empowered to select a new general secretary with Mr. Davey's list as the basis for the decision.

Salary range for the new general secretary is reported to be from $8,500 to $10,500. The salary decided upon will be commensurate with education and experience.

Fred Deacon reported this morning that the committee would like to hire the new general secretary before September 1, so that he will be able to subsidize the new fall program.

Unique Enterprise

Despite blindness, Garnet Budd operates flourishing business on farm near Eldorado. He raises rabbits — one of few such large scale enterprises in province.

Rabbit Business Big in Eldorado

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

ELDORADO — Garnet Budd is one of the most determined businessmen in the Quinte district.

His operation, on Highway 62 near this hamlet north of Madoc, is also the best-equipped of its kind in the country, he believes.

"There are no people in the business the way we are," says Garnet. "This is the most modern rabbitry in all Ontario — in all Canada."

There are commercial rabbits as well as commercial — reasons for such a top-notch facility.

This means the most functional layout possible, the best equipment available.

Today, it houses — at last count — about 1,600 rabbits, neatly quartered in trim rows of cages a controlled - temperature environment.

A machinist by trade, he started going blind about 19 years ago. Determined to find an alternate occupation, he and his wife finally decided they would prefer moving out of Toronto to live in the country.

They also were well acquainted with the Quinte area. For years they had their property at nearby Milbridge as a summer retreat.

Garnet was on hand for construction of the building to house the rabbitry, even doing some of the interior work himself.

Last September he began breeding — with 100 does and 15 bucks.

Today, he has 200-400 rabbits steadily breeding for the industry.

Rabbits, he says, can breed up to nine times a year if needed, producing anywhere from four to 15 offspring each time.

However, he prefers to keep breeding spans down to about five times a year.

"It's a big business and it's getting bigger all the time," he says.

Nonetheless, there are still few suppliers in the province, Garnet estimates.

Cages alone can cost up to $5,000. At the Budd farm, the pens even include individual waterfounts. A rabbit can serve itself water by simply pressing its nose against the fount. Inevitably, such self-service becomes a rabbi actions, says Garnet.

Because they have a poor lung system, rabbits need a controlled environment.

A feature of the Budd installation is an exhaust-fan air-circulating system which will ensure a prime product for the market.

Algae-Producing Phosphorous Could Be Cleaned Up by 1975

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

That thick green scum covering Quinte waters will vanish by 1975 if the Ontario Water Resources Commission approves a $30,000,000 algae reduction plan.

The plan to stop phosphorous from entering the water between Sarnia and Cornwall went to the OWRC in Toronto for approval yesterday. It was prepared by OWRC researchers.

Phosphorous from detergents, sewage and industrial wastes is termed nutrient pollution because it feeds the algae that rob water of oxygen and slimes its surface.

This morning, Laurence Scott, district engineer with the OWRC's regional office in Kingston, said target date for installing equipment for nutrient removal is 1975.

The date was set by the International Joint Commission on Boundary Water Pollution, an advisory body set up by both the United States and Canadian federal governments.

In its report, to be released later this year, it recommends that governments and municipalities aim for a 90 per cent removal of phosphate in sewage disposal systems' effluent along the lower Great Lakes by 1975. This includes Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the Upper St. Lawrence Valley.

David Caverly, general manager of the OWRC said that if the plan is approved, the first signs of improvement should appear in about 1½ years.

He said the program will remove at least 85 per cent of the phosphorus, "but we might be able to do better than that."

Money for the project would be spent mainly on removal equipment. The first permanent facility would be installed at Newmarket this fall.

Several treatment plants at Richmond Hill, Sault Ste. Marie and Newmarket have tried nutrient removal from time to time as an experiment.

The process, said Mr. Scott, is a combined chemical and settling operation. A chemical, (lime, iron or aluminum salts), is added to the sewage to precipitate out the phosphorus. Then it settles in the settling tanks and is removed with the sludge.

"The process has been known for some time," said Mr. Scott. "It is the reason for the delay in getting sensitive data on the sludge handling problem."

Lime, the contenders felt until because it is cheapest and easy availability, produces a dense, hard sludge that can't go into the digesters — the type of sludge handling tanks used at Belleville's sewage disposal plant.

"New methods of handling the sludge must be devised," said Mr. Scott. "It can be spread to a sanitary land fill area, or might be used as a fertilizer."

The sludge is high in nutrients needed in agriculture and contains lime. Lime-rich fertilizers can be applied to all land, even those infested with limestone bedrock, except in certain parts of the Niagara district and the Woodstock area.

Elimination of phosphates from municipalities or the Canadian side of the Great Lakes would be ineffective in alleviating algae unless a reduction co-operation is reached, he said.

Because the International Joint Commission is composed of both Canadian and American representatives, Mr. Scott was hopeful of a similar attack on the problem along the southern shores of the lakes.

Elimination of American pollution of the Great Lakes could be a powerful bargaining agent in negotiations concerning the diversion of Canadian waters to the United States.

Think of all the cool things about a frost-free refrigerator freezer.

Every housewife should have one. Frost never forms. Not in the big refrigerator section. Not in the big freezer section. So there's no defrosting. Ever. And you know what that means.

No more dripping water to mop up. No more waiting for frost to melt. Your ice cubes trays won't stick any more. No more re-freezing frozen foods.

You'll have more storage space, because you'll be free of all frost accumulation.
And your frozen foods won't stick together.
Think about it.
Think of all the extra space you'll have for stocking up on food bargains.
And besides all that, think how much more attractive your kitchen will look with a sleek new frost-free refrigerator freezer.
NOW is the time to buy.

Queen's Exchange Student Relates Experiences in Besancon, France

The University of Besancon in France is situated in the beautiful city bearing that name, namo. With a population of 75,000 people the city is surrounded by rolling hills and the River Doubs runs through its central portion.

Mary Devlin, 21 of Belleville was fortunate to spend a year there studying French at the university. She attended Queen's University in Kingston for two years then participated in the exchange program for students offered by the university.

Besancon is located in the Jura Mountains about 100 kilometres northwest of Switzerland. During her stay in France Miss Devlin took time out to visit Switzerland, Germany, England and Scotland.

Her accommodation facilities were rather interesting. She lived in an apartment building in Besancon with two German teachers but they were not allowed the use of any electrical equipment including irons. One shower a week was permitted and water is very scarce and thus expensive in France. She ate her meals at the university where prices were quite reasonable. Horse meat, pigs' feet and shark (dog fish) are popular meats with the French people.

The university she attended has approximately 10,000 students and it is known in France as a linguistic university.

"It was extremely well equipped with audio-visual equipment," she said.

"A high percentage of the students were foreigners from Italy, Arabia, Nigeria and America. There were comparatively few Canadians in attendance.

Miss Devlin mentioned that every university in France and even the high schools are politically orientated. The students are pro worker and for or the extreme parties such as the Proletarian Gauchiste which was recently banned. The members believe in reform by any means. However, the government is extremely afraid of left wing student groups, especially since the outbreak of students' demonstrations in 1968. The party paper is no longer permitted as well.

MISS MARY DEVLIN

It has since gone underground and now has emerged as a legal party under a new name. The paper has been taken over by the famous French novelist, Jean - Paul Sartre.

The French people are helpful to Americans and Canadians who address them in French. However, they are quite cold if you speak English," she said.

"Stores in France are quite different from the ones we are used to. Specialty store are found everywhere and there is just no such thing as an average store."

Miss Devlin spent two weeks in Paris. However, she prefers Germany. She visited a Canadian Forces Base in Germany and a little town outside the base called Schwartzac. Outside this village there was a graveyard founded in 1725 which is beautifully kept up by the village residents.

She noted that German students are very hard workers and they seem to be an extremely well organized but mechanical race.

It was a good experience and she hopes to visit France again as a tourist. "The best way to see a city is to walk it. Take a bus trip out of the city and one can see many sights the average tourist misses.

Miss Devlin will be attending Queen's in the fall for her fourth year and then she plans to teach French.

Report Found To Be Useful

OTTAWA (CP) — Ann Francis, chairman of the royal commission on the status of women, says the commission is finding "very useful" a report released to the public earlier this week on women working in the federal public service.

Miss Francis, a broadcaster known in private life as Mrs. John Bird, said Thursday the commission was given a copy of the report months ago and finds it interesting and well done.

One source said it is understood that the commission is making extensive use of the report, called Sex and Public Service. The commission had been represented on the advisory committee for the study.

By getting an early peek at the report as well as following its development, the commissioners have had an opportunity to base some of their thinking on it and this may be reflected in their own report, expected this fall.

Prepared under a contract issued by the Public Service Commission of Canada, Sex and the Public Service shows that for a long time the problem of women in the federal public service has not been one of equal pay for equal work, but lack of opportunity.

Done by sociologist Kathleen Archibald, a Canadian who studied at the University of British Columbia and who works for the Rand Corp. in California, the study says occupational segregation in the federal public service frustrates other policies aimed at putting women on an equal footing with men.

The Canadian government is the largest employer of women in Canada, with 49,000 females out of 150,345 full-time employees in 1967, she says.

But it had explicitly discriminated against married women during several lengthy periods. And although in the late 1961 and 1967 showed that women were hesitant to branch at the lower end of the salary scale.

The first wind the public got of the study was early last November when John Carson, chairman of the Public Service Commission, gave some of its conclusions in a speech in Montreal and said that equality of opportunity for everyone in the public service must be ensured.

He said then that the commission had accepted the report's recommendation that women already in the public service be encouraged to get "more persistent education and to work actively toward securing managerial training and experience."

The commission was pressing government departments to nominate a greater number of women for enrolment in the commission's career development program, a major effort in the field of executive development.

Ruth Addison, a commissioner for the Public Service Commission and chairman of the study's advisory committee, says the commission plans to set up a co-ordinating body in an effort to see that there is no discrimination in its recruitment. The commission is responsible for recruiting and promoting personnel for government departments and agencies.

Women Delegates Vow to 'Fight to Prevent the Murder of Unborn Innocents'

PEMBROKE, (CP) — About 100 delegates at the Ontario Catholic Women's League convention vowed Thursday to continue the "fight to prevent the murder of unborn innocents" through abortion.

In a resolution passed at the convention's final business session, the women agreed their "fight" to bring pressure on the federal government should "never be diminished."

The three-day convention, in this town 100 miles northwest of Ottawa, agreed to continually "remind ourselves of our obligation in this matter of abortion, using every means at our disposal to make our stand known."

The resolution called for resistance to all efforts for more permissive legislation in the matter of abortion.

Another major resolution passed said the league should show its displeasure through letters, cards and telephone calls whenever women are degraded or their dignity jeopardized in advertising or in the media.

Other resolutions included:

—A request of the federal and provincial governments to combine efforts to revise existing welfare plans and implement legislation to provide more adequate assistance benefits.

—A statement urging provincial governments to take firmer measures to step up the fight against pollution and to expedite anti-pollution controls. The women agreed to purchase low-phosphate detergents and cleaners.

The business session heard a number of complaints regarding the league's magazine and fees charged members.

Delegates charged The Canadian League was too slanted toward national news and not of great enough interest at the parish level. They also complained the fees were too high from diocese to diocese and should be made more uniform nationally.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Hales, Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sharon Lynn, to George Reginald Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney A. Elliott, Rexdale. The marriage will take place in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Saturday, August 1, at 2 p.m.

Artistic Use for Empty Bottles

JEDDORE OYSTER PONDS, N.S. (CP) — Keith Mitchell has solved the sticky problem of what to do with those non-returnable pop bottles. He cements them into the exterior of the house he is building in this eastern shore community. Six bottles at a time, with bottoms facing outwards, are cemented in the wall. He has used more than 25,000 bottles of date. "The bottles, which are green and clear, make a beautiful design," he said.

Speakers Rebuke Underpaid Women Dieticians

TORONTO (CP) — A male trade unionist and a female lawyer told women dieticians Wednesday they are underpaid because they have failed to form unions or work to establish themselves as professionals.

The unionist is H. M. Larsen of the Professional Institute of Public Service of Canada and the lawyer is Donna Haley, a legal representative of the Canadian Dietetic Association.

They were addressing a joint convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association and the Canadian Home Economics Association.

Mr. Larsen said that even though a nutritionist often works alone she should affiliate with other professional people such as nurses, physiotherapists and pharmacists to form a bargaining unit.

Mrs. Haley suggested that women dieticians should work through their provincial associations to establish a licensing system for the profession.

Both speakers warned that if the women do not act they will find themselves linked with orderlies and aides who work in the same institutions.

The recipients of this advice made it clear by their questions they do not like the idea of unionizing and coming under labor legislation.

Mrs. Haley told them the answer to this is to fight for provincial governments to take firmer measures to step up the fight against pollution and to expedite anti-pollution controls. The women agreed to purchase low-phosphate detergents and cleaners.

The business session heard a number of complaints regarding the league's magazine and fees charged members.

Delegates charged The Canadian League was too slanted toward national news and not of great enough interest at the parish level. They also complained the fees were too high from diocese to diocese and should be made more uniform nationally.

An Inferiority Complex Can Happen to Anyone

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Would you please help Jean Mum by handing that could be of use to my daughter? She is 12 and terribly self-conscious. She is a very bad inferiority complex.

I suffered from this myself when I was young (and still do at times) but have read "The Power of Positive Thinking" and other books by N. V. Peale. But I think they may be too advanced for her.

She is a good - looking girl and is very careful about her appearance. She doesn't care for school and gets quite poor marks. — Jill Mum.

Dear Mum: Do any of us get through our teens without some pangs of inferiority?

Look at it this way; As babies and small children we are inadequate physically everything. We learn better, the hard way, as we struggle up through the years. Why we should even hope to feel suddenly competent in these desperate last few years is beyond me.

Perhaps what your girl needs to know, most of all, is that no one is perfect; and that her classmates are just as anxious about whether they are making the grade, socially, as she is. If they hide it under a cloak of I - don't - give - a - darn bravado, they still suffer.

While being a good student isn't everything, it might help her general self - respect if she would determine to do her best. She should neither give up on school work not on social relations.

I am sending you some suggested reading for her.

* * *

Dear Doris: About a year ago you offered a step - by - step planning of a wedding. Each month to ask your bridesmaids and when to rent a hall. It was something that any bride to - be could find useful.

If you could locate this article for me it would be greatly appreciated. — Constant Reader.

Dear Constant: The one you want is "Wedding Countdown", Sterling with whom to do six months ahead, gradually works its way up to the Big Day.

Even gives some special instructions to the groom about marriage license, carriage and car — and getting a haircut.

Many a Canadian bride — and groom — have followed out these instructions to the letter and felt good about it. (Available to readers for 10 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope. Ask for "Wedding Count-Down".).

Dear Doris: Recently I came across the story of the Willow aPttern Plate. So fre-quently people wants to have the story that I decided to type it out and send it to you. — Mrs. O.

Dear Mrs. O.: Delightful! And for the benefit of the readers of The Intelligencer, here is the story about a girl betrothed to a rich father but in love with another, humbler, suitor. The lovers tries' eloping; father caught them. But a good genie changed them into two turtle doves who built their nest and dwelt happily in the garden.

Mrs. O. has also supplied a leaflet on the history describing "Two blue little people, a blue house, a blue weeping willow, a blue ship." It ends happily too, as all stories — or plates should.

Anyone may have a copy of the story and the belled of tendays in 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Newfoundland Handicrafts To Be Shown in Toronto

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Fifty years ago, Lady Harris, wife of the then governor of Newfoundland, and a small number of leading citizens decided something should be done to bring nursing and medical care to tens of thousands of Newfoundlanders living in isolated and scattered settlements.

A scheme was worked out with the government whereby women in the outports earned money by knitting and weaving to their homes to help defray the cost of district trained nurses from England.

The 50th anniversary of the Newfoundland Outport Nursing Industrial Association (Nonia) will be marked this summer with an exhibition of the handicrafts of the organization in the Toronto Gallery of the Canadian Guild of Crafts. The exhibition includes knitted and woven goods, Newfoundland food, travel posters and scenic slides.

Canadian National will help the celebration by sponsoring a party, on June 30, for freight and passenger coastal ship Nonia, named after the organization.

In 1920 Lady Harris received assistance from the Newfoundland government that trained nurses from England would be sent to the Island if the communities agreed to raise one-half of each nurse's salary.

A committee of six, appointed by the government, became the Outport Nursing Committee. Several nurses were engaged in England and took up their work on the island.

In 1923 Lady Allardyce, the new governor's wife, arrived in St. John's and undertook reorganization of the committee.

A central committee in the capital agreed to cover one-quarter of the nurses' salaries and the local committees another quarter. The remainder was to come from a government grant.

Garments from the British Isles were purchased for patterns and weaving began. were given by a trained weaver from the Grenfell Mission in St. Anthony, Nfld.

At a public meeting in January, 1924, the Newfoundland Outport Nursing Industrial Association was officially formed.

Materials and instructions were sent out from the St. John's depot to various local committees. Drugs and medical advice were also dispatched to the nurses when required.

In 1933, when government by commission came to Newfoundland, the department of health and welfare assumed control of all nursing services on the island, including those provided by 17 field nurses.

Divorced Man Wants To Do Right Thing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been a steady reader for many years. Now I need your help. I am a man, 61, who does not agree with all your answers but I respect you.

ANN LANDERS

I am divorced, comfortable financially, and I enjoy the company of the opposite sex. The problem is I am over the hill sex-wise and am wondering if I would be fair to marry a woman under these circumstances.

Is it possible to have a good marriage without sex? My first wife and I were married 22 years. We had a very satisfactory sex life but little else. Now I've met a woman who has added a great deal of joy to my previously dreary existence. We get along beautifully but I don't want to be unfair to her. Is companionship enough? — UNSURE.

* * *

DEAR UN: I suggest that you level with your lady friend. It's the best way to find out how she feels. But don't be surprised if there are some changes in your life. The problem of impotency in the vast majority of cases is psychological and often a new relationship might produce some high-octane fuel that will make you wonder what happened to those hills.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Something you wrote to the mother of a hippie son grabbed me. You said, "My advice is to tell the boy to shape up or ship out. If he ships out he will learn first hand what the world is like. And perhaps this is what he needs. There's something to be said for the school of experience. When your boy does come home — and most of them do — he will view in a different light many things he took for granted, like a clean bed, good meals and parents who cared too much and tried too hard."

You were so right, Ann. I just saw it happen. The son of our neighbor must have read your column. The day after it appeared he called his Dad and asked, "Can I come home?" His Dad answered, "Certainly. We are still a family and we still love you."

The kid lost no time in knuckling down. He gets up at 7:30 a.m. and goes to a job. He is putting himself through the University of Minnesota. He has joined the Sierra Club to pursue his interest in conservation. He is considering the Masonic Order. The change in this boy is like a miracle. His folks haven't been this happy since I've known them. Not all stories have such a happy ending but I thought you'd like to know of one that did. — C.L.G.

DEAR C.L.G.: I'm delighted! Thank you for the day-brightener.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a decision to make and I need your help. My husband wants nothing more to do with a couple we have known for a long time. He says he cannot tolerate the way the wife picks on her husband. Last night they had an argument and it spoiled the evening completely. On the way home my husband said, "That's enough of them. I can't take her any longer."

It is embarrassing at times and it bothers me, too, but I hate to step off the friendship. She'll wonder why. If she asks, should I tell her? — OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR OX: Your husband has the right to decide who he wants to spend time with. If he objects to the woman, respect his wishes. And tell her, if she asks, why you aren't making any more dates to be with them. It might improve their marriage.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Kristen is such a poor sleeper, but I guess I always was, too. Mother says I was popping out of bed until 10 or 11 o'clock at night. I feel so sorry for the poor child. It's frustrating trying to sleep when you can't."

Mother: "Kristen doesn't relax is quickly at night as some children do, but she knows she has to stay in bed, once we've said 'goodnight.' She can have her radio on very low and sometimes she sings softly until she drifts off to sleep."

A high-strung child may find relaxexercises an asset if parents feel it is something special. Help the child to realize sleep will come if she simply stays quietly in bed.

QUESTION: Would you mind repeating your Number 1 and Number 2 Chicken Divan recipes? They are old reliables with me but some greenie has mashed off with your recipe . . . Marie F.

ANSWER: Clever greenie! Do you know that those two articles of Chicken Divan were given here 31 January, 1967.

CHICKEN DIVAN NO. 1

- Grated Canadian Cheddar cheese (for topping)

Cook broccoli in boiling salted water about 10 min., or until tender. Drain, keep hot. Make a sauce by melting butter, stirring in flour until blended, then chicken stock until thick. When smooth, cook over low heat about 3 min., stirring. Fold in whipped cream (or table cream if used) and sherry (if used) and grated cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Place cooked broccoli on shallow baking dish and pour half the sauce over. Arrange chicken slices over sauce-covered broccoli. Pour remaining sauce over and sprinkle with additional grated cheese. Bake in oven at 350 deg. F.for. until bubbly and golden, about 20-30 min. Serves 4.

Sudden Death Claims Kemo

Kemo, the Quinte area's first police dog to die, died suddenly after only nine months of duty.

He was assigned from training school to Belleville district OPP headquarters last November.

During his span of duty with handler Const. Ted Arburn, Kemo made himself an indispensable unit of police investigations, tracking fugitives and seeking out clues at crime scenes.

He made a swift reputation shortly after his assignment to Belleville when called on to track three escapees from Warkworth penitentiary.

Kemo led police unerringly across country in a night-time pursuit that led directly to the wanted men hidden in an old barn.

Const. Arburn said Kemo showed spirit of fitness in his kennel at the officer's home yesterday afternoon. He was taken to a veterinarian who diagnosed possible heatstroke.

The dog was given an injection but died later in the day.

The officer said organs from Kemo's body will be examined to determine exactly the cause of death.

The nature of their work demanded both officer and dog to be inseparable. When not on special assignments, they patrolled together. Kemo is a special cage in the back of an OPP cruiser.

"Kemo was quite a dog," said Const. Arburn. "I'm really sorry to see him go."

Insp. R. L. Bender said today a successor to Kemo will be trained for duty in the Belleville district.

Quinte Harness Racers Hold 'Stake-out' Saturday

A total of 20 harness racing drivers are hoping to order a rare "stake" when the Quinte Riding and Driving Club serves up a $4,000 help-ing in a divisional Ontario Harness Horse Association Invita- race at the Belleville track Saturday night.

Combining the influx of newcomers, with what should be some hot-and-heavy competition among the "regulars," should lead to one of the best cards of the racing season.

The Belleville track has landed one division of the stakes races, which will be run in nine sections on "B" class tracks across Ontario. Each of the three heats of Saturday's stake races will be worth $1,500 to the winner, as well as a chance to compete for the $3,000 prize in the finals, sometime in September.

Other divisional races will be taking place at such tracks as Owen Sound, Orono, Peterborough, Dresden and Orangeville.

The competition has drawn entries from such distant points as Sarnia, Ottawa and Sudbury, to the Belleville track. The only local horse eligible in the races is Bernard Hunt's Mr. Tweedy.

Saturday's supporting cast promises some first rate action, particularly in the trotting race, which shapes up as a battle between two of last week's winners, Nilo Dillard and Dr. Grass.

Al Vance's brown 13-year-old mare turned in a 2:11 mile to record the fastest time of last week's card, but should face a serious challenge from Dr. Grass.

The big six-year-old bay gelding has finished in the money in every race this year for owner Gord Irwin, including a first in last week's card.

"He's a strong horse, so he can get out pretty good," says Jack Irwin, who helps his father train the four horses in the Irwin stable. "If you can get to the front with him he'll stick in there."

Joining the father-and-son training team is Gord Irwin Jr., who looks after the driving duties of the family.

Besides Dr. Grass, the Irwins will be sending Cash Princess to the post in the fifth race. The bay mare is attempting to get back into top form after some early-season troubles.

Host to Squirts

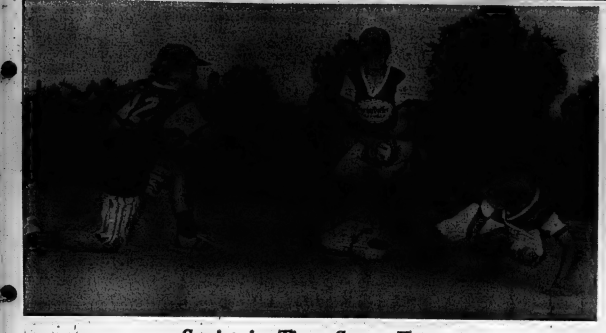
Deacon Brothers Hope Practice Pays Off

By RANDY DERRY
Staff Sportswriter

Weeks of hard practice and house league play will show its worth this Saturday for the Deacon Brother Squirts as they host nine other teams from across central Ontario in the annual Belleville Squirt Softball Tournament.

The tournament runnier all day, beginning at 8.30 and ending with the championship games at 4 and 6 p.m., will have the use of the Alemite and Queen Victoria School diamonds. Teams from Napanee, Springbrook, Willowdale, North Bendale, Shannonville, Port Perry and Cobourg will join Belleville in the ten - team field.

"We played in the pewee house league all season where we won two games. And all of our players were in the squirt house league so we have had plenty of playing experience and practice," says manager Jim Campbell. "We have a strong defence and all we need is a little more hitting."



Belleville were last year's 'B' Champions and have an excellent chance of repeating as a group winner. "We play Cobourg our first game Saturday morning which should decide whether we continue in the B group or move on to the A side. Cobourg was All - Ontario OASA champions last year so they have to be considered pretty strong," adds Campbell.

But the best Deacon Brothers cannot be taken lightly. Their skills earned them a place as a fall-in in last week's Pewees tournament in which they won their first contest. They have a strong pitcher in David McBride who has a no-hitter to his credit already this summer, and the team if elevating tyke pitcher Tim Soule as a reliever. Tim is a real strong little chucker. We picked him up for the tournaments and OASA playdowns, and if needed I'm sure he'll put on a good show, Campbell added.

"The competition seems to be from the Cobourg entry and the Toronto teams who always have some big boys, but I'm sure we can stop the Toronto teams."

Other first - round games find Napanee playing Springbrook at 11.30 on the Queen Victoria diamond; Willowdale meeting North Bendale at 11 a.m. and Shannonville battling Port Perry in an 11 o'clock game. The winners will advance into the semi-finals.

All the ballplayers will find free lunch and refreshments provided by the Belleville Minor Softball Association awaiting them at Queen Victoria.

Squirt in Time Saves Two

McConnell Settles Cementmen with 6-3 Win

Rollins Construction rode a strong pitching performance by Wayne McConnell and a diversified hitting attack into a first - place Commercial Softball League tie with idle Ellis Junkers, by whipping Point Anne 6-3 Thursday.

In the first game City Hotel overcame a two - run deficit to edge Corby's 3-2 and vacate the cellar.

Rollin's jumped out in front early in the game as Ralph Place squeezed in Brian Hardy on a perfect bunt. A rare Rick Rossbach error allowed Jerry Hill to score the second run for Rollins which stood up until the fifth inning when a four run outburst cemented the Rollin victory.

Wayne McConnell's double and Ralph Plane's second squeeze bunt were the big hits of the inning.

The Cementmen were saved from a shutout embarrassment by a bases - loaded seventh inning triple by Larry Fraser. Fraser was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a homer.

Don Holoway tossed eight hit ball for Point Anne striking out ten Rollin batters and issuing only two free passes.

Expos Hold Kingston Tryouts

The tryout camps is one of 13 to be held across Ontario this summer. It is open to all baseball players from 15-19 years of age, and will be held at the Cricket Field. In case of rain, the camp will shift to the Cost Youth Centre.

The camp will be conducted by scout Rodger Brulotte, former ml league pitcher Gus Piche and Claude Ct. Vincent, who was player - manager for three years at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

"We have other scouts have been through the country, but we believe no one has really looked deep enough into the potential", says Brulotte

Registration will take place at 9.30 a.m. followed by workouts for infielders and pitchers, batting practice at noon and player cuts at 1 p.m. There will be an exhibition game at three o'clock in the afternoon for players surviving the cuts.

Track Club to Take Part In Oshawa Bid

Forty-five delegates of the Kinsmen Track Club will be representing Belleville at Saturday's festivities in Oshawa as that city launches its bid for the 1973 Canada Summer Games.

The track team will be leaving by bus from Centennial Secondary School at 6.45 Saturday morning to participate in the provincial track meet and mammoth parade, expected to include 8,000 marchers.

Soccer Minors Serving Goose Eggs

The home team had the advantage in Belleville Minor Soccer games Thursday night as the visiting clubs were shut out in both cases.

R. Skelly had a field day for Jim's as he counted five times in his team's victory. Peter Barrage and J. Newman were the other scorers against Lamonds.

Modern Hair got goals from Cathcart, Weaver and Ryall in defeating National.

Posties in Line For 'Brake' Job

Four Post Office pitchers couldn't apply this brakes to the CN Gooderhes as the tracmen roared to a 13-0 Industrial Softball win last night.

Frank "Junior" Day got errorless support from his teammates who handled 19 chances to record the five-hit shoout. He walked one batter and struck out two.

Bruce Nickle started for the Posties, giving way to Paul Willems in the fourth, George Johnson in the fourth and Brian Garlepy in the seventh. They allowed 15 hits and five walks, while fanning four batters.

Doug Bobe found the Post Office servings to his liking, as he belted a pair of homers. Junior Day laced two singles and a double, while Don Conway had three singles. Mike Fahey and Wayne Branton each had two hits.

Brian Garlepy and Gord St. Louis each collected two hits for the losers.

In the other game played, AGCO poured across nine runs in the sixth inning to come up with a 10-4 win over Delora Steilite.

Ron McCoy took the win on a nine-hit effort. He walked three and struck out two batters.

Union Carbide edged the Moreh Marketers 7-6 on a two-run rally in the Mariners' last at-bat fell just short.

Lou Smyka survived 11 Morch hits to get the win. He walked three and fanned five.

Harvey's Get Baseball Mileage

The Belleville Minor Baseball game played Thursday night proved that gasoline rationing will never replace the mileage received from hamburgers.

Case in the case of small boy, as Harvey's Hamburgers Tykes shattered Warner's Expo 20-5.

Andy Lupenette and Mike Burke picked up the win for Harvey's fanning ten batters and walking seven. Burke also was the epitome of burger - power as he crunked two homers, a double and a single to lead Harvey's at bat.

Chris Ripley and Bruce Hamilton took the loss for Wannamakers giving up 14 hits and striking out ten. Ripley's two singles were the best for Exec team believe it or not.

Brill Gets Bends

EDINBURGH (CP) — Debbie Brill, Canada's 17-year-old high-jump sensation, was the centre of attention here Thursday as local sports observers marvelled at her ability to clear up to six feet by diving head first over the bar.

It was suggested that the tall and slender Debbie might have perfected the variation of the famed Fosbury Flop, a technique which enabled American Bob Fosbury to set an Olympic record of seven feet, 4¼ inches at Mexico City in 1968.

Not so according to Debbie, who explained:

"When the Mexico Olympics were on, Dad said to me there was a guy jumping the way I do. He was called Fosbury. Well, I was only 11 then and didn't know much about him, but I suppose he hadn't heard of Bob either."

Despite a persistent sacroma-r o i l i a c d e f e c t, Canada's athletics bequest travelled in earnest for the Games which will take place July 16-25.

Barbeau Bops Towers

An outstanding five - goal performance by Rick Barbeau highlighted Belleville Minor Soccer action Thursday night as his Queen's Motor Hotel mates bounced Towers Food City 6-4 and Bud Gill Appliances shorted Simpson Sears 16-1.

Don Cowan added toe odd goal for Queens with Roger Chapman getting two goals and Gordon Male and Leo Markwell one each for Towers.

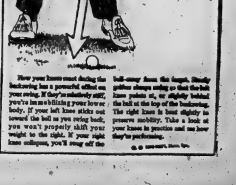
Artistic Pulls Win Over Weese's

Weese's Flowers are finding the going rough in the Ladies Softball League as they dropped a 14-4 decision to Artistic Ladies Wear in a Thursday night game.

Sue Morton went the distance for Artistic allowing 12 hits while fanning three and walking the same number. Morton also had three singles as did Barb Leech to lead the ladies at bat.



Donna Brack, Nora Barbeau-stock and Irma Barbeau-stock all saw action on the Weese's mound and together gave up 18 hits and four walks while striking out four batters. Sheilla Ray had a home run and two singles to pace Shannonville at the plate.

Billy Cooper Says:

How your knees react during the following has a powerful effect on your swing. If they're relatively stiff, you're in as whirling a your bow-er body. If you left knee sticks out toward the ball as you swing back, you won't properly shift your weight to the right. If your right knee collapses, you'll snap off the ball-away from the target. Steady pattern always swing so that the ball has to pass in front of the left knee. Then, as the ball is hit, your weight is on the right side of the batter's box. There will be an exhibition game at three o'clock in the afternoon for players surviving the cuts.

Trevino Has Formula: 'Just Give Me 71s'

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "Just give me two straight 71s and I've got the British Open golf championship in my pocket."

That was Lee Trevino's modest assessment today after shooting a four-under-par 68 Thursday in the second round of the British Open for a total of 136 and a one-stroke lead over field of 80 survivors from an original 154.

Even though defending champion Tony Jacklin, Jack Nicklaus and a host of American and rising British challengers are breathing down his neck, the 31-year-old golfer from Dallas, Tex., is confident he can stay in front.

"When you've leading, you can afford to miss one now and then," Trevino said. "Anybody who says he wants to come from behind is a liar.

"I promised my wife four tbs here and I got two of them. If I get two 71s, I'm in."

Trevino carried five birdies en route to his 68 Friday, leaving him one shot ahead of Jacklin and Nicklaus.

Two strokes back of the leader were four Englishmen—Neil Coles, Tommy Horton, Clive Clark and John Richardson—along with Doug Sanders of the U.S. and South Africa's Harold Henning. Arnold Palmer of the U.S. and Christy O'Connor of Ireland were another stroke back at 140.

The shabbiest Trevino has won his share of other titles, but this is the one he wants now—the title on the ancient Old Course where the game was born and which has become a "must" for the top Americans.

"I like it." Trevino said. "This is a course where a good shot is rewarded and a bad shot is penalized."

Trevino led a contingent of 17 Americans into the third round, knowing that a half-dozen British aficianos of the sport are offering their slimmest fight in a long time.

The 6,851-yard par-72 Old Course was as fickle as usual Thursday, smiling one minute and lashing its scorpion's tail the next just in case anybody got cocky.

"You've got to watch it every minute, not only on the ground but up there in the air," Trevino said.

The low 55 and ties continue Saturday for the 18-hole final for total prize money of $100,000.

Having A Blast

Bowerman Down List

Milwaukee (AP) — Bob Mezza, a second-year tour pro from Andover, Mass., fired an opening-round six-under-par 66 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead in the $110,000 Greater Milwaukee open golf tournament.

The 28-year-old bachelor edged the 150-yard 16th and dropped in birdie putts on 4, 6, 10, 14 and 18.

Mezza's 66 came early in the day. Then a brisk wind swept the 7,135-yard par 72 course and helped keep all challengers at least two strokes off the pace.

Top Canadian was Ken Fulton of Ste. Julie, Que., at 72, six strokes off the pace. Al Balding of Toronto was in at 73 while Gary Bowerman of Toronto fired a 74 and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg was another stroke back at 75.

Lots of 'Can' in Can-Am

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (CP) — Canadian content in the million-dollar Can-Am Challenge series is strong this year. Heading up the Canadians for the third round at Watkins Glen, N.Y., on July 12 is Roger McCaig of Toronto, whose Paul-Cooke prepared McLaren now is second in the over-all standings with 18 points.

Tied with Dennis Hulme in fifth place is Toronto's George Eaton in a factory BRM Can-Am car. Eaton finished in third place at St. Jovite, Que.

John Cordts of Toronto has not finished in either of the first two rounds. But, while running, he's been near the top and his McLaren has been thoroughly overhauled for Sunday's event.

Rainer Brezinka of Toronto was a surprise contender with one of the older McLarens. His car has finished in both rounds, once driven by Brezinka and once by Horst Petermann. This team will enter in both the six hours manufacturers championship which runs Saturday and the Can-Am Sunday.

Gordon Dewar of Ottawa has six points on the over-all standings with his McLaren.

The Spirit of Edmonton was late materializing at Mosport, Ont., then was involved in the first lap crash with Jackie Oliver at St. Jovite. But the young New Zealand driver, Graeme Lawrence, is looking for a better finish at Watkins Glen.

Bombers Blitz Ticat Offence

HAMILTON (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers shattered a spluttering Hamilton offence before 16,159 fans Thursday night, striking for three touchdowns in one minute and 36 seconds of the second quarter en route to a 29-12 victory in Canadian Football League exhibition play.

Taking advantage of an offensive lapse by a Ticat unit comprised of second-string players, the Winnipeg defence cashed in on the breaks to rack up 21 points and overwhelm the 12-0 Hamilton lead to that point.

Bob Hoernschemeyer, Doug Strong, Ed Ulmer and Dave Washington scored the Winnipeg touchdowns. Gene Lakusiak converted all four and added a single on a 38-yard field-goal attempt that was wide.

Veteran Willie Bethea ran for the lone Hamilton touchdown while Tommy Joe Coffey kicked field goals of 13 and 40 yards.

The Ticats held their own as long as they went with their veterans, when coach Joe Restic said earlier in the week would probably start the season unless their ranks were drastically depleted by injuries.

But when Restic began experimenting with newcomers to the club, the ones he refers to as his depth players, Blue Bombers defenders and a capable offence directed by quarterback Wally Gabler took charge.

Even after Restic revived his old guard, the Blue Bombers were gaining momentum and took advantage of Hamilton penalties in the second half to add to their score behind two rookie signal callers—Ron Johnson and Don Weiss.

Seals' Plot Thickens

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Complicated negotiations to complete the sale of Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League to Charles O. Finley were put into their second day today.

A battery of attorneys for Finley, owner of the Oakland Athletics baseball club of the American League, and for Trans National Communications, Inc., met all day Thursday and part of Thursday night without wrapping up the $4,500,000 purchase by Finley.

There was no announcement from either side, but one source said the two parties were "miles apart" when the night session ended. Outstanding are debts and certain delayed contracts were major hangups, this source said.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said in Montreal Wednesday Finley has until next Wednesday to complete the purchase under terms of sale approval given by the league several weeks ago.

Bossi Boss

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Carmelo, Brazil of Italy outpointed champion Freddie Little of the United States in a close 15-round decision and won the world junior middleweight boxing title here Thursday night.

Bossi reserved in the first rounds of the match with strong combinations of rights and lefts to Little's face to take an edge over the American.

Canada's Wrestlers

Medal Chances Grow Dimmer

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's chances for a gold medal were dimmed Thursday at the world amateur freestyle wrestling championships as five of its nine hopefuls were eliminated and four others needed a win to stay in contention.

The United States, however, appeared to have a chance to spite the inability of Rich Sanders of Portland, Ore., current world champion, to compete in the 114½ pound division.

Fred Foxrard of Stillwater, Okla., world champion in the 180½-pound class, lost his first match, but came back in his second bout and pinned Harish Chander of India in just 25 seconds.

Foxrard lost on points to Ivan Ivanov of Bulgaria in a morning match—a replay of last year's championships when Ivanov beat the American. However, in 1975, Ivanov was disqualified for allowing a Russian to win a bout and Foxrard assumed the title.

Bob Douglas of Ames, Iowa, won two matches Thursday. He out-pointed Sali Ovali Seter of Yugoslavia, but suffered a concussion. Doctors told him he shouldn't wrestle again, but Douglas went out and pinned Upien Kazimirov of Poland in just 53 seconds of a scheduled nine-minute match.

Max Rapport, U.S. team manager, said whether Douglas wrestles today will be determined by his condition at that time. Douglas fought Kazimirov with a heavy bandage around his neck.

Canadian wrestlers eliminated in two straight bouts were:

Ian Shand of Toronto, 105½ pounds; Herb Singerman of Montreal, 125½; Alfred Wurz of Winnipeg, 198; Claude Pilon of Ottawa, 158; and heavyweight Mary Holden of New Westminster, B.C.

Dave Stitt of Toronto, 114½ pounds; Pat Bolger of Dutton, Ont., 180½; one of the top-rated Canadians in the championships, and Ernie Fulton of Vancouver, 220; each had four penalty points after two rounds.

Nick Schori of Stratford, Ont., who took a 12-4 decision over Jesus Blanco of Argentina in a first-round 180½-pound match, was knocked by Tatsuo Sasaki of Japan in 2:38 of a second-round bout. Schori has five penalty points.

Other U.S. wrestlers, who have an excellent chance for gold or silver medals, are Wayne Wells of the University of Oklahoma, 163 pounds; John Morley of New York, 114½ pounds; Don Behm of Lansing, Mich., 125½ pounds; and Mike Young of Brigham Young University, 136½ pounds.

In the over-all race, it was difficult to pick the power after two preliminary rounds in each of the 10 weight classes. However, Russia, Japan, the U.S., and Iran are expected to do as well as they did in the 1969 tournament at Argentina.

Last year, Russia won four gold medals in freestyle while the U.S., Iran and Japan each took two.

Bulgaria, Turkey, Mongolia, Yugoslavia and Hungary are among the other countries who have turned in outstanding performances in the wide-open competition.

Akihito Umeda of Japan, 105½ pounds; Hideki Yanagida of Japan and Laszlo Klinga of Hungary, both in the 125½-pound class; Ismail Ismailov of Bulgaria and Nazula Nuayfaev of Russia, both 149½-pound bracket, each had two pins Thursday to lead their divisions. They had no penalty points.

James Astig of Mongolia, Vasile Iorga of Romania and Horst Slottmeister of East Germany were still positions after two rounds in the 180½-pound division, along with Rousi Petrov of Bulgaria in the 198-pound section.

Freestyle finals are scheduled Saturday night.

Jones Can Claim Grand Slam Single

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The longest single of Dalton Jones' career and the shortest rain delay in baseball history has combined to help Baltimore's East Division leaders widen batting distance in the American League.

Jones delivered what appeared to be a pinch hit grand slam homer Thursday night but was credited with only a single when he passed teammate Don Wert on the basepaths. The mental blunder did no harm because three runs scored on the play and Detroit Tigers went on to whip the Boston Red Sox 7-3.

New York Yankees, in danger of having a three-run rally in the top of the sixth in Baltimore wiped out by rain, erupted a half in play long enough for a shower to blow over. They managed to get another inning in, making their rally legal and beat the Orioles 7-3 in a game ended by curfew after 5½ innings.

Elsewhere in the American League Thursday night, Washington Senators whacked Cleveland Indians 9-3; Chicago White Sox edged Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, and Minnesota wins topped California Angels 4-2, Kansas City Royals and Oakland Athletics were off.

The Tigers and Red Sox were tied at 2-3 in the seventh when Jones belted a two-out drive off the facing of the right field stands with the bases loaded. He was admiring the shot when he passed Wert between first and second and was called out on the technicality infraction.

"I was real excited about the hit," said Jones. "I was watching it and I never realized Wert was there. About half-way between first and second I came to my senses and hoped the umpire didn't see it. But he did. I've never done that before. I've never hit a grand slam either."

The victory moved the second-place Tigers within six games of Baltimore. The Birds bowed to New York when the Yankees rallied for three unearned runs in the sixth inning — the last two on Jerry Kenney's bases-loaded single.

The start of the game was delayed 27 minutes by rain and it sprinkled throughout. The rain began coming down in earnest with Baltimore at bat in the bottom of the sixth and with two out and a 1-1 count on Don Buford, umpire Hank Soar signalled for the field to be covered.

Had the game been called at that point, the New York runs in the top half of the inning would have been erased and Baltimore would have won 5-4.

Brooks Not Overlooked

BOSTON (AP) — Third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore Orioles and outfielder Tony Oliva of Minnesota Twins were added to the American League all-star squad today as the 28-player roster was filled for the annual mid-season classic with the National League next Tuesday.

Robinson, beaten out by Minnesota's Harmon Killebrew for a starting berth in the fans' balloting, was named for the 14th consecutive year, while Oliva was picked for the seventh straight time since he joined the Twins as a rookie.

Other reserves chosen by manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore, who will pilot the AL club at Cincinnati next week, and announced by the league, were catchers Ray Rosar of Cleveland Indians and Jerry Moses of Boston Red Sox, infielders Sandy Alomar and Jim Fregosi of California Angeles and Tommy Harper of Milwaukee Brewers, and outfielders Ady White of New York Yankees, Amos Otis of Kansas City Royals, Willie Horton of Detroit Tigers and Alex Johnson of California.

Outfielder Al Kaline of Detroit, named by Weaver as a squad member for the 17th time in his 18 major league seasons, was injured earlier this week and Moses was picked to replace him on the roster.

Barring injuries, the Orioles will have seven players in uniform and the Angels four for the all-star game.

The Yankees and Twins each will have three representatives, Boston, Detroit and Cleveland two each, and Washington, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Chicago the minimum of one apiece.

Bench Hits Pair in Vain

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves bungled big comebacks Thursday night, then lost extra-inning cliff-hangers.

Johnny Bench slammed a pair of two-run homers as the Reds made up a 9-1 deficit before bowing to San Diego Padres 17-16 on Steve Hamr's' sacrifice fly in the 10th inning.

The Braves erased a 6-0 San Francisco lead with one eighth-inning thrust, but the Giants rebounded to win a 7-6 nod on Dick Dietz' run-scoring ground out in the 11th.

Elsewhere in National League play, New York Mets rocked Montreal Expos 7-1, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 and Houston Astros thumped Los Angeles Dodgers 9-5. Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago Cubs were idle.

The Padres gained rookie pitching ace Wayne Simpson for nine runs in the 2 1-3 innings he lasted, but Bench's fourth-inning homer started Cincinnati on the way back and the all-star catcher unloaded his 28th homer of the season in the eighth before pinch hitter Bernie Carbo's three-run wallop tie it up.

Simpson, who started in quest of his 11th straight victory and 14th of the season, escaped his second setback as a result of the abortive Cincinnati rally. It marked the first time in 18 starts that he has failed to go at least five innings.

The Giants' Juan Marichal was lowering toward his first shutout of the season when Atlanta struck suddenly in the eighth. Felix Millan singled and Orlando Cepeda homered for two runs; Mike Lum doubled home another and Cleta Boyer rapped a tying three-run homer.

But Willie Mays singled in the 11th off Bob Priddy, moved to third and scored the winning run on Dietz' roller to the mound.

Dietz drove in two earlier runs with a single for a total of 13 RBI in the four-game series.

Tom Seaver stopped Montreal on three hits and bit his first major league home run route his 14th victory and Ron Swoboda drilled a grand slam homer as the Mets rolled to their seventh straight win.

The Pirates received 11½ games behind first place New York in the NL East by tuning the Cards on the first pitch-hitting of Dock Ellis. Singles by Roberto Clemente, Jose Pagan and Bill Mazeroski plus two errors by shortstop Jim Kennedy keyed a four-run burst in the fifth.

Denis Menke hit a grand slam homer in the first inning and stroked a run-scoring single in the third as the Astros stopped Los Angeles' winning streak at seven games and ended their own tailspin at five.

TORONTO (CP) — Joan O'Shea, a 44-year-old New York housewife, took Impetuous Red to a third-place finish Thursday and became the first woman jockey to ride in an Ontario thoroughbred race. Mrs. O'Shea, also the first woman jockey licensed to ride in New York State, received a loud round of applause from the crowd of 6,000 at Woodbine racetrack after breaking alertly with the field of 11 other non-winners in the 1-16-mile event, she took Impetuous Red back to last place and stayed there until the final turn when she made her move.

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Radio station KRLD says it has learned the National Football League Players' Association, in a special delivery letter, has ordered its members not to report to training camps until further notice. The Dallas radio station said the letter, signed by NFLPA president John Mackey, said several outstanding issues have been resolved in the current round of meetings in New York between players' representatives and the owners. KRLD said the letter added however, that there are several other important issues including pension benefits, still in doubt. Earlier this week, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle ordered the start of training camps moved back to next Tuesday while committees try to work out their differences.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gary Pitchford of Toronto carded a two-under-par 70 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Manitoba Open golf championship. The 24-year-old Toronto pro, who had a sizzling 67 in his first round of the Canadian Open last week only to explode in the next round and miss the cut, put together nine hole scores of 35-35 to hold his one-stroke edge entering the second round today. The field of 128 golfers will be reduced to the top 60 and ties prior to the final round of the 54-hole tournament Saturday. Close behind Pitchford in the $8,500 championship were five players, including two amateurs, with one-over-par 71s. Among those was Ontario open winner Billy Wright Jr. of Edmonton.

NL Stars Getting Rusty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giant catcher Dick Dietz, Montreal Expo Rusty Staub, Chicago Cub outfielder Jim Hickman and several other players slighted by voting baseball fans were, among those added Thursday to the National League all-star team.

Gil Hodges, manager of the world-champion New York Mets, selected two catchers, five infielders and five outfielders to complete the team that will face the American League next Tuesday in Cincinnati.

Hodges earlier named an eight-man pitching staff. The starting line-up was determined in a vote by fans.

Named along with Dietz and Hickman were catcher Joe Torre of St. Louis Cardinals, infielders Bill Grabarkewitz of Los Angeles Dodgers, Bud Harrelson of New York, Willie McCovey of San Francisco, Denis Menke of Houston Astros, Felix Millan of Atlanta Braves, and outfielders Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates, Clarence Gaston of San Diego Padres and Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds.

"I would rather not participate," said Clemente. "Every morning it's the same way. I can hardly move my neck. I've been playing in pain."

He said he has been undergoing treatments for the recurring condition. The Pirates are in St. Louis for a series with the Cardinals.

Dietz was not listed on all-star ballots and didn't get enough write-in support to finish in the top six catchers, despite a batting average over .300.

Hickman, one of the league's top hitters, also needed write-in help and failed to get it. Grabarkewitz, Gaston and Staub were other players overlooked by the fans but not by Hodges.

McCovey, the league's most valuable player in 1969, also was the star of last year's all-star game with two home runs and three RBIs.

Rose, who won his second-straight batting championship last season, has been named to the all-star team six times. He was fourth in the all-star voting for outfielders.

THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

"Well, if you don't know of any countries where they don't throw rocks at Americans, what countries have the smallest rocks?"

Stewart Opposes Quick Ban of Chemicals

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Agricultural chemicals should not be removed from the market before they are proved dangerous in realistic laboratory experiments, William Stewart, Ontario agriculture minister, said Thursday.

He told the Canadian Seed Growers Association:

"Let us be very much aware of the fact that the complete banning of a chemical will only lead to the introduction of chemicals to take its place, too often without the proper knowledge of effects of the new chemicals."

New Rules Cover 39 Townships

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Mines Minister Allan Lawrence said Thursday new provincial regulations governing pit and quarry operations affect all 39 townships which touch or are near the face of the Niagara Escarpment.

"No one can relax on the face of the escarpment nor can they relax within 300 feet of the top of the face. Both these prohibitory restrictions include future as well as existing operations," he told a service club.

The mines minister was outlining the provisions of 1963 78, the Niagara Escarpment Protection Act passed by the legislature June 26 to preserve the escarpment from indiscriminate pit and quarry operations.

The face of the escarpment, which runs from the Niagara Peninsula to the tip of the Bruce Peninsula, will be defined by maps to be issued in the near future, Mr. Lawrence said.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Man Works His Own Ruin

On dark days, when all the news is bleak, there seem to me only three avenues left open to the human race — mass psychoanalysis, mass conversion or mass extinction.

Everybody complains about "conditions" or "situations"; or "scary states of affairs," but virtually all these conditions and situations and states are created by human beings and not by the objective world we live in.

In one of his great sermons, John Donne concluded, "I am mind' own executioner," and he was speaking for all of us, not just for himself. We are the enemies of our own survival and welfare.

Salvation is not to be found outside ourselves — in our institutions, our laws, our education, our social or political or economic systems. We can make improvements in all these — but no changes in the mechanisms alone can keep us from plunging off the cliff.

In truth, we are half mad. One part of us is reasonable and decent and mature; another part is irrational and prejudiced and infantile. In any deep or prolonged crisis, the lunatic half takes possession of us.

Mass psychoanalysis — if it were possible, which it is not — might give our rational selves more control over the childish part of our nature. We might then begin to see our bigotry and fears as signs for what they truly are, instead of projecting them outward to others.

Mass conversion — not to a particular church or creed, but to a simple acceptance of the basic religious truth that it is better to suffer an injury than to do one — might permit us to pull back from the brink of the precipice and save our species from extinction.

I see little hope outside these two highly improbably courses. There is more hatred and divisiveness in the world today than in any time since I was born. More struggle, more conflict, more anger, more hate, more closed minds and deaf ears and distorted vision.

Everybody things that "the answer" rests largely upon someone else doing the right thing, and nobody is willing to move first. Nobody will turn the other cheek, we, walk the extra mile, return good for evil. We do not really believe — if believing means acting upon — any of the things we profess. (And we persecute the few who do.)

We have turned religion into a consolation, nationalism into an idol, science into a juggernaut, community into a jungle education into a treadmill, war into a bludgeon, and politics into a bloody farce. Our moral insanity is the agent of our doom.

to disappoint those of you who called about the 12-unit apartment house you saw under construction to find they were all sold. With such value as we are offering in these buildings they just don't last. We have all the figures to show you how to really put your money to work.

WANT TO BUILD ON THE BAY ?

We have a lovely lot on Redneerville Road not far from Belleville. There's 150' frontage on the bay. Let us build the house of your choice the way you want it built. Such lots as these are truly at a premium.

Canadian Might Be Aboard

International Space Laboratory Possibility Studied by U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — An international space laboratory—with maybe a Canadian astronaut aboard — is possibility as the United States looks to the post-Apollo space era of the mid-1970s, a U.S. space agency spokesman said Thursday.

But he emphasized that such a course of events, perhaps the cancellation of several scheduled Apollo moon landings, but one of several options under consideration as the U.S. reviews its space effort.

Saying that there was nothing new in the idea, the spokesman recalled that administrator Dr. Thomas Paine of the space program launched a sort of missionary effort late last year to persuade non-communist foreign scientists to participate in the U.S. program for the 1970s.

He visited Ottawa, Italy, West Germany, Britain, France and Japan.

At the request of some of the European countries, the national National Aeronautics and Space Administration staged a fuller briefing in Paris June 3-5 and announced that NASA would be glad to train astronauts for a space lab—"Canadian and others."

The NASA spokesman here was commenting on published reports that the U.S. had offered to put Canadians in space if Ottawa was prepared to finance a costly 15-year program.

"Nothing so firm as that has been suggested to any of the countries concerned," the spokesman said. "We still haven't decided on the windup phase of our Apollo program and any international space lab would come only after that."

In Ottawa, a spokesman said the U.S. hd invited Canada to put Canadians in orbiting American space stations but said the U.S. had not asked Canada for anything in return. The U.S. was seeking an international program rather than "trying to bargain."

Recently, for budgetary reasons—the budget has been cut to about $3,300,000,000 from $3,960,000,000 in 1966—NASA has been taking a new look at its Apollo program.

"There has been speculation in the press, and even among ourselves, and an international space project is one of the possible configurations of our future space program," the spokesman said.

"We have not yet determined our post-Apollo program or even the conclusion of the Apollo program."

At any rate, if Canada or any other country was interested in putting a man in space they would have to provide more than the man.

What the agency has in mind is any international program in that any interested country would come up with an idea of what it wanted to contribute in the way of hardware, scientific know-how and "what they wanted to get out of the program."

So far, the spokesman said, no country has come up with a firm plan "on what part it would want to play in such a program or with any specific scientific experiment it has in mind."

The Washington Post said in a story Thursday that the space agency is considering "the cancellation of three of its six remaining Apollo moon landings so it can use the Saturn V moon rockets to put a six-man space station in each orbit in the mid-1970s."

Texas Gulf Agrees To $27-million Payment

TORONTO (CP) — Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., of New York and its Canadian subsidiary, Ecstall Mining Ltd., have agreed to an out-of-court $27,000,000 cash settlement for the interest held by the Murray Hendrie estate of Hamilton in the company's giant base-metal mine at Timmins, Ont.

The settlement was announced Thursday by Royal Trust Co., trustee of the estate. The estate had sued Texas Gulf for title of property or $400,000,000 damages.

Value of the ore body, based on estimates of the quantity of its copper-zinc-silver content, has been set at $2,000,000,000.

The heir to the estate, by a 1959 decision of the Ontario Supreme Court, is retired businessman William Gilmour of Hamilton, a stepson of the late Mr. Hendrie.

He was described by business associates Thursday as "a very retiring man" interested in bird watching and color photography.

However, his position as sole beneficiary has been challenged by about 100 descendents of Mr. Hendrie's 19 brothers and sisters, who have appealed the 1959 decision.

In the meantime, money from the settlement will be held by Royal Trust.

Labor Critics Win Their Point In Quebec Medicare Changes

QUEBEC (CP) — Critics of the Liberal government's proposed health insurance legislation scored at least a partial victory Thursday when Health Minister Claude Castonguay introduced a series of amendments to the most controversial part of the bill.

The Quebec national assembly's health committee adopted the amendments unanimously and sent the bill back to the assembly for third and final reading today.

Mr. Castonguay's amendments deny patients the right to seek re-imbursement from the Quebec Health Insurance Board for medical services rendered by doctors who withdraw from the proposed health insurance plan.

The amendments also give the health minister the power to take "necessary measures" to maintain insured services under "uniform conditions" in regions or specialties in which too many doctors withdraw for the plan to function normally.

Although Mr. Castonguay denied that he was retreating in the face of pressure from the three opposition parties and a common front of Quebec's four major labor organizations, the amendments were clearly a concession.

The labor front maintained the bill gave doctors unwarranted privileges and did not provide adequate coverage.

The doctors said it placed too many restrictions on their professional freedom

Marcel Pepin, president of the 225-000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, told committee members after the bill was approved that he personally regards the amendments a "considerable improvement."

Other members of the labor front are the Quebec federation of labor, the Quebec Teachers' Corporation and the Catholic Farmers Union.

Because the amended bill denies reimbursement to payments of doctors who have withdrawn, it is a more bitter pill for the medical professions to swallow.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Pill Alternative Personal Choice

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have so many reservations and frustrations about taking the "pill" that confusion overwhelms me — and makes both my husband and me very unhappy.

In fact we are seriously considering that preventive measures against pregnancy be "male" rather than "female".

In other words, he thinks (and I almost agree) that he should have a vasectomy. Then I won't have to take the pill any more.

We have six fine children and want to call it a halt, so we can raise them properly and give them every advantage. And, I suppose, ourselves, too. I realize many would call it being selfish. But that's the way it is.

At last, here is my question — am I making the problem bigger than it really is? Do you unreservedly recommend the pill? Shall I forget about all I have been hearing, and keep on taking it? — Mrs. F.

Comment: I'm sure you must know that I can't prescribe blanket advice that will cover all situations. Thousands of women like you are greatly concerned, anxious, doubtful and indecisive about whether or not to keep on taking the pill.

But many more thousands — or shall I say millions — are sympathetic and so thankful for this medication, they sing silent hymns of praise for it.

But not all pill - takers are happy. Here is a young woman who says, "I wonder if it's worth taking. All I get out of it is numbness and severe headaches."

Another says, "I've put on a lot of weight, I know it's the Pill, because I haven't increased my diet."

One says: "I've gotten hairy." Another: I'm losing my hair." And, of course, there is the constant anxiety about getting blood clots or other complications. Therefore, as I see it, Mrs. F., the answer to your problem will depend upon your doctor. He will have to evaluate all the existing circumstances. If he says, "go ahead, take it," then this should resolve your anxiety.

But if you still are worried about taking what the majority of women consider a "boon to womanking" — then I believe you should make a choice of other accepted methods of contraception. Continued indecision on your part will only increase your anxiety and take the joy out of life.

* * *

For Mrs. V.: Your child's "narrow escape" from fooling with the electric windows in your car underlines a report I have just received from the National Safety Council.

In part: "Cases are known in which children have been fatally injured by playing with power windows when left alone in the car. Parents who want to child - proof their car's electric windows will probably want to have the work done by a local car dealer — cost is about $15. Surely peace of mind alone is worth that much."

For Mrs. K.: It is true that the child who suffers from hypopituitarism fails to grow normally. He may be well-proportioned, yet be much shorter than his peers. He looks a few years younger than his calender age, and may have arrested sexual development.

* * *

Doctors are trying to create a synthetic pituitary-growth hormone called HGH (human growth hormone). When this becomes practical it will be effective in overcoming abnormally short stature in thousands of children.

Fluoride Show Wins CRTC Okay

OTTAWA (CP) — Running just about exactly counter to the findings of a special Ontario Government committee, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission Thursday released a report on the CRC's inquiry — for its controversial 1967 TV special on air pollution, Air of Death.

"The program adequately reflected the information reasonably available at the time of the broadcast and is well able to stand as an example of informational programming backed by a wealth of research and servbg! a useful purpose," the CRTC report said.

The report thus was opposed to the Ontario committee study, which gave the program a passing for use of "unwarranted, untruthful and irreconcilable statements" and treating "a complex problem in a way designed to create alarm and fear."

Air of Death, the CRTC report said, "did achieve what clearly appeared as its avowed purpose, namely, to awaken the public to the very real dangers of air pollution."

The report "recognizes the increased awareness of the public to problems of air pollution since the original broadcasting of the program Air of Death on Sunday, Oct. 22, 1967."

It faulted the CBC handling on one main point—the possibility of health hazards to humans as a result of fluoride fumes from fertilizer plant operations in the Dunnville, Ont., area.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For July 11

Your birthday today: You are apt to dream bigger than you accomplish this coming year, but what you do achieve with your organizational ability will be impressive, considering the conditions. Your attention most of the year is drawn to material settle into lasting ties. It is a security. Romantic attractions good year for personal development. Today's natives are much interested in organized group efforts. Many have been professional soldiers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): There are times when it is so easy to say too much too fast—think first. Your career stands to benefit from today's availeable energy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Now everybody wants his due, and promptly. Get an early start. Your patience with a general failure of communications must be its own reward.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): In the midst of present tensions and excitement do something that gives you a momentary change of pace and scene, at least symbolically.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your intuitive conclusions may be difficult to share—logic doesn't follow quite the same path — but keep trying. Your natural diplomacy is helpful.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Tactful approaches succeed while secret manoeuvres head toward confusion. Attentive listening brings you information which does not fit. Don't jump to conclusions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Routine activities are favored. Exceptionally large purchases are not well-enough considered—look for some means of postponement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Expression of personal wishes provides restless people with a target. Discretion is the key. Your act needs no explanation. You are well enough on record.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Ship making a deal rather than get involved in complicated schemes. Consult your deepest intuitions before you involve other people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Expect to differ with friends on almost any issue — give them room for thought. The passing glory of a romantic impulse may be just that.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Plans are tested today. Much of what you hoped to do is beyond easy reach. Your patience makes it easier to reorganize. Altogether it's a long and full day.

Loyalist Appoints President

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Herbert Young, 47-year-old Windsor corporation executive, has been appointed president of Loyalist College.

Mr. Young's appointment was announced this morning following a meeting of the community college's board of governors.

He succeeds J. K. Bradford, Loyalist's first president, whose retirement became effective June 30.

Mr. Young takes over direction of the Quinte-area community college following a highly business and industrial career in senior capacities in the Western Ontario region.

"Mr. Young has a proven record as a highly successful senior executive and has extensive experience in the performance of duties requiring a

Hydro Strike Feared As Pay Talks Recess

Cooling Period To Cover Month

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's 11,000 employees will be asked during the next two weeks to vote in favor of a strike, a spokesman for Local 1000, Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Friday.

At an executive board meeting July 13, the bargaining committee will recommend union leaders reject the commission's wage increase offers.

Mr. Murray said more than 60 meetings will be held in Ontario to inform Hydro workers and distribute strike ballots.

In an effort to avert a strike, William H. Dickie, chief provincial labor negotiator, Friday called for a one-month cooling-off period before talks between the union and the company resume about Aug. 10.

Mr. Murray said Hydro has offered average increases of 5.5 per cent for top tradesmen and linesmen; 3.3 per cent for station operators and 2.82 per cent for technicians and clerical staff in an one-year contract.

The union has demanded 14-per-cent increases, far above the federal government guideline of six per cent.

A strike in 1969 led to wage increases of 15 per cent over three years, much of it retroactive, giving linesmen and top trades their present wages of $4.77 an hour, and operators $3.67 to $5.36 an hour.

Mideast Policy Gap Narrowed

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union has edged closer to the United States position on three elements of an Arab-Israeli peace plan but the two superpowers remain far apart on terms for an over-all settlement, informed diplomats said today.

Prairie Wheat Acreage Halved

OTTAWA (CP) — The way they tell it in Ottawa, the pledges are pouring in from the Prairies: Farmers in their thousands are swearing off wheat.

Aerial photography planes and a small army of government inspectors are forming up in western centres to make sure the farmers are sticking to their vows — turning wheatland over to summerfallow or forage crops and thus qualifying for government cash payments.

Wednesday is the deadline for compliance with the cash-for-no-wheat program, the federal response to a world wheat glut.

Best guess in advance of a firm acreage estimate, to be published by Dominion Bureau of Statistics Thursday, is that Western farmers have reduced milling-wheat plantings by more than half from last year, when 34,500,000 acres were sown and 484,300,000 bushels of wheat harvested.

Farmers are reluctant to kick the wheat-growing habit. Many have been harshly critical of the crop-reduction program. But they are being goaded by the assurance of $6 an acre for wheatland converted to fallow or $10 for an acre assigned to perennial forage.

Further, the Canadian Wheat Board, their only official buyer, will base sales quotas for farmstarved wheat or any new harvest on the number of acres taken out of grain production instead of the number bearing wheat.

A week before the compliance deadline, between 70,000 and 75,000 applications had been received in the office of Otto Lang, minister responsible for wheat trade and administration of the wheat reduction program.

About 37,000 of roughly half the applications had been processed and they added up to a 6,000,000-acre reduction. If the other half produces the same result, that would bring total wheat acreage down to about 12,000,000.

Allowing for late applications, plus estimates that about 1,000,000 acres of former wheatland has been switched to oilseed crops, final Prairie wheat acreage could be close to the 8,000,000 figure that government officials predicted when they announced the program last Feb. 27.

The government budgeted for maximum acceptance at a cost of $140,000,000. Officials talked about a likely cost of $100,000,000, based on a shift of 11,666,000 acres from summerfallow and 2,800,000 acres to forage crops.

The 37,000 applications processed so far would cost almost

False Hope Generated

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board Chairman C. M. Drury caused some excitement Friday when he was interpreted as saying that that he would be happy with a 7½ per cent wage increase for postal workers.

That would have been a considerably larger boost than the 6 per cent wage guideline advocated by the government for public and private wage settlements. But it turned out that Mr. Drury had said that he would be "delighted" if the postal unions were willing for 7½ per cent, rather than their current demands which work out closer to 15 per cent.

The government offer is about 8.3 per cent, leaving the two parties far apart.

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland braced for trouble today, with tension mounting as Protestant Orangemen prepared to march in an annual parade celebrating their ancestors' victory over Roman Catholics in the Battle of the Boyne 280 years ago.

Some 20,000 British troops and police stood by on guard against new violence, and Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark pleaded for Roman Catholic co-operation in maintaining peace. Ten persons have been killed and hundreds wounded in violence during the last two weekends.

About 250,000 of the arch-Protestants were scheduled to march in triumphant parades during the weekend, culminating in grand processions in 19 cities, including the capital of Belfast, on Monday.

"The weekend is bound to be a special period of special anxiety for us all," Chichester-Clark said. "I am speaking to you in difficult and dangerous times."

He warned "Those who take exception to the parades"—meaning the Roman Catholics who see them as assertive of Protestant dominance in the country—that they have a responsibility to make sure peace is maintained.

Catholic civil rights associations in Belfast and Londonderry Friday cancelled demonstrations and meetings planned for the next few days.

The battle of the Boyne took place in 1690 on the banks of the River Boyne. Former King James II, leading 21,000 troops including French infantry, regular Irish cavalry and untrained Irish troops, was surrounded by some 33,000 men under the command of King William III. James's forces managed to slip out of the encirclement, and the former king fled the country.

More than 7,000 British troops were on the alert in Belfast today and almost 5,000 others were on duty in Londonderry and other provincial centres. They were backed by 5,000 men of the Ulster Defence Regiment and more than 3,000 police.

The British garrison were under propaganda attack by Republican elements in Belfast. Posters appeared in Roman Catholic districts showing a jackboot British soldier standing with rifle and club over a fallen civilian. Below it were the words: "Don't fraternize."

Roman Catholic girls said they risked being slashed with razors or having their hair shorn if they dated soldiers.

Tom Conaty, chairman of the mainly-Catholic Citizens' Defence Committe in Belfast, said: "Catholics are disillusioned and disgusted with the security forces. They are at war with the army.

"We cannot order them to stay at home in the face of provocation by the Orange Order parading near their homes."

Mounties Shoo Bear Out of Queen's Path

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — The Queen and Princess Anne Friday watched a polar bear feast on its back in misty Hudson Bay.

Shortly before the bear had been on the road they were travelling and was shooed away by RCMP who feared it might attack crowds watching the royal visitors.

The incident occurred at Churchill, where the Royal Family began a week-long visit to Manitoba after five days in the Northwest Territories.

At Yellowknife Thursday night, the Queen was presented with a polar bear rug. She and Anne evidently were delighted to see the real thing in the icy bay.

The Royal Family visited Thompson as well Friday, and got the biggest reception of the tour as most of the population of 22,000 turned out for an evening ceremony marking Thompson's transformation from a town to a city.

Anne had a slight cold after leaving the ..orth and the Queen looked fatigued on appearances at the Thompson hospital and the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., mill and smelter,

Asked whether the packed Manitoba schedule would be trimmed William Heseltine, the Queen's press secretary, replied: "positively not."

He said that the Royal Family approved the schedule, which calls for appearances at about 23 communities in this province, and would meet it.

They left Yellowknife to a fan-fare of mosquitoes, which had them all shielding their faces for a withering moment at the territorial capital's airport.

On arrival at Churchill, a Hudson Bay port 750 miles east across the territorial barrens, Prince Charles ran into horseflies so big he blinked.

He went by helicopter to see Fort Prince of Wales, an 18th century relic sacked by the French when it surrendered without a shot being fired.

Then he joined his parents and Princess Anne at Camp Nanook, seven miles from Churchill where about 1,000 boy scouts swarmed about the Queen after she opened the second Arctic and northern jamboree in this polar bear-infested region.

Nanook means polar bear in Eskimo.

Loan Sharks Are Blamed For Bombings

TORONTO (CP) — A North York businessman whose home has been blasted by dynamite four times in six years may be the victim of loan-shark racketeers, police said today.

The racket is known as "six for five", which means the borrower pays $6 each week for each $5 loaned.

Murray Osborn, whose home was dynamited early Friday, was asked to repay a $1,500 loan, plus interest, before the bombings began in 1964, police said.

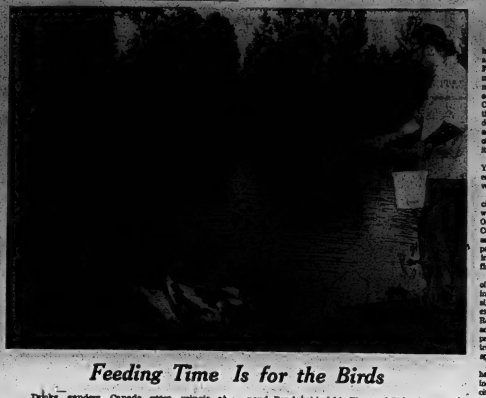
Duke Seeks Court Ban On Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Oakville businessman George Clinton Duke applied Friday for an Ontario Supreme Court order to stop a hearing under the Police Act against two provincial police officers, on the grounds the hearing will prejudice a libel suit he has launched against Attorney-General Arthur Wishart and two others.

Harvey Dalter, Mr. Duke's lawyer, said the notice of motion asking for an injunction to stop the proceedings will be heard July 14.

Mr. Duker said his client filed an affidavit in support of the motion detailing the background of the injunction request.

In his affidevit Mr. Duke said improper leakage about the inquiry into Supt. A. M. Rogers' and Supt Albert Wilson's association with him had caused him to be "virtually ostracized from society" and had adversely affected his business.



He said proceedings with the charges against the police officers would seriously prejudice his libel suit against the attorney-general, OPP Commissioner Eric Silk and A. R. Dick, deputy attorney-general.

A Bird Under His Wing

This bird almost in the palm of George Woodhouse is worth making some fuss and feathers about. It's a Canada goose, one of four the city fireman and conservationist has taken under his wing. For details of a special kind of project see Page 2.)

Feeding Time Is for the Birds

Ducks, ganders, Canada geese, mingle at early-morning mealtime, as George Woodhouse casts grain on the waters of his conservation pond. Pond, behind his Elmwood Drive home, has become stopover for migratory birds each fall.

City Fireman Legally Adopts Quartet of Canada Honkers

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

How do you make friends with the elusive Canada goose?

Ask George Woodhouse. He's been successful at striking up an acquaintance that he has — not one but four, making out of his hand.

The city fireman who is also a leading district conservationist now counts a quartet of Canada geese among his latest charges.

George, who bands migrating birds by the hundreds each year for the bands and conservation pond behind his Elmwood Drive home, acquired the goose last then two weeks ago.

Since then, as successful has he been in his overtures to the birds, they now confidently feed from his palm.

However, rapport is not exactly the point of the exercise that brought the geese to the Woodhouse pond after much government negotiation. George is hoping to prove that Canada geese can nest in numbers in the Quinte area.

Canada geese are a jealously - guarded resource.

Even before the lands and forests people could supply him with any of the birds, George had to negotiate with the federal government.

The result is that he now is the bonded possessor of a special permit from the northern development department.

Actually, he's not unacquainted with Canada geese. In recent years, as a conservationist, he's been called on by game wardens to nurse a number of injured geese back to migratory strength.

However, this is the first time he's started voluntarily accommodating the geese so early in the year.

Canada geese, George believes, once nested throughout the Quinte district — moving out as settlers moved in.

He's hopeful the presence of the geese will attract others to his pond before the fall migrations — returning in the spring to settle in the Quinte area.

In fact, they're "so well treated, George's not certain if there's a danger they might refuse to migrate at all.

"They'll fly away this fall and return next year," he says. "Of course there's a chance they won't want to leave if you treat them well . . . " high degree of efficiency," said Loyalist board chairman Frank Rebel in an announcement confirming the appointment. "These are major areas of importance to Loyalist College, which must meet . . . the needs of business and industry through its graduates and fulfill its responsibilities of service to the community."

His business career includes executive positions with Duplate of Canada, Oshawa; The Fiberglass Company of Canada, Sarnia, and Woods Gordon and Company, one of Canada's leading management consulting firms.

He joined Dominion Forge, of Windsor, in 1952, becoming president in 1965. He resigned last year to become executive vice - president of Hobart Trailers of Kitchener and Preston. He also was president of Walmet Industries, of Welland, a steel specialty manufacturer.

In community affairs he has served with the Windsor industrial commission and the city's United Appeal campaigns.

He served the Royal Canadian Regiment during World War II as a lieutenant.

Mr. Rebel said the appointment was made after "thorough study" by the board of "many qualified applicants."

"We're delighted that the executive of Mr. Young's capacity and experience has accepted and is joining the team of Loyalist . . . at this stage of development of the college."

Before meeting with the board this week, Mr. Young noted the "diversification" of the Quinte region of Ontario, but refrained from any prediction of what program trends his presidency might set.

"The ultimate needs of the community, insofar as Loyalist is concerned, are to be determined in the near future as I require more experience and background of the area . . . " he said.

He and his wife, Doreen, have two children, a daughter Susanne, who has graduated this year from University of Windsor, and a son, Peter, 14, in secondary school.

He Pedals Ice Cream

Ten local 14-year-olds are making money this summer and having fun doing it.

The franchise concession started in 1966 by Mrs. Pat Reid. This year she is again handling the four trades and three wagons which keep the boys going from 1 p.m. to suppertime each day.

Although the top sales record was established in 1969 by one boy who made $13 per day, the average is $8.

Mrs. Reid explained that the boys made 20 per cent from the sale of ice cream bars, fudgesicles, and sundae cups and swamps $30 to $35 a week.

"Or as high as they want to go if they work hard," she said.

The tinkle of the bells can be heard throughout the city, with children crowding eagerly around the specially - built wagon with their dimes and nickles.

Ice cream is stored in two freezers at the Reid's home, with the excess from Kingston being stored in a local downtown cold storage locker.

As well as getting approximately 11 per hour minimum, each boy gets all the exercise he can use when he pedals his ice cream from one end of Belleville to the next.

Curriculum Broadened

Nine new programs are being introduced, as a result of indications of student interest and present or potential employment opportunities in the area.

A three - year program in electrical engineering technology will be offered, qualifying graduates for certification as technologists in this specialized field.

With tourism assuming increased importance in the district served by Loyalist, the hotel, motel and restaurant operation course is expanded to attract capacity enrolment. It will be a two or three - year program.

Other new two - year programs in the applied arts and business division are law clerks, early childhood education and educational resource technician.

A two or three - year course in general arts and science is being provided for those who have not yet decided on a career.

Existing programs in agrology and water science technician have been extended and brought together in an environmental science technician program.

Graduates will be employed in food processing, agricultural service industries and pollution control and conservation agencies.

A two - year technician program in construction engineering will prepare graduates for jobs in the building industry.

Three types of diploma and certificates are awarded to graduates on completion of their programs at Loyalist.

Graduates of three - year programs receive a provincial diploma. Those completing a two - year course obtain a Loyalist College diploma. A Loyalist certificate is awarded to those graduating from one - year programs.

Wheat

The 188,000 Western grain farmers have been told some cash would be paid out before the end of July.

But they have been reluctant, mainly on the ground that the money would barely pay them to give up wheat.

Under the program, farmers were permitted to plant a cover crop of oats on potential fallow land to prevent erosion. But they would have to "render it unharvestable" by July 15 to qualify—by harvesting it immaturely for feed, turning cattle loose to graze it or plowing it under.

After that, they could plant lentils or crop to protect the soil, but it would only be useful as feed because it would not ripen in time to make milling grain.

The farmers thus say the take from the government payments would be marginally-profitable at best, yield losses at worst. Their costs for fallow land would involve double seed, machinery-use and work expenses.

Housewives More Concerned About Wash Than Pollution

By PETER E. LEICHNITZ
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Give the average Canadian housewife a choice between a fresh wash and a cleaner environment and she'll take the wash almost every time.

Despite extensive publicity about the pollution dangers of high-phosphate detergents, there appears to be little switching to other brands in supermarkets across the country.

"When it comes down to dollars and cents the majority of women are still buying the low-cost high-phosphate detergent," said one store manager.

In this area where the consumer has an opportunity to do something in the fight against pollution most are doing nothing, said others.

There were scattered exceptions, such as in Winnipeg where store owners said detergent sales were down sharply. In Montreal, students posted signs on store doors warning of the pollution dangers from detergents. In Belleville, Ont., a woman started a chain-letter by writing to 200 of her friends asking them to switch to low-phosphate detergents.

But a Crose-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed the majority of housewives are not switching to low-phosphate detergents, which usually are more expensive.

Phosphates are found in most heavy-duty detergents. Conservationists say phosphates, when flushed into lakes and streams, are a primary food on which algae thrive—a contention that is disputed by the industry. The algae, the green slime that builds up, competes with fish for oxygen, causing them to suffocate.

Managers in several supermarkets said women seemed concerned with the problem and read the brochures on pollution, but few actually changed brands.

One store manager said: "I think women are more interested in the cost than in what it does to the environment."

Dr. Richard Potter, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Quinte, said most people have adopted the attitude that their individual use of phosphates is too small to matter.

"We find there is very little effort being made by the public in taking action generally," he said.

Dr. Potter said governments should take early action by specifying a deadline for removal of phosphates from detergents.

The federal government passed legislation before the summer recess limiting phosphates in detergents to 20 per cent by Aug. 1 and bapning them completely by Jan. 1, 1972.

Several stores have introduced their own phosphate-free detergent.

Frank DesTombe, manager of several Mac's Milk stores in St. Catharines, Ont., said his company's phosphate-free detergent is selling well.

"People who live near water and participate in a lot of water activities seem to care about phosphate pollution more than those not near water," he said.

Consumer concern is also high in the Winnipeg area, say local store managers, with detergent sales off by as much as one-third. But most women appear to be cutting down on use rather than switching brands, said one store manager.

Most major stores across the country are reluctant to remove high-phosphate detergents from their shelves because of the high consumer demand. Some have rearranged their displays to promote phosphate-free detergents, but have noticed little change in sales.

"We display the low-phosphate and phosphate-free detergents prominently, we put out pamphlets with a phosphate content list, but we have to stock the things a customer asks for; we can't tell her what to buy," said an assistant store manager in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

"We're waiting to see how concerned about phosphates people really are."

Managers of large grocery outlets—IGA, Loblaws, Dominion—all agreed that housewives, at first, expressed concern about the pollutant effects of high-phosphate detergents.

"They were hot on it for about three weeks and now the whole thing has died down," said Don Wilson, manager of an Ottawa Loblaws store.

"The big-name brands are still our best sellers," said one Regina store manager. "Detergents without phosphates which had almost left the market were making a comeback but "the trend is very slow," he added.

S. D. MacGregor, merchandising manager for Canada Safeway, in northern Alberta, saw "some indication there has been a switch from high-phosphate brands, but no definite sales picture yet."

He said it was possible that customers would switch to a low-phosphate detergent because of the publicity, then switch back for their next box because the low-phosphate brand might not clean as well, or for some other reasons, including cost.

In the Atlantic provinces retailers said customers are buying the regular products they've always bought.

A Charlottetown supermarket manager said "One fisherman had complaint and then turned around to buy the brand of highest phosphate content."

A spokesman for Lever Brothers Ltd., a major detergent manufacturer, said his company did not expect any shift in sales of products in the first quarter of this year.

J. Neil Gordon, director for corporate affairs for Procter and Gamble Co. of Canada Ltd., said the company had a "slight increase" in sales of its laundry soap, but there was no noticeable decrease in sales of its detergent products.

He said Procter and Gamble was accepting the inevitability of having to eliminate phosphates in detergents, but the firm contended there was no proof that phosphates were a primary cause of pollution.

Both companies say they plan to have phosphate contents below 20 per cent by August.

An Ottawa housewife, asked if she were worried about the phosphate content in the brand of detergent she had just bought, replied: "Every-body else is using them, why shouldn't I?"

There has been some organized opposition to high-phosphate detergents.

A group in Vancouver called SPDC—Society for Pollution and Environmental Control—sent copies of detergent phosphate content to consumers in the British Columbia lower mainland, but did not organize any major protest.

In Alberta, a group called STOP—Save Our Tomorrows Oppose Pollution—sent about 100 pounds of detergent to Prime Minister Trudeau, protesting its phosphate content.

Pollution Probe, a Toronto-based anti-pollution group, published a list of detergents showing the phosphate content of each, with a letter explaining phosphate pollution.

In Montreal, high school students posted signs on the doors of nearly all the city's food stores which read:

Alderman Jeffrey's Back Yard Pool

Pools Popular with Busy People

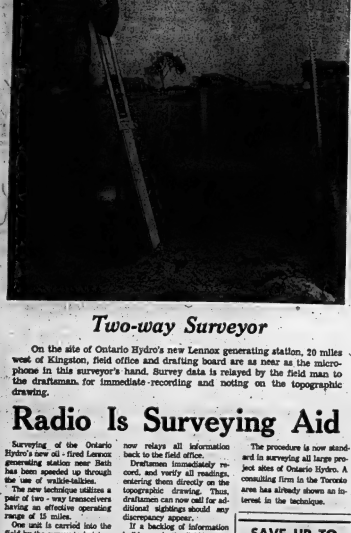
One development in Belleville is going relatively unnoticed. It is taking place in the city's back yards and escapes the attention of passers - by.

Increasingly, however, Belleville's back yards are becoming miniature Nassaus as private swimming pools transform lawns into personal, if not neighborhood, resort spots.

Needless to say, the number of back yard pools is not large but there are at least 30 in Belleville and more are being built every year.

One local contractor alone, Don Keller, reports he has put in four swimming pools so far this year and is now in the process of putting in two more.

In addition to the Keller firm, two other companies, Halman Silex and Trend Pools are building pools in the area.



Pools take as little as four days to install and prices range from below $2,000 for a 12 - by 14 - foot unit to just under $3,000 for one 20 - by 40 - feet in size. Installation costs range from $1,200 to $2,000 depending on the size of the pool and the nature of the lot.

Who is putting them in? Doctors and lawyers represent a large proportion of the pool owners but several families of lesser means have opted for pools as well.

"We like the convenience of swimming at our back-door" one man said.

Another local is the swimming pool season? As a rule it goes hand in hand with the good weather. Some people, however, are defying the weather by installing heating systems for their pools. These cost about $500 each. Belleviliians are using outdoor heated pools from the first week of May through to November.

The advent of steel swimming pools has reduced the cost so that the private backyard installation is now within the range of middle income families. The increase in the number of Belleville pools is, in part, due to this.

Two-way Surveyor

On the site of Ontario Hydro's new Lennox generating station, 20 miles west of Kingston, field office and drafting board are as near as the microphone in this surveyor's hand. Survey data is relayed by the field man to the draftsman for immediate recording and noting on the topographic drawing.

Radio Is Surveying Aid

Surveying of the Ontario Hydro's new oil - fired Lennox generating station near Bath has been speeded up through the use of walkie-talkies.

The new technique utilizes a pair of two - way transceivers having an effective operating range of 15 miles.

One unit is carried into the field by the survey technician, the other remains back in the hands of a draftsman at the field office.

Radios free survey crews from the need to keep records in the field. Instead, the instrument man using the radio now relays all information back to the field office.

Draftsmen immediately record, and verify all readings, entering them directly on the topographic drawing. Thus, draftsmen can now call for additional sightings should any discrepancy appear.

If a backlog of information builds up in the field office, tape recorders are used to store the information.

Through use of two - way radio, the man in the field can now proceed more quickly and under a greater variety of climatic conditions.

The procedure is now standard in surveying all large project sites of Ontario Hydro. A consulting firm in the Toronto area has already shown an interest in the technique.

Housing Questionnaire

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board's distribution of a 17-point questionnaire seeking information on rental accommodation should prove a useful guide to both the public and the construction industry.

With the population increasing as industry booms, the need for orderly development is more than ever vital. We are told that the results of the survey will fit in with the chapter on housing being included in the city's master plan.

This is all to the good, particularly as a counter to the somewhat erratic situation obtaining now. For instance, Planning Board chairman Zdenek Kvarda points out that at present there are no guidelines for housing developers.

Another apparent anomaly is seen in the applications being received by the planning board for row housing. As principal planner Frank Stokmans says, this seems "a little crazy ... because no one knows how successful this type of home is going to be."

"All they can see," he said, "is that single units are not selling so they try this other type at random."

Random development of course is the very thing that must be avoided. The survey should go a long way to producing the facts necessary for future development of the city along correct lines.

Politics Intrude

The United Nations-sponsored World Youth Assembly could be regarded as an admirable idea if only it were divorced from politics. Unfortunately the signs are already present that it will end up as just another propaganda exercise.

The Soviet Union, for example, represented by a delegation of 15, is demanding expulsion of the South Korean and South Vietnamese delegations because youths from other parts of the divided countries are not present. It is also calling for the removal of all American troops from Indo-China, and has condemned Israel for not heeding UN resolutions while supporting the Arabs and the Communist side in Korea and Vietnam.

In other words, the same dreary old routine with which the United Nations is so familiar. Here was an opportunity for the youth of the world to get away from purely political matters and address themselves to the needs of say the underdeveloped nations. It could have been a chance to promote closer understanding on the international scene generally.

The prospects then of a better world stemming from the deliberations of this conference seem remote. The assembly is reported to be short of funds, to which all we can say is that in the circumstances it seems a waste of money anyway.

Power Politics

Egyptian President Nasser has presented such enemies as he may have at home with a golden opportunity to effect a coup that might even cool the Middle East situation.

Nasser has been in Moscow for a week and the word is that he has decided to prolong his stay for another ten days. What an opportunity for some military man to take over in Cairo. He could then inform the Egyptian people and the Arab world at large that the country plans to end its revengeful posture towards the Israelis and concentrate on improving the economic lot of its people.

It has been done twice before, with the ouster of Ghana's President Nkrumah and Cambodia's Prince Sihanouk while both were visiting Peking.

Such is Nasser's popularity however — he even survived the humiliation of his country's defeat by Israel in the seven-day war in 1967 — that no rival or overt threat to his regime have been apparent in the dozen years he has ruled the country and dominated the Arab world.

Nasser now is heavily dependent on the Russians for both economic and military aid. As with Cuba, this affords the Soviets another important foothold in a strategic region. If Nasser were to go, however, and Egypt was no longer a pawn in world power politics, it could be a means of cooling the confrontation with Israel. The latter after all is concerned almost exclusively with national survival, rather than with any belligerent designs on its Arab neighbors.

Dogs, Liquor and Tax-free Cars

The Not So Hilarious Capers of the Diplomatic Set

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Chapter two of the story of "Why Nobody, including Prime Minister Trudeau, Loves the Diplomats" is ... Loudly, for all the world to hear, External Affairs, in righteous wrath some years ago, forbade the privileged people of Diplomatic Row to buy more than one tax-free car — big or lumbering — in any model year.

Then, later, quietly, all so exclusively entre nous in what the Prime Minister has called that "other world" of diplomacy, the restriction was lifted with never a public word about it.

Now the diplomats may buy as many cars — free cars each year as is deemed "reasonable" by the External Affairs Department.

What is reasonable?

Oh well, explains External, there is no set measure of it, but would not two, three and perhaps even four new cars a year be just that, reasonable? Depends.

The fiddle over the diplomatic car quota was a by-product of the funniest, most frenzied caper ever to be unintentionally staged by Canada's colony of ambassadors extraordinaire and ministers plenipotentiary for the entertainment and enlightenment of the taxpayer who foots the bill for all this wonderful nonsense in the striped - pants - and - morning - coat set.

And this is the way it happened.

The Ottawa Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals received a complaint from several residents of ritzy Rockcliffe Village, the National Capital's 24 - carat suburb, that two St. Bernard dogs had died from mistreatment at the Argentine Embassy.

There were reports that the dogs had been beaten with iron bars.

Out to Rockcliffe hurried SPCA Inspector Billie Miles to investigate and remove the bodies to the pound for disposal.

But when he presented identification and credentials at the Embassy to Ambassador's residence, he was told that if he did not leave the property at once, the police would be called, he would be arrested and charged with trespassing.

Under the law, it was so ... he had trespassed.

Anxious to smooth ruffled diplomatic fine feathers, Inspector Billie Miles' homely-late superior returned to Rockcliffe and the Embassy with a note of humble apology for the unauthorized intrusion.

He, too, was ordered to leave the property at once and retreated, terrified.

The Argentine Ambassador had faced him at the door, brandishing a copy of the 340 Statute of Queen Anne and informing him that under its provisions he could be lashed and jailed for a year for his attempt of and trespass on the Embassy and its Ambassador.

Of course, it all got into the papers — and then, as always happens — the following came in the House of Commons where, incredibly, verbal "regrets" were expressed by the Government to the Ambassador and communicated, formally, to the Embassy by Lester Bowles Pearson, then undersecretary of State for External Affairs.

And that might have been the end of the affair had not an even more flamboyantly arrogant diplomat than the Argentine Ambassador put in his two cents' worth.

His Excellency, the Argentine Ambassador was throwing a cocktail party at which the Dominican Ambassador, a character indeed, made some crack about "dog-fanciers."

He was escorted out of the Embassy and instructed never to return.

The Dominican Ambassador sent a note of apology, but assumed he was forgiven the "dog-better" gaff.

But the Argentine Ambassador, when he snapped that "never return," had meant it, and when he threw a reception honoring his republic's national day, he made certain no invitation went to the Dominican Ambassador.

The Capital and the country held its breath while the two Ambassadors negotiated through External Affairs as to whether this affair of honor was to be settled with pistols or rapiers.

At this point in diplomatic time, the Foreign Office in Buenos Aires called the Argentine envoy home before a shot could be fired or a rapier pointed.

The Dominican Ambassador, too, returned home invited by External Affairs to go back to Santo Domingo, and with no choice, having been informed he was persona non grata, he left.

It was discovered — and formally stated by Ottawa's External — that His Excellency the Ambassador from the Dominican Republic had been, well, to put it bluntly, bootlegging.

Like all diplomats, he had been buying his booze tax-free.

Cases and cases of it! — selling it, at just under Liquor Control Board prices — turning a handsome if illegal profit.

Worse, he had been operating his own private "Used Car Lot," buying new models tax-free as a diplomat, and re-selling them at a mark under the going commercial price. Business was booming, his bank account swelling, and External burning when the RCMP sailed in and hit him for fabulous, among other things, of the National Revenue Department's star skill level.

To head off such depredations by other wheeler-dealers in Diplomatic Row, External Affairs decreed that diplomats could buy all the cars their little hearts desired — at diplomatic price — but only one tax-free car a year.

That was the way it was — until the diplomats of External and the visiting diplomatic firemen from abroad got together in the wo are - all - members - of - the - baddy - buddy club, and quietly lifted the tax-free, one-car restriction.

The flow of tax-free booze at no time was in spate, which perhaps accounts for the fact that the National Capital has the highest per capita consumption of the stuff in the entire country.

Love that crazy diplomatic cocktail circuit — you can eat and drink at some embassy or other every night of the week, even if you have to gate crash to obtain invitations.

Do it nicely, nodding to friends, and nobody — especially the host — will know you are among the many uninvited.

Vanderwater Visit Camp Sagonaska Made Available to Students

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is generally known that some 2,000 school children were able to carry on outdoor studies at Vanderwater Park this spring, as guests of the Moira River Conservation Authority which sponsored the conservation-natural science school.

It may not, however, be common knowledge that about one quarter of these were able to spend a night camping in the park through the generosity and co-operation of the Boy Scouts' Association. The latter organization opened the doors of their Camp Sagonaska at the Park to any schools wishing to use the camp, without charge of any kind.

I would like to express the gratitude of all the school children to the Authority for the use of their beautiful park, and a special "Thank you" to the Boy Scouts from thulls who were able to take advantage of their Camp Sagonaska. I can only hope that we took good care of the park and of the camp, so we will be allowed to use it in future years.

A 'Bureaucratic Document'

Provincial Control Urged for Canadian Universities

Kingston Whig-Standard

A newly-released report on Canadian universities reads as if it had been prepared by provincial government bureaucrats. The Commission on Relations Between Universities and Governments, composed of Donald C. Rowat, a political science professor at Carleton University, and Rene Hurtubise, Vice-Rector of the University of Quebec, Montreal Campus, has recommended in effect that there be an end to any attempt to create truly Canadian universities and that the universities be stripped of whatever residual powers they still have to make their own decisions concerning research projects.

The report makes it very clear that in the view of its authors, the Dominion Government should end all its financial support for universities. Instead, it should recognize that universities are under exclusively provincial jurisdiction. This means that the Dominion Government would cut an end to the present 50 per cent subsidization it now provides for university operating costs. The report also recommends that the Canada Student Loan Plan be abolished along with federally - financed research projects. In place of all this, says the report, Ottawa should assign enough tax points to enable the provinces to take the universities completely under their own jurisdiction.

The report of the Commission describes the present cost-sharing agreement (made in 1966 and up for renewal in 1972) as federal intervention in provincial affairs because it defines what university functions can be subsidized. Just why the Commission should suppose that the provinces would be any wiser in making this decision is not clear. Also, the commissioners obviously had no concern for the possibility that their recommendations would result in a further compartmentalization of Canada, already hampered and disorganized by increasing emphasis on the provinces at the expense of the central government.

The Commission suggested that every province establish a university co-ordinating commission to distribute annual grants and enforce a master plan for the provincial university system. Individual universities would still have autonomy in such areas as the hiring of faculty and the drafting of internal budgets. The emphasis throughout the report is on provincial control of the whole university system which is to be looked upon as existing for such purposes the province shall consider important for its own ends. There is no emphasis at all on the role of universities as places of disinterested learning. They are, clearly, to be regarded as factories for the production of human skills for the uses of society.

While this has always been a function of universities — at least ever since they have included technical faculties — it is not by any means the most important function. The fostering of the individual desire for a broad education is still a part of the university purpose. There is every reason to believe that if this purpose is curtailed and crushed by turning the universities into training grounds for specialists, exclusively, the loss to society in this country will be irreparable. There is a profound difference between education and instruction.

It is not necessarily inevitable that the financing of universities by governments will result in this kind of change. It has not happened in other countries where publicly subsidized universities have been in existence for longer than they have in Canada. It has not happen here and it need not, in spite of the production of such short - sighted documents as this.

Defections from Priesthood Called Healthy for Church

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— A priest-sociologist who has probed deeply into causes of defections from the Roman Catholic priesthood says the exodus is a healthy trend producing new, vital forms of Christian ministering.

"It's a source of great hope, of great vitality in the church, of great youthfulness," says Rev. Eugene J. Schallert, director of the Institute for Socio-Religious Research at the University of San Francisco.

"I'm not depressed about it at all," he added in an interview, in his hospital appraisal of a frustrating sharply with some of the officially - voiced anxieties about it.

In fact, he said the movement of priests to work outside church structures is "loosening them up" on points toward decentralization and new "creative kinds of ministry," involving different methods, forms and styles.

"Most of these men still are interested in practicing the ministry in one way or another," he said. "They feel they can continue to serve in new, imaginative, perhaps better ways. In actuality, they're changing the ministry rather than serving it."

Father Schallert, 54, a genial, forceful Jesuit father whose studies have made him one of Roman Catholicism's leading authorities on departures from the institutional priesthood, has turned up some other unusual findings about the phenomenon, including:

—That it seldom results from priests' desire to marry, as has been widely assumed, although a marriage often follows the break.

—That while 85 per cent of priests favor optional celibacy, only 15 per cent want marry if they have a free option in the matter.

—That the departures generally stem from intensifying conflicts between the clergy's new vision of their ministry an confining inflexibilities of the church institution.

—That the priests who leave are considered by their peers to be in the upper quarter of their fellow priests in creativity, intelligence and leadership.

Contrary to some assumptions, Father Schallert said, "we've found that these men are regarded by their colleagues as the most gifted, charismatic priests in their communities."

"They're about the most wonderfully religious people you can find in really wanting to serve their fellow man," he said. "They still retain that deep concern. But they've been alienated from the institution."

Sally Ann Officers Dedicated

TORONTO (CP) — Two years of theoretical and practical training make up the program at the Salvation Army's William Booth Memorial Training College for Officers here.

The training prepares men and women from all walks of life to become full-time ministers of the gospel in the ranks of the Salvation Army.

The students have no idea where they will be sent at the end of their training or what they will do in the religious-social organization now serving in 71 countries.

Their assignments come the day they are commissioned.

And new candidates have come from such backgrounds as engineers, doctors, laborers, clerks, teachers, housewives, nurses and many secretaries.

Lt.-Col. Ernest Parr, principal of the college, said his students are young people with "the right attitudes, they are with it and have a sense of direction in life."

"They know where they are going in life—and why. Apart from that they're pretty normal young people."

What type of person does the Salvation Army seek for full-time service? Says Col. Parr:

"Every variety of man and woman comes into the Salvation Army's work. Some of them have great talents and others have few noticeable abilities, but that's not what matters in the end. Each must have a completely dedicated life and a tremendous love for his fellow man.

"I've long ago stopped trying to judge whether a candidate would make a good officer. I've been proven wrong so many times."

Life at the college is much on a community basis although there are private rooms, and for married couples with children there apartments so that the family is not separated during the training period.

"We are very conscious of the needs of the children," said Col. Parr. There is a day nursery for pre-schoolers with a highly trained staff in charge at the college, and this allows both parents to attend all classes and complete their private studies.

It costs the Army $2,000 and $3,000 to train cadets —the variation accounts for married couples with children —and of this the cadet is asked to pay only $198. The Army feels the remainder of the bill and considers it a good investment.

Single students who find romance while at the college must wait a year after they have been trained until they can be married. No Salvation Army officer can marry a person who is not an officer, unless, of course, they decide to resign from the work.

Comfort Of Death Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — The rise of scientific knowledge has helped shape man's life span. Drugs and highly developed medical skills can either eradicate or alleviate pain.

Yet there are some people—as Dr. Robert McLure of Toronto, a former missionary-physician, says—who have a life before them that will be "a veritable living hell."

Deformed and mentally defective children, horribly mutilated artillery and bomb casualties and terminally ill cancer victims have for many years been the cause of an ethical storm in the medical profession.

Dr. McLure, moderator of the United Church of Canada, says a passive form of euthanasia, sometimes called mercy killing, is practised by some Canadian doctors who withdraw artificial support or intervention from dying patients.

Dr. McLure believes a physician should not hasten a patient's death but should give the patient sedation to make his death "as painless as possible" and then let nature take over.

The controversy, however, has always been whether this method of treatment is murder —especially when viewed in the context of Christian ethics.

"I'm not speaking for either the moral or the medical profession," Dr. McLure said in an interview, "but just giving my personal viewpoint.

"I've delivered children who were horribly deformed and suffered from brain damage and I could have saved them, but knowing the conditions in which they would have to grow up I have let them die.

"I don't know whether I would do the same thing in this country," said the doctor, who worked 13 years in India. "In an affluent society we have clinics so that are able to help such children.

"Perhaps my outlook has been warped by too many years in the mission field, and I hope that people here will be compassionate enough to understand what I'm talking about.

"I've had air raid victims who were mutilated—literally 'basket cases' with the loss of all their limbs and rendered deaf, mute and blind—and I could have tried to keep them alive—but I didn't."

Jews of Europe Embrace Heritage

NEW YORK (AP) — They're fewer. They're scattered. They're feeling new stirs from the radical left. But today, a quarter-century after Hitler tried to wipe them out, the Jews of Europe are more firmly committed than ever to their heritage.

That's the assessment of a leading expert on European Jewish life, Zacharish Shuster of Paris, who says that despite their reduced numbers, monetary resources and new leaders, they affirm their Judaism more strongly than before.

"It's a new phenomenon," he said in an interview. "There's no longer a desire to hide their Jewishness. Now, even the young say it openly, 'I'm a Jew.' There's no more running away."

Before the Second World War, and the Nazi atrocities to exterminate Jews, an eroding process of assimilation had been going on, he said, in which they changed their names and dropped customs and traditions almost as if "to bury their identity."

"But this process of disappearing and assimilation is not happening any more," he said. He attributed the change to a "sense of pride" and "positive values" instilled in Jews by the creation of the state of Israel.

"It has brought a tremendous transformation in European Jewry," he said. "It has given them a sense of attachment, of belonging to a community larger than their own. It has refuted the old charges about Jews not being farmers or fighters."

But, he said, it also has brought subtle new pressures against Jews from Communist and far-left forces, who take the pro-Arab Soviet position in propagating "anti-Zionism," often clothing elements of "anti-Semitism."

Although ostensibly directed against Israel on political grounds, rather than against Israel Jewish citizens, the campaigns nevertheless revive "old cliches" about Jewish power and play on low-conscious prejudices to create distrust of Jews, Shuster said.

Shuster, a U.S. citizen who has served for 23 years as head of the American Jewish Committee's office in Paris for European and African Jewish affairs, said the Nazi massacres have left European Jewry sharply reduced in numbers and resources.

A total of about 4,500,000 Jews now live in Europe, including both its Western and Eastern spheres, compared with about 9,500,000 before the war, he said. Most of them—about 3,000,000—live in the Soviet

YOUR ANTIQUES

Old Paintings Valuable, Sentimentally at Least

All old paintings are valuable, sentimentally at least. Primitives, the work of amateurs, bring substantial prices.

An old oil painting by a skilled artist is usually on canvas stretched on a frame, and wedged at the inside corners to keep the canvas taut. Pictures of this nature should be treated with respect, at least until some identification is made.

Old paintings were done on copper, ivory, wood, gesso (wood treated with plaster and glue), paper or other materials. Paintings on canvas or paper are easiest to obtain.

Early pictures from English speaking Canada were done in water colors for the military, which taught their officers and men to sketch fortifications for military purposes. Many servicemen sketched for pleasure as well. Navy personnel also used water colors for survey work. Most of these sketches were sent back to the ships and few are available.

Mrs. Simcoe, wife of the first governor of Upper Canada, did her water color sketches on birch bark which she removed from the nearest convenient tree. She made a present of many of them to Prince Regent Albert and they remain in the British Royal collection.

Few ladies in Canada had the time to emulate Mrs. Simcoe until the end of the 19th century when amateur painting flourished.

"As the number of painters increased quality decreased. Canadian oil paintings of lakes, pine trees and Indians in canoes were given away as premiums with the purchases of $5.00 suits or clothes.

Premium paintings were mass produced on tin, cardboard and cheap paper. They were fitted with elaborate frames which now sell for about $25 to $40. With the original pine tree, lakes and Indians in canoes, most shops ask about $100; a good return on something that was originally given away.

Genuine artists bring high prices and if on good surfaces can be cleaned and restored. This is impossible to do with old oils painted on cardboard, then varnished.

Four women were local scenes by amateur artists listed as "painting in Canada" by Russell Harper bring $250 to $800 each.

LOOM OF REVERENCE

"All that has flowed through the centuries is met here . . ." — The Rev. John Case, White Chapel Anniversary Service, Picton.

* * *

"One lovely morning," said Mrs. Everett Black, 252 MacDonald Ave., upon her return from a recent six-week trip to the Orient, "I was at Easter Sunday Service in Singapore, which our party attended at the Anglican St. Andrew's Cathedral.

"It was a gloriously warm day. According to a custom of this land, cool fruit juice was offered outside as worshippers came from car were going to attend the service which was held in English.

"The haunting repetition of beloved hymns and religious lines, heard as a small child, as an adolescent, and as an adult, was a forceful revelation, as never before, that people are people. Human need shared makes a world akin. How incidental is place where reverence is concerned."

That reverence transcends place and hallows it offers credence and reflection upon hearing that one of the weakly parishes in Paris plans to build a church underground. The church and school complex will be replaced by three luxury apartment buildings. Soaring real estate values and building limitation heights make feasible, a plan of a functional, stressed concrete underground structure with a seating capacity of 2,000. A low central peak will serve as a skylight. Churches can no longer compete with skyscrapers, declares the designer who says, "A belfry now would look ridiculous," and finds it agreeable to step down into a church.

Closer to home, one begin of the "Church in the River" began in the 1880's with boats, skiffs, dinghies, outboard motors, canoes and hunting crudes as pews forming a semicircle about a preaching clergyman on a boulder of the river bank of an inlet, Half Moon Bay, of the St. Lawrence River, near Gananoque. Tourists join summer and neighborhood residents; all casually dressed, believing religion is a pleasure to be enjoyed as a recreation, and attend every Sunday afternoon from June through September.

Since the first service held in 1887 by the Rev. John C. Castle, President of McMaster University in Toronto, a public address system and portable electric organ is now a part of the tall trees that guard the inlet with leafy branches as if folded hands in prayer. International in scope, now sponsored by the National Council of Churches, last summer for the first time a Catholic priest led the prayers along with Protestant clergymen.

The area, first known as Lonely Bay, was once sought for shelter in a storm by some residents, who felt they had been divinely protected, and gratefully cleared the spot to re-name it Half-Moon Bay. In 1901, Dr. D. Wallace of Boston and a summer resident bought the land around the inlet and gave it to the community as a place of worship out of doors. This movement is now becoming popular elsewhere, and considered by many, reviving waning interest in religion, with about 5 million tourists attending such services throughout North America resort and recreational areas.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Sharon: "I hate washing dishes. Why can't Ed do it some of the time?"

Mother: "Ed has to help Dad in the yard. He does his share around here."

Mother: "It would be a good idea for Ed to learn to clean up the kitchen, and I think Sharon would enjoy gardening. I'm going to let them switch around with the chores after this."

Boys, as well as girls, should learn how to take care of their laundry, to cook and keep a house in order, and the best way to learn is by doing it under supervision in the home.

WEDDING

GORDON — DAVY

Trenton Baptist Church, was the scene of the recent wedding of Marilyn Lucille Davy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Davy of Trenton and Donald John Gordon, son of Mrs. Jean Gordon of Corbyville and the late Jack Gordon. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a mint green dress of French lace over taffeta, green accessories and a yellow hat. Her corsage consisted of yellow roses.

Number of Teenage Investors Increases

HAMILTON (CP) — Women are reluctant to buy stocks but an increasing number of teen-agers are investing, says Jean Morrison.

"If a woman wants to know more about investments, she can take a course which the Investment Dealers Association sponsors every year," she said in an interview.

And Mrs. Morrison is in a position to know the ins and outs of the investment business. She was recently elected chairman of the Hamilton and district group of Investment Dealers' Association of Canada.

Although Mrs. Morrison has been a salesman for almost six years with A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd., she still feels that some clients are surprised to find a female salesman.

However, there has never been a request to switch to a male salesman, she said.

She and her fellow salesmen find that women make up about 10 per cent of their clientele and that there is an increasing number of teen-age investors.

"It's probably because there is much more money in the hands of the young today and they are also being taught about it in school."

Mrs. Morrison's husband works in the construction industry and she has two teenage children.

During the course of the event the guest of honor made a speech on which he thanked all present.

Program Lets Students See Canada

By DORIS CLARE

Through the program called Young Voyageurs, 30,000 school students, largely from Grade 11, shuttle back and forth across Canada during the summer months.

Here's what they have to say: "I have not only learned, I have experienced, enjoyed." "The textbooks' boring facts have now become reality. We stood on the ground where history was made."

Before going to Quebec I felt French was just another subject we had to learn. Having heard 'Old MacDonald' sung in French we'll never want to sing it in English again." "In the few days I have been home I have talked for hours about what I have learned."

"Dear Mr.— please accept our sincere appreciation for the conduct, deportment and behavior shown by your son Tim during his visit to our home."

Says the magazine "Beautiful British Columbia" about last year's Voyageurs: "They hiked, boated, roamed over orchards, . . . our industrial plants, our museums and art galleries, historic excavation facilities, and, above all, made friends with us. . . . "An investment in Canadianism this program can't go wrong." . . .

Dear Doris: One of the joys of past years I have been finding delights me is the rereading of books I first read many years ago. In most cases my desired reading is located, sooner or later, by a second - hand bookshop. The cost of these books is usually much less than the price of new books.

The first thing I look at when they arrive is to see who first owned them. One such book had been the property of one of my husband's university professors, one had belonged to a beloved family doctor, one to a famous clergyman.

At present I am having a feast re-reading Scottish historical novels by Margaret Irwin, and English historical novels by Margaret Campbell Barnes.

Even the hunt for books almost forgotten and suddenly brought to mind, is fun. — Seventy - Five.

Dear Seventy-Five: When you can't get out to the library, the second - hand book shop is a lifesaver. And their owners will go to no end of trouble to find you what you want. They have traced a few for me, much to my delight.

Dear Doris: I am going with a professional man of 32, and am also a professional person of 26. He was married at 21. I have never been married but strongly feel things will work out.

However, we would both be interested in knowing the statistics as to the success or failure of second marriages. — Second Marriage.

Dear Second: I don't have the figures, although the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, might be able to help out.

Much depends on individual circumstance. If the first marriage was an adolescent mistake, the maturer - and - wiser second - time mate has matured, knows more about what he wants, has developed more discipline. Has learned not to expect 100 percent bliss without any effort on his part.

In your case, consider: "Why did the divorce take place? Was there unfaithfulness, or interference from in-laws, or were both partners at fault? Would you say your intended has learned anything helpful about adjusting to life with another human being?

Put a big mark on the credit side if you two communicate well. Do the pre-marriages determined to work at understanding each other and I'd say you've got a good chance of success. . . .

(There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Ann Landers

Advice on Speech Problem Inadequate

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are always referring to your "experts." So how come you didn't check with somebody before you gave that rotting answer to "Call Me Mister?" He was the

ANN LANDERS

15-year-old boy who is stuttering because people frequently mistake him for a girl on the phone. The fact that you, Ann Landers, are sometimes mistaken for a guy didn't help him much.

You should have sent him first to a laryngologist to learn if he has an abnormality. This can sometimes cause a high-pitched voice. If no abnormality is present, he might get help from a speech therapist.

Please to anyone who has a speech disorder, including voice difficulties, to write to the American Speech and Hearing Association, 9030 Old Georgetown Road, Washington, D.C. 20014. This organization can let people know what help is available to them in their own community. — HAGERSTOWN, MD.

DEAR HAGERS: You are right. My answer was inadequate. Thank you for providing me with a better one.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If you tell me to M.Y.O.B., I will take your advice, but I do so want to help this young woman. Lisetta came to work here six months ago. She has a fine figure, beautiful hair, excellent taste in clothes and a lovely face — until she opens her mouth. The girl has several teeth missing and she is in dire need of dental care. Bad breath can make a person look years older. Why doesn't she see this and do something about it?

Money is not a problem, I'm sure. She drives a new car and her clothes are the best. Whenever I look at this girl I feel guilty for not having the nerve to speak out. Should I, Ann? If so — how? — TIMID AND HATING MYSELF.

* * *

DEAR TIM: A person who walks around with teeth missing and a mouth that needs restoration does so for one of two reasons. (1) Money problems. (2) Pathological fear of dental work. I suspect Lisetta falls into the latter category.

Tell her you have a wonderful dentist who is up on the latest anesthetics and that you will try to get an appointment for her if she wishes. The poor girl probably remembers dental agony as it was 20 years ago. She doesn't realize that times have changed. Tell her.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was surprised when you advised the hypochondriac to marry a nurse. You've gotta be kidding! Where did you get the idea that a man who marries a nurse gets special attention when he's sick. That's a laugh. My brother married a nurse and she wouldn't bring him an aspirin if he fractured his skull.

This sort of thing seems to be the unwritten law of life. My sister married a photographer and she got so tired of begging her husband to take a picture of the kids she finally went to a studio and paid a stranger $30. I'm married to a furrier and I don't own a fur coat. I had three in three years and my husband sold every one of them right off my back. So please tell it like it is. — CLOTH COAT CLARA.

DEAR CLARA: You've right. I should have known better. The most vivid testimonials to these bitter facts of life come from wives of carpenters. Dozens of these exasperated women have written to say their houses are falling down. I always suggest that they hire the work done. It's cheaper than slivers. Who was it that said, "The shoemaker's children go barefoot?"

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Homemade Ice Cream Dessert

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: What I am writing you for is to find out if you have a nice recipe for making homemade ice cream. Years ago I had a wonderful recipe but it got mislaid. I intend to buy myself a freezer. Sounds good eh? — Mrs. Alisha Z.

ANSWER: Because an ice-creaming member of our readers are acquiring electric and old-fashioned crank freezers I am pleased to comply.

HOMEMADE ICE CREAM
No. 1. (crank freezer)

4 cups homogenized milk
2 cups sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
¼ tsp. salt
4 eggs, beaten
1 tbsp. vanilla
4 cups light (10 or 18 per cent) cream

Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt in top of double boiler. Blend in milk gradually. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until thickened, about 12-15 min. Stir a small amount of the hot cornstarch mixture into the beaten eggs; then stir the eggs into the remaining cornstarch mixture. Cook over boiling water 4 or 5 min. longer, stirring constantly. Chill thoroughly. (This is essential for a smooth ice cream.) Stir in vanilla and chilled cream. Fill a crank-type freezer container not more than 2-3 full. Freeze in a handcranked or electric freezer with a mixture of 1 part ice cream salt and 6 parts crushed ice. Remove dasher and crank freezer with 4 parts salt mixture (1 part salt to 8 parts ice) and allow to ripen in the freezer about 2 hrs. Or, pack ice cream into freezer containers and harden in home freezer. Makes 3½ qts. ice cream, enough for about 28 servings.

VANILLA ICE CREAM
— FRENCH TYPE NO. 2

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
6 egg yolks
2 cups 18 percent cream ("Half and Half")
2 cups heavy whipping cream
2 or 3 tsps. vanilla

Put milk, sugar and salt in top of double boiler; stir well and place over boiling water, cover and heat to scalding. Beat yolks well, stir scalded milk into them slowly, then return to double boiler and cook and stir with silver spoon until custard just coats spoon. Remove at once and stand in ice water, stirring until custard is cold. Stir in remaining ingredients (or bi-pping cream is not whipped), mix well and turn into hand freezer can. Average freezer can (like into one which will accommodate about 8 - lbs. chipped ice for which 3 cups coarse ice cream salt is needed. Turn crank until ice cream is frozen (see above).

American Who Gives A Damn Can Comfort Many in Vietnam

Alma De Lace, wife of Associated Press staff member Daniel De Lace, accompanied him on recent extensive visits to North and South Vietnam. In South Vietnam, she met and photographed Americans who work at easing the misery that Asians call karma. The following is her story.

By ALMA DE LUCE
Associated Press Writer

An American who gives a damn in Vietnam can comfort a lot of misery.

Dr. Leslie Smith cares for lepers. He has been a medical missionary more than 40 years.

Because of guerrilla attacks on Highway No. 1, through the pass, it is closed at night. Fighter planes fly over the leprosarium on daytime strikes into the nearby hills.

The lepers smile at their work. After being objects of fear, they have gained a feeling of security, with medical care and little hoses of their own.

They catch fish, raise pigs, chickens and rabbits, and grow taro, sweet potatoes, manioc and garden vegetables.

Even when the disease has been arrested and tests are negative, lepers do not return to their home villages. For 365 Vietnamese, adults and children, Happy Haven is the world. It is supported by United World Missions.

With materials donated by the U.S. Air Force, the leprosarium now has a communal building. It is named for two Dutch volunteers, Mimi du Fosse and Nelly Heyliger, who nursed the lepers in recent years.

The only other settlement on Crescent Bay is an orphan village for 85 children, ages two to six. They were rescued from a besieged Montagnard hamlet in Quang Ngai province through the efforts of Major Myrl Allinder, of North Augusta, S.C.

When Mrs. Daniel Blackwell, of Atlanta, City, Mo., received word about the orphans from her husband, a navy dental officer in Da Nang, she collected 42 musical instruments as gifts. The orphans loved them. They like lessons from a marine band.

Some orphans already play tunes, others still practice scales. When giving a concert, each plays whatever song he knows.

Dr. Harryman, an Australian medical missionary, returned to Hrey territory in 1963 and has produced the tribe's first dictionary and 12 books. His translated Bible story of David and Goliath is the Bru tribesmen's favorite reading.

A Marine Corps major, Edward W. Butchart, of Virginia Beach, Va., has done as much as any outsider to bring a little pleasure to lepers and orphans. He led me to the Da Nang city orphanage, which has 347 children looking for "one pot-bellied baby." She is a radiantly beautiful girl of 12 months. Soon after birth, she was found abandoned in a refuse heap. A U.S. Navy enlisted man and his wife want to adopt her.

A navy captain showed me a heartbreaking sight that seemed beyond the power of consolation. Her hands and feet amputated, a Vietnamese girl of 18 lay on her back in the Da Nang municipal hospital, which U.S. forces built.

She was one of 28 civilians wounded by plastic bombs, buried into open doorways by terrorists speeding by on motorcycles, in a single night of attacks.

In Quang Tri province near the demilitarized zone, Lt.-Col. Rosemarie Mahoney, of Allentown, Pa., cares for 130 children a week at well as American an Vietnamese battle casualties. She is chief nurse of the 18th Surgical Hospital.

Inca Baiter

Zolla Montesinos Rivers, 18, of Guayaquil, Ecuador smiles as she parades in her native costume during preliminary judging Wednesday night on Miami Beach. Her indian costume was made of copper. Miss Rivers is a secretary and measures 36-23-36. She is 5 feet, 7 inches tall and weighs 110 pounds.

Tweed District Personals

TWEED — Mr. Everal Biggs, Deputy Minister of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, recently announced the transfer of Miss Elaine Bateman, B.H. Ec., Home Economist, from Dufferin County to Hastings County.

Michael and John Hunt, both sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Hunt, of Tweed, were successful in passing their examinations at the Peterborough Teachers' College. Michael has accepted a position on the staff of Deseronto Public school, while John will join the staff of St. Thomas' the Apostle School in Renfrew. Michael is now attending his 4th week course in Sociology and History at Brock University, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Mrs. G. Dunham of Orpah is a patient in the Great War Memorial Hospital in Perth.

Stirling

STIRLING — Mrs. Charles Conley, Old Marmora Road, Stirling was "at home" Thursday, July 9 when over 70 ladies, the Dunlight public school, while they and friends gathered to extend congratulations on her 80th birthday.

Telesat Rejects Consortium Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Telesat Canada Ltd. has rejected a proposal for a consortium to build a domestic communications satellite, L. D. Clarke, president of Spar Aerospace Products Ltd., said Friday night.

Mr. Clarke said in an interview he made the proposal at an Ottawa meeting July 3 with Kierans, John D. Houlding, president of RCA Ltd. of Montreal, and A. A. Golden, president of Telesat.

He said he received a telegram from Mr. Golden Thursday saying Telesat "was not prepared to accept an alternate bid."

The cabinet is expected to meet next week to consider a recommendation by Telesat that the contract for the world's first domestic communications satellite be given to Hughes Aircraft Co. of California.

The cabinet also is expected to consider a new bid for the contract by RCA, which with Spar its original bid in the face of a lower one from Hughes Aircraft.

Mr. Clarke said he had proposed that Spar, Telesat, RCA and the government undertake the program as a joint venture, thus relieving RCA of a major share of the responsibilities it would have had to assume as a prime contractor.

He said he also had suggested the inclusion of Bristol Aerospace Ltd. of Winnipeg, Northern Electric Co. Ltd. of Montreal and the government-owned Communications Research Centre to further increase the Canadian content of the program.

Mr. Clarke said he had proposed that Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. of California be included in order to exploit the talent of the Canadian firms in United States and export markets and "enhance the long term viability of the program."

Cobourg Horse Show Could Equal Royal Winter Turnout

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

To hear Sandra Jorgenson talk, you'd think Cobourg was about to become the equestrian capital of Canada.

"It might be," she says seriously.

Last year Sandra and 19 other directors tried to revive the renowned Cobourg Horse Shows of the 1920-1923 era that even drew top riders from Great Britain.

"We are strictly on a local basis," she says of the first revival that drew about 200 mounts to a one-day show.

"There could be as many as 700 horses there, and we already have entries from British Columbia and Nova Scotia," beams Sandra. "That would make us just about as big as the Royal Winter Fair.

"And next year we could be international," she adds. "We're hoping for recognition by the United States Horse Show Association."

A $10,000 kitty of trophies and prize money is helping the Cobourg Horse Show Association make waves in Canada's equestrian circles.

But the big drawing card is a Grand Prix invitational event as the show's final day which will feature nine of the ten members of Canada's "A" and "B" Olympic Equestrian teams.

"Riding has sky-rocketed since we won the gold medal at Mexico in '68," says Sandra. "Now we'll be providing our Olympic team a chance to compete over Olympic-size courses in their own country."

Misses Jim Elder, Jim Day, Tom Gayford, and Moffat Dunlop will make the Cobourg show their first stop-over from their current European tour. Only "A" team member Barbara Simpson will be missing, remaining in Amsterdam to compete in the Women's European Championships.

All five "B" team members are currently on the United States equestrian circuit.

"This kind of meet goes on all year in Europe — and last year three was one in Canada at the CNE stadium. The Europeans still think our Olympic win was a fluke," says Sandra.

The nine team members will actually be competing against one another at Cobourg's Grand Prix jumping event for an $800 winner's share of "expense money", as purses are politely known in Olympic circles.

The show's organizers are quick to stress they are more interested in participants than spectators.

"The Olympic aspect is a crowd - getter — but we're certainly not just pushing that," Sandra Jorgenson insists.

"There must be two or three hundred Western Horse enthusiasts alone in the Belleville area. We've got 14 classes for them on the Saturday of the show, and they'll have their own arena.

In addition, Saturday's second show day will offer 40 classes of "English" competition in two rings and 24 classes for Arabian fanciers.

"The public sometimes gets confused by all the class names," admits Mrs. Jorgenson. "But basically, horses are judged on either appearance or performance."

The show will open Friday, Aug. 21 with an English Junior Day in which under - 18 equestrians will get a chance at improving their calibre.

"We're not hoping for much of a gate that day — we just want to give the young riders a start toward being possible Olympic team members," Sandra adds.

"We want to put this thing on an annual basis to help and encourage our Olympic and Equestrian teams" Sandra Jorgenson emphasizes. "But if we get enough public support, we intend to establish an equestrian centre in Cobourg to train young Canadian riders and horses to reach Olympic standards."

The centre would serve the owners of 5,000 riding horses she estimates there are in Eastern Ontario.

A special project would include providing riding for the disabled, which has proved highly successful in Great Britain.

In addition to all of which, the annual Cobourg event will represent the Eastern Ontario Championships.

Bowerman Seven Back of Leader At Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez is a world beater. He said so himself.

GARY BOWERMAN
Seven Off Pace

His five - under - par round gave the Puerto Rican a tie for third at 138, two strokes off the pace set by Don Massengale.

Jack Lewis and Ted Hayes m'e just one stroke behind Massengale with 136.

"I've added 40 feet on my drives since I got that new driver," Chi Chi said.

The new club, which he used first at the Canadian Open in London, Ont., last weekend, has a round handle instead of one that had a flat side.

Canadians were led into today's round by Ken Fulton of St. Julie, Que., who carded at 143 for the first 36 holes. Belleville's Gary Bowerman was another stroke back while Al Balding of Toronto was in at 145.

Failing to qualify were Ben Kern of Toronto at 148 and Wal Homcomik of Winnipeg at 150.

Seventy - nine players survived the cut at 146 on the 7,125 - yard North Shore Country Club course.

Belleville catcher Don McTaggert puts the tag on Trenton outfielder Gordon Kelly in the opening game of the "Golden Bat" bantam baseball tournament, last night. Trenton came up with an 11-4 victory to remain in the battle for the "A" championship, while the loss by Belleville drops them to the "B" section.

Bantams Welcome Trenton In 11-4 Loss in Tourney Opener

Belleville's Legion 99 bantams proved to be overly congenial hosts in the opening game of the "Golden Bat" Invitational Tournament, as they dropped an 11-4 decision to Trenton.

Lackadaisical defensive play by the Legion team and a strong 11 - hit Trenton attack accounted for the win. In the other opening round contest Thurlow Merchants bowed 13-4 to Port Hope.

Trenton classed starting pitcher Bob Moore by collecting eight runs in the first two innings on solid line drives. Ron McTaggert took over the pitching duties in the third inning and gave up the other three Trenton scores. They gave up 11 hits and three batters.

Don Armstrong went all the way for the winners, allowing 11 hits, but pitching well in the clutch as Belleville left a number of runners stranded. He walked five batters and fired third strikes past a half-dozen.

The best of the Branch 99 batters was Tom Coughlan, who slammed three safeties. Ray and Cole each chipped in a pair of safeties.

Port Hope pounded out 14 hits in their easy 13-4 victory over Thurlow, while checking the losers on four safeties. Devine was the winning pitcher, while McDonnell went all the way in a losing effort for Thurlow.

Aggens was the top Port Hope hitter, lacing out five hits, while Rowe added another three. McDonnell supplied most of the Thurlow support with Dent collected the other hits.

Despite overcast skies, tournament officials are planning to continue with the remainder of the tournament. "It's going to go on," said tournament chairman Ron Lepenetz.

The grand championship game is slated for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Canada to Send 57 Marksmen Against Commonwealth Best

BISLEY, England (CP) — The biggest contingent of Canadians ever to invade this camp will begin serious competition Monday in the annual sharpshooting scrap among the cream of Commonwealth marksmen.

A 57-member Canadian contingent representing the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association, the armed services and the cadets will compete on Bisley's windswept ranges for trophies against about 1,200 marksmen from a dozen areas.

For the first time in many years here the Canadians will be pitted against Americans and Britons in a match called the International Palma, being fired at England for the first time since 1923. The contest is regarded as the world championship long-range team match.

The DCRA group under Lt.-Col.-Tom Hall of Port Moody, B.C., includes two former winners of the Queen's Prize, the top Commonwealth award for individual marksmanship. They are Gunner Westling (1960) of Burnaby, B.C., and Arnold Parks (1969) of Saint John, N.B.

Two former top Bisley prizewinners—Norman Beckett (1961) of Andover, Ont., and Dick Hampton (1960) of Woodlawn, Ont.—qualified but were unable to make the long and expensive trip.

The service team commanded by Capt. Tom DaFaye of Ottawa took on the Royal Marines and broke even at 1,000 yards.

The DCRA threw in six members who had never before been to Bisley in a tractional match against the Bank of England and emerged with a 402-379 win.

Top men among the Canadians was Daryl Surry, 29, of Saint John, N.B., with 102 of a possible 105. Others on the team were George Sanderson, 67, of Regina, and Ottawa's Jim Jones, 70.

For the early part of next week the stage will be behind them so far as the Canadians are concerned—by the service team, mainly made up of members of the Royal Chandelier Regiment based at London, Ont., who won their way to Bisley in last year's shooting at Connaught Ranges.

Trevino Could Talk Himself Into British Open Victory

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — The man closest to Lee Trevino in the British Open golf championship said the volatile American will win the coveted title today "if he just keeps talking."

"As long as Lee chats away in between his wonderful concentration on shots, he keeps relaxed and is so relaxed that he's great to watch," said 40-year-old Willie Aitcheson.

Aitcheson is carrying Trevino's bag into the final round of the 72-hole tournament over the 6,961-yard, par-72 Old Course. Trevino has a 208, eight under par, for a two-shot lead over the field.

"When I caddied for Roberto de Vicenzo at Hoylake three years ago, I thought Roberto found his relaxed touch in the third round," said Aitcheson.

"Lee has had it from the beginning here and right now he is playing better than Roberto did then."

Trevino's par 72 in wild, blustering wind Friday was a masterpiece of being in charge. Playing with defending champion Tony Jacklin, the U.S. Open titleholder, the American was under more than ordinary pressure in the midst of a huge, partisan crowd.

"But he chats away, gets them laughing," said Aitcheson. "He does that to get his own nerves into good shape."

Jacklin, two shots behind with 210 along with Jack Nicklaus and Doug Sanders, may have done Trevino a favor at one point.

"We had a talk on the 11th hole Friday," Aitcheson recalled. "I said it was a four iron. Lee thought maybe a five or even a six. He took a four and it came off all right but not too wonderful. Jacklin hit one and went right through the green. Lee said there, I'll bet he hits a five iron. I found out he hit a three iron.

"From that minute on, Lee relaxed. It did something for him. I don't quite know what."

What many didn't know was that Trevino, for all his gags in public, sat for two hours all alone before he went out, chewing on his nails.

"I really want to win this one and it means a million bucks to me," the 31-year-old former U.S. Open champion said.

"That's why it was crazy out there on the 16th when that dog barked and I threw-putted. Lose a million over a dog's barking? That's nuts."

Trevino might have had a three-stroke lead going into the final round, but he blew a five-foot putt on the 16th hole when the dog barked just as he putted.

"Gee, if I could have got my hands on that dog he would have been running away with a putter in his head," Trevino said with a smile.

Trevino stayed off several strong challenges to maintain his lead.

The big-hitting Nicklaus, chasing his second Open title, faded, dropping strokes at the 11th, 12th and 13th holes, but then recovered with a birdie at the 16th and finished with 72.

Jacklin also slipped back when he dropped a stroke at the 13th, but a birdie three on the 18th, after he had pitched only nine inches from the flag, kept him among the leaders with a one-over-par 72.

It was Trevino, however, who mounted the best finish. With Jacklin looking almost certain to cut his lead to one stroke, Trevino calmly holed his final putt from 30 feet.

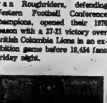
Brill Still Sound Says Coach

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian coach Lionel Pugh Friday night denied a report that high jumper Debbie Brill, a gold medal hope in the Commonwealth Games, injured her left leg Friday.

Pugh, in Edinburg, said in a telephone interview with The Province:

"She's no more hurt than I am. All that British press here. You scratch your head and they make a feature of it."

Pugh said Miss Brill does have a slight soreness in her right knee but it wasn't serious. "In fact, she went for a hike up a mountain this evening."



Meeting of Leaders

British Prime Minister Edward Heath shaked hands with Lee Trevino of Dallas at St. Andrew's, Scotland, Friday before the latter started his third round of play in the British Open with defending champion Tony Jacklin. Trevino was the leader in the tourney after two rounds.

Roughriders Start CFL Season On Right Foot

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders, defending Western Football Conference champions, opened their 1970 season with a 37-31 victory over British Columbia Lions in an exhibition game before 18,464 fans Friday night.

GEORGE REED

Both teams threw three quarterbacks into the fray, but it was the veterans who made the difference. Ron Lancaster, who long accounted for 112 of the Roughrider's total 130-yard aerial gain, while Paul Brothers was at the helm for two Lions' touchdowns.

Tight end Nolan Bailey, a newcomer from Prairie View A and M College halfback Ralph Thompson and fullback George Reed got the Saskatchewan touchdowns, with Jack Abendschan adding two field goals and three converts.

Lions' touchdowns were by fullback A. D. Whitsell, formerly with Washington Redskins of the National League, veteran pass-receiver Lach Heron and Jerry Bradley, defensive halfback who snared an opposition pass.

Ted Gerela booted three converts.

DURBAN (Reuters) — A South African Supreme Court judge Friday ordered the arrest of five International hockey players—three Canadians two Dutchmen — who are accused of breaking a contract. The players are Canadians James Whitaker, of Nobel, Ont., Floyd Thompson and William MacLeod and Douglas Scott and Rene Lesterhuis of Holland. In papers before the judge, Otto Hertz, president of the South African Ice Hockey Association, said the players had agreed to play in this country between May 5 and Sept. 15, 1970. After training games and league matches they left Johannesburg June 24 and were traced by private investigators to Durban, Hertz said. He claimed their absence caused the association a loss of 12,507 and $18,170. Mr. Justice Burns granted the association's urgent application for the players' arrest in chambers.

TORONTO (CP) — Donato Paduano of Montreal had barely been hailed victor in his match at Montreal Thursday night with English veteran Johnny Cooke than Toronto promoter Frank Tunney was on the phone to arrange a fight for the Italian - Canadian here. Paduano, 21, nailed down his 20th consecutive victory as a pro in the Cooke fight. Tunney said Friday he didn't have anyone particular in mind for the bout, to be staged at Maple Leaf Gardens, but he was considering Toronto's Colin Fraser. Fraser, who appeared in the semi-final on the Paduano - Coke card, got up off the floor three times to register a fifth - round KO over Gerald Ratte of Montreal.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Beverly Boys, Canada's best diving hope in the Commonwealth Games beginning here July 16, ruptured an eardrum earlier this week but Canadian officials say she'll perform. A spokesman for the Canadian team said the 18-year-old Oshawa girl suffered the injury Wednesday at the Royal Commonwealth pool shortly after the Canadian team arrived. She got a clean bill of health Friday, however, from Dr. Edward Percy, senior medical officer with the Canadian team. Miss Boys was expected to resume practising today. The injury was treated promptly, said Dr. Percy, thereby preventing any infection.

Soviet Wrestlers Top World Bouts

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Russians, with perfect pairings, and injured Bobby Douglas of the United States lead 44 athletes into today's final rounds of the world amateur freestyle wrestling championships.

Alexander Medved, 21, seeking his second consecutive and fourth world heavyweight title, had three pins and a bye for no penalty points when preliminary rounds ended Friday night.

Vladimir Gokhidze, 28, with seven years' wrestling experience, will be trying for his fifth straight pin in the 220-pound division. Gokhidze, with two European titles, has pinned all his opponents in less than two minutes of scheduled nine-minute matches.

Douglas, native of Bridgeport, Ohio, the only Negro in the five-day competition, has three penalty points in the 149½-pound class. He competed Friday with a slight concussion and a sore shoulder, suffered Thursday.

The 23-year-old assistant wrestling coach at Iowa State University, fought to a 3-3 draw with Abdollah Movahed of Iran, five-time world and defending olympic champion in fourth round action. He had two pins and a decision in other matches.

Peter Germer of East Germany and Osmen Donelion of Bulgaria, who finished second to Medved last year, are the other survivors in the heavyweight division.

The heavyweights will participate in a round-robin final with Germer and Donelion with two penalty points each.

Larry Kristof of Edwardsville, Ill., Khorlo Baldanyadyn of Mongolia, and Vgasil Todorov of Bulgaria are the other wrestlers remaining in the 220-pound bracket.

Canada, which entered nine wrestlers in the 10 divisions, will be watching from the sidelines.

Eliminated were Ken Shand of Toronto, 105½ pounds; Dave Sikki of Hamilton, 114½; Ken Stogerman of Montreal, 125½; Pat Bolger of Dutton, Ont., 136½; Alfred Wurr of Winnipeg, 163; Nick Schori of Stratford, Ont., 180½; Claude Pilon of Ottawa, 198; Ernie Fulton of Vancouver, 220; and heavyweight Murv Holden of New Westminster, B.C.

Douglas, who has competed in six world championships and finished second in 1966 and fourth last year, still has a chance to win his division.

Ismail Jimenicov of Bulgaria leads the division with 1½ penalty points while Movahed has three. Tomaz Bezhad of Japan and Nasrula Nasrulaev of Russia each has 3½ points.

"I should have beat Movahed instead of picking up a lousy draw," Douglas said in an interview. "All I can do is go out and do my best. However, if I beat my next opponent I should be in the medal."

Douglas, with a physical education degree, plans to get a job at a university in Canada next year "and teach wrestling to Canadian youngsters."

The 10 winners of freestyle will be decided tonight with Russia expected to win four or five gold medals. Last year the Russians won four gold medals in freestyle and six in Greco-Roman to dominate the championships.

Russia has nine wrestlers still in freestyle, while Bulgaria has seven and the U.S. and Japan six each.

Wrestlers are judged by the Basil Kazakov system. The winner of a fall receives no penalty points, the loser four. In a decision the winner gets one and the loser three if the winner scores nine points or less.

If he wins by 10 points or more, he gets ½ point and the loser 3½. In a draw, each wrestler gets two penalty points. If a wrestler is disqualified or defaults a match, he gets four penalty points.

Tigers 'Raise Cain' with Baltimore

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Les Cain and Tom Timmermann threw identical pitches and identically pulled the Detroit Tigers to within five games of first place in Baltimore in the American League East.

The pair combined Friday night to end the lead in that flag race by pitching the Tigers past the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 as Detroit, and Cain also chipped in with a decisive two-run single.

In the West Division, California Angels also climbed Minnesota Twins lead to five games with a 3-1 victory over the Twins Anaheim.

Washington Senators inspired the New York Yankees 3-1 on Frank Howard's homer; Boston Red Sox hammered Cleveland Indians 9-1, Milwaukee Brewers whomped Oakland Athletics 5-1 and Kansas City Royals swept a Sox 3-4 and 3-4.

With Danny McLain sidelined earlier this year and Earl Wilson injured, the Tigers split to Toledo for Cain Mary 1. He was blasted in his first start. He split his next two decisions, but now has streaked in eight straight victories.

FRANK HOWARD
Scores 24th Homer

The 23-year-old lefty, who had a brief 3-3 stint with the Tigers in 1968, singled in two runs in the fourth inning for a 3-0 lead and blanked the Orioles on one hit through six. He also had struck out nine, including Paul Blair and Frank Robinson three times each.

But three singles, a walk and a fielders' choice got Baltimore two runs with one out in the seventh, chasing Cain, and Timmerman, who also is making a name for himself, strolled out of the bullpen.

He got out of that jam and cut down the Orioles without a hit through the final two innings for his 10th save to go with two victories since he was recalled from Toledo June 16.

Timmerman, at 30 the old man of the bullpen, had been sent down after being bombed early in the season, but found himself again as a starter at Toledo. He was 8-2 as a starter there when the Tigers called him up last season, and had a 4-1 mark before the Tigers recalled him this year.

Rich Reese reportedly pitched California past the Twins with a six-hitter, giving up a run in the first when Billy Cowan followed a routine fly to drop for a double. Jim Fregosi gave him his victory with a two-run homer, his 15th, in the first.

Howard slashed his 24th homer with a man on in the third inning to spoil the major league debut of Steve Kline, who lost a duel with the Senators' Dick Bosman. Bosman hurled a four-hitter.

Gary Peters, scattered seven hits and Carl Yastrzemski singled and homered for two runs for Boston, while Bob Bolin singled for one run and pitched his first complete game of the season for Milwaukee.

Pat Kelly drove in four runs with a double and a homer in Kansas City's first triumph and Jim Rooker scattered seven hits and hit a sacrifice fly in the nightcap as the Royals handed the White Sox their ninth doubleheader loss. They have split once.

Mays Closing Quickly On 3,000-Hit Plateau

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Mays, poised on the threshold of his one of baseball's greatest accomplishments, needs only a late weekend against the Houston Astros to celebrate the 3,000-hit plateau in Tuesday night's All-Star Game at Cincinnati.

Mays, who'll be the starting centre fielder for the National League All Stars, cracked two hits Friday night in the San Francisco Giants' 4-3 victory over Houston. That left him with a career total of 2,994—six away from the magic mark.

When Willie gets there, he'll be the 10th player in history to reach 3,000 hits and the second this season. The Atlanta Braves' Hank Aaron made it on May 17 and now has 3,068. He'll be in right field alongside Mays Tuesday night which helps explain why the National League rates as 7-5 favorite.

In other National League action Friday, Montreal Expos stood off Cincinnati Reds 8-7, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped St. Louis Cardinals 9-2, Chicago Cubs blasted Philadelphia Phillies 3-0, Los Angeles Dodgers topped San Diego Padres 8-7 and Atlanta split a doubleheader with Cincinnati Reds, winning 11-9 before losing 3-1.

Mays drove in two runs and scored one for the Giants and Ron Hunt cracked four hits including a two-run single that put the Giants in front for keeps.

Relievers Mike Davison and Jerry Johnson nailed down the victory with clutch pitching. Davison pitched out of a sixth inning jam and worked two scoreless innings. Then Johnson belle him out of trouble in the eighth and finished up.

Coco Laboy cracked two doubles and a single to drive in four runs and some clutch relief pitch by Claude Raymond helped Montreal end New York's seven - game winning streak.

The Mets had whittled a five-run Expos lead down to two and had the bases loaded with one out when Raymond came on to shut off the Mets' losing rally. After Montreal added two more runs in the ninth, the Mets loaded the bases in their last rammond again, but the veteran reliever pitched his way out of a bowling only one run to score.

It was Montreal's sixth victory in 10 tries against the Mets this year—the best record any club has against the defending world champions. Pittsburgh took advantage of New York's loss to chop one game off the Mets' lead in the east, the position best St. Louis.

Ed Oliver's ninth inning homer broke a tie and sent the Pirates rushed three more runs across two on a triple by reliever Dave Giusti, who won his ninth straight game.

The victory moved the red-hot Pirates to within one-half game of the Mets. Pittsburgh has won eight of its last 10 and 15 of the last 19 to surge into contention.

The Cubs scored both their runs in the second inning when Jim Hickman opened with a single and scored on Ron Santo's double. Geo Jerome Hartsfield Santo to third and Johnny Callison delivered the run with a single.

San Diego bunched four home runs in the ninth inning but lost to the Dodgers.

Wes Parker ripped two doubles and a triple, driving in three runs to lead a 16-hit Dodger attack that built a 8-2 lead going into the ninth. Home runs by Ivan Murrell, Ed Spiezio and Dave Campbell knocked Phil Singer and Ron Slocum. Clarence Gaston rocketed a two-run shot off reliever Jose Pena.

Orlando Pena pitched a pair of two-run homers and Cleo Boyer also tagged one as Atlanta hung on to whip Cincinnati in the first game of their doubleheader.

In the nightcap, Tony Cloninger worked eight shutout innings, allowing just four hits to earn the victory for the Reds.

Expos Call Halt To Met Win Streak

NEW YORK (AP) — Coco Laboy drove in four runs, and Claude Raymond put down a late uprising Friday night as Montreal Expos snapped New York Mets' seven-game winning streak of the season at seven games with a 9-7 victory.

Rookie right-hander Carl Morton, 104, was tagged for 10 hits in 7 1-3 innings but became the first pitcher to beat the Mets three times this season. The last-place Expos have beaten only the defending world champions six times in 19 meetings.

The Expos fell behind in the first inning on Tommie Agee's double and Ken Singleton's single and 4-0 in the second on consecutive singles by Bob Bailey, John Bateman and Laboy.

Montreal grabbed a 5-1 lead in the fourth on singles by Bailey and Bateman. Laboy's first double and sacrifice fly by Morton. They scored three more in the fifth, two runs riding home on Laboy's second double and one on a single by Bobby Wine.

Catcher Bateman killed a seventh-inning threat by the Mets by picking Dave Marshall off third base for the second out after a run had scored.

Raymond came on with the bases loaded and one out in the eighth after the Mets scored twice.

The Expos added two runs in the ninth. Then Raymond pitched out of another from bases-loaded jam in the bottom of the ninth.

St. Andrews Shows Teeth

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Wild, gusty winds roared in from the sea and turned the famous Old Course into a virtual nightmare for the 87 finalists in the British Open golf championship today.

Early starters chasing Lee Trevino, Tony Jacklin, Jack Nicklaus and Doug Sanders in the final 18 holes were unable to cope with the blow and scores skyrocketed.

If this is what Trevino meant when he said "I hope it blows, and blows and blows," he cer-tainly got his wish.

Trevino's long, low irons will be required if he is to keep the two-shot lead at eight under par 208.

Skilled players such as Tommy Aaron illustrated the problem. Aaron needed 42 shots going out into the wind on the front nine, six over par, and added to his agony 73 shots of the pace Aaron was well out of it early.

The first dozen competitors out skied into either the high 30s and 40s. Bright sun was of little benefit in the biting wind.

Broome Sweeps Clean

LA BAULE, France (Reuters) — Davis Broome of England won the gold medal in the men's world jumping championship Friday in an exercise of strategy that proved he is the world's best horseman.

In the demanding test that required each of the four finalists to ride first their own horse and then the horses of their opponents, 30-year-old Broome completed four circuits on the jumping course with a total of only one knockdown for four faults.

Graziano Mancinelli of Italy finished second with eight faults, followed by Harvey Smith of Britain with 12%, and West German champion Alwin Schockemoehle with 16.

In the preliminary competition, Broome, riding Beethoven, barely edged Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., out of the finals. Elder, who ranked fifth in the world championship riding Shoemaker, rated Friday by the chef d'equipe of the British team as "one of the best riders in the world."

WE'RE REALLY SORRY

to disappoint those of you who called about the 12-unit apartment houses you saw under construction to find they were all sold. With such value as we are offering in these buildings they just don't last. Although lots for 12-unit buildings are becoming scarcer and more expensive all the time, we have just acquired one more lot on the East side. If you are interested in such a building give us a call. We have all the figures to show you how to really put your money to work.

WANT TO BUILD ON THE BAY ?

We have a lovely lot on Rednerville Road not far from Belleville. There's 150' frontage on the bay. Let us build the house of your choice the way you want it built. Such lots as these are truly at a premium.

Minister Seeks Jobs For Flock

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Leonard Whitton, 33, is more concerned with the temporal than the spiritual problems facing the 300 families who live in his Anglican parish of Gander, Nfld. He's working to bring education and employment to his flock.

His parish contains six churches to six villages spread over 40 miles around Gander Bay, about 20 miles northeast of Gander. It is a depressed area.

Mr. Whitton said in a recent interview job possibilities in the area have been reduced drastically since mechanization was introduced and lumbering firms began to close down woods camps. Most men earn a living at seasonal occupations, such as construction and guiding tourists.

Welfare benefits and home-grown vegetables keep people from starving, but that isn't enough without doing some "rural development", he said.

He is a founding member of a recently-formed rural development association which seeks to improve unemployment opportunities.. and he says he is bitter that the provincial government did not help form the organization.

"The government has developed workers but they don't encourage people to form associations. They just offer to help after it's formed."

Another project is a community pasture. "Some families have sheep and cattle but not there's no place for them so they just wander around." The pasture would require the draining and re-seeding of bogland, which demands the co-operation which the association fosters.

Mr. Whitton's other major concern is education. By making regular parish visits, he is trying to convince parents they should accept the new consolidated elementary schools in the interests of their children.

Queen to Open Museum Of Manitoba's History

WINNIPEG (CP) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will journey through the backwaters of Manitoba history July 15 when they officiate at the opening of the new Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

In dioramas, glass displays, photo montages and life-like exhibits, a thousand objects will trace the history of Plains Indians, the explorers of early Canada and the settlers of the Red River colony for the royal couple.

The two museum galleries under the building that houses them, the province's 1970 centennial project, cost $4,000,000, a sum that was raised by federal, provincial and private donations.

Now costing $20,000,000—it includes a concert hall, science tower and planetarium, as well as the museum. A modern centre will be opened on the site in the fall.

The Queen and Prince Philip will open two galleries on their Manitoba visit—an orientation gallery and a prairie gallery. Museum officials have a five-year plan to add five additional galleries to the museum's northern forest gallery and an urban gallery, by 1975.

Graphic designers, silk screen technicians, carpenters and electricians scurried around scaffolds in the prairie gallery across this week, mindful of the two special visitors who will soon be viewing their work as they put finishing touches to the galleries.

"These are the last days that remain for us to tidy up," said R. W. Sutton, chief of the interpretation division, as he examined the activity of the workers in repertoire.

Mr. Sutton said he hoped the museum would convey history as an ecological relationship between man and nature so the visitor would see how man's history is interwoven with natural history.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Sunday, July 12

Your birthday today: Your intuitive talents come into play this coming year. At times your path is quite clear and leads only to diligent effort, at other times rash impulses take over. In the first half of the year it is difficult to get any new projects going. Today's natives make their own rules as they go. They are industrious and often interested in eccult subjects.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is a time for simple good manners, deeds rather than talk. Differences of opinion can become serious — so abandon such discussions. Keep the evening for reflection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do your share in your community's expression of faith. There may be considerable excitement over a misunderstanding early in the day. Wait for the whole story.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will share in a general discussion concerning all sorts of questions. Sentiments may be expressed too strongly; make allowances while you listen in kind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mind your own affairs this Sunday, refusing to be drawn into schemes organized by people you don't know very well. The evening is better spent in serenity.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Transactions made today have little guarantee for success. Interest is almost certain to come into later disputes. Your tactful approach will be rewarded heavily.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This Sunday involves much doing and going. Friends feel that you are being overly sensitive, but the final results are hopeful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It may seem to you that some imbalance, some injustice has to be corrected. Right now is not quite the time to do it. You will find that planning to prepare for tomorrow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Any emotional excitement expressed today draw over-reactions. Care and courtesy are essential now. Start later and use slower methods wherever you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make no promises this Sunday — let cops win every minute as you get to it. Excuses are to be avoided. You have more friends than you realize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Close associations require caution and consideration. Your naturally thrifty tendencies are not always helpful. Be amenable to suggestions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Think about your own welfare now, instead of getting involved with other people's obligations. Letting well enough alone improves your temper and situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This Sunday brings results different from expectations; quite a lot of it rather favorable. The atmosphere surrounding church issues clears.

For July 13

Your birthday today: Quiet new beginnings characterize the coming year. Your enterprises all build steadily through trial-and-error. Everything depends on your inner spiritual growth and your store of energy. Long-range goals which are incompletely formulated are all right if you are in line with your own inner guidance. Today's natives are family stabilizers and usually are casually in disagreement with some authority.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Much co-operation is available if you will calm down and ask for it reasonably. Get your workweek off to a good beginning, with normal household details.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): An early start and steady pace produce surprisingly good results. Take an occasional break to check for any new error. There is something to celebrate this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Rearrange your schedule for repairs. Your own creative drive is your main resource today. Older people can be very helpful.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Family life today may be an encounter added costs. Concerns of older people are susceptible to novel solutions. Your creative projects come in for unplanned use.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Proceed evenly despite some tension over work and travel recommendations. Patience is essential now. The evening provides opportunity for learning new skills.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Now every friend has his own exacting ideas. Let no difference grow into squabbling. Give neglected billing, and demands high priority.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Caution is advised on large purchases and major financial arrangements. Much progress can be made in creative endeavors. Social activity increases.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): The temptation today is to take too much for granted. Don't be regular contact. A great deal is gained in pursuing routines dependably.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Observation brings needed information. Working conditions are subtle; adapt to bring dissent; take a concilatory. Anything you do is attractive, moderate course.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You can make much headway today despite much discussion and potential disagreement. Hold work and long-term. The evening may bring minor celebration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Several new career opportunities present themselves. Family arrangements are open to revision. Correspondence should be handled promptly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Intelligent counsel, better long-term planning are important today. The evening brings a different pace and you develop ment among your friends.

Investigators Start Re-assembling Jet Wing

TORONTO (CP) — Federal investigators Friday began re-assembling the right wing and parts of the fuselage undercarriage of the Air Canada DC-8 that crashed in a farmer's field Sunday, killing all 118 on board.

Officials of the department of transport's air accident investigation branch hope the reconstruction will yield a clue to the cause of Canada's second-worst air disaster.

Eyewitnesses to the last minutes of California Galaxy Flight 611 reported that the inner jet engine on the right side and the right wing broke off shortly before the four-engine plane crashed.

William Howse, supervisor of the field team, said wing fragments were recovered from widely-scattered locations. The outer right-hand engine was left behind at Toronto International Airport's Runway 23 when pilot Captain Peter Hamilton took his craft up again for a second attempt at landing.

The re-assembly is taking place on a grid inside a closely-guarded hangar at Toronto International Airport, Mr. Howse said.

Investigators also started to move all the wreckage of the 250,000-pound jet from the farm of Sytze Bergsma, four miles north of the airport, to an outdoor fenced location nearby.

Mr. Howse said the move is in consideration of the Bergsma family and for security against souvenir hunters. A 24-hour guard by provincial police had been imposed since the crash.

Dr. H. G. Cotnam, provincial coroners' consultant said 24 known human remains have been transferred to a temporary morgue set up in the Woodbridge Memorial Arena. An excavation of the crash site continues, he expects, more remains to be discovered.

He denied reports published in Montreal and elsewhere here that 103 of the 118 dead persons have been positively identified.

"That's nonsense. No one has been positively identified."

Dr. Cotnam said he hopes for legal identification of almost half of the victims from fingerprints, dental charts and x-rays. Another group will be identified from articles of clothing or belongings and a third group will never be identified.

He also denied reports that most of the passengers' luggage had been recovered.

Dr. Cotnam said the search for the cause of the crash has narrowed to human error, mechanical failure or a combination of both. The possibility of sabotage has been ruled out.

UN's World Youth Assembly Proves Lively Circus

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The World Youth Assembly got into full swing Friday and for many observers here the staid old UN will never be the same again.

During the day, a young Swedish chairman who made his own rules emerged as a hero.

A young Palestinian emerged as a victor out of a meeting that descended to chaos.

The Communists and other leftists failed in attempts to expel South Vietnam, South Korea, Spain and Greece. But the assembly voted to ask North Vietnam, the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front, North Korea and Communist China to reconsider decisions not to send delegations.

When chaos descended on the assembly's commission on world peace and security, a young barefoot Canadian wandered up to a reporter to say "it's incredible."

He said the meeting was a "zoo" and planned to do something in an attempt to prevent a continuation of the mess debate which saw Arabs and Communists pack the meeting to force election of a Palestinian as chairman.

Reporters called the meeting variously a "circus" or "chaotic."

"Long live the UN," laughed a member of the Canadian UN delegation as he wandered around noisy, smoke-filled Conference Room 1.

Other members of UN missions, from the Soviet and Arab countries, were too busy rushing around lobbying delegates to make comments.

The going was heavy. Through it all a young Swede named Lars Thalen, 22, fought to keep things under control.

He was like a "bulldozer," said Francois Poulcit of Quebec City, head of the assembly's planning committee.

Finally, said Gordon Cleveland of Toronto and Thalen's executive damage to the International Bakery Co. early today. There were no injuries.

Pasquale Oraizi, owner of the bakery, said he had received no threats but believed the bombing possibly could be connected with similar attacks against Italian bakeries in Metropolitan Toronto.

"But I don't know. I don't know anyone in Toronto," he added.

Trading Is Slowest of Year

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets posted their slowest five-day trading session of 1970 this week.

And, despite a sharp two-day rally, the general trend for the week was downward.

Averages daily volume of trading at the Toronto stock market was 1,180,000 shares. The daily average for the first half of 1970 was more than 1,500,000 shares.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index dropped 1.05 points to 151.81.

Trading during the first part of the week was extremely listless, and markets headed sharply downward. Heavy losses were posted in markets on Monday and Tuesday.

However, a show of strength on Wednesday and Thursday boosted prices, and markets closed near the largest advance since May 29.

Interest among investors, at least for the five trading weeks, picked up on Thursday. Analysts took this as a sign that many investors were finally losing their cautiousness.

There were few Canadian factors involved in the sharp two-day upturn.

Most observers attributed the rally to anticipation at easing of monetary restraints in the United States and to President Nixon's move to avert a national rail strike.

When markets turned downward late Friday after a session of alternate ups and downs, analysts blamed the weakness on profit-taking.

On index at Toronto, golds were down 4.88 to 153.37 and base metals .29 to 85.56. Western oils advanced 2.95 to 125.75.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

"Sit straight. Stand straight. Keep your shoulders back." Many a parent has used these admonitions in trying to keep a slouching youngster from getting round shoulders.

Effectiveness often depends upon the relationship between parent and child. For example, here is a reader - reply to a recent request from a mother of a 15 - year - old who was getting round shoulders:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In reference to the recent request from the mother concerned about her daughter, may I make another suggestion which comes from my own experience. I had three children with round shoulders. They looked terrible.

For reasons other than their poor posture, I found it necessary to have psychiatric treatment for myself. After I had been seeked the psychiatrist for about a year I mentioned that my children were all standing straight.

I could write a lot more about this but I'm sure you will understand why this happened. My children now have an understanding mother with whom they can communicate. — Mrs. L.

Comment: Often, as go the parents, so go the children. (Mentally, emotionally — and physically.)

Another Suggestion: I read a question in the paper from Mrs. O. about her 15 - year - old daughter's round shoulders. From my own experience I strongly advise her not to take it lightly and go to a competent orthopedist at once. The earlier the better. For her daughter's future it will be worth whatever it costs to "straighten her out." — Mrs. F.

Comment: Undeniably round shoulders respond better to treatment when the doctor sees the patient before permanent posture - damage has occurred.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been trying to become pregnant for quite a few years. I am 33 years old and have been married 11 years. All the doctors I've been to can find no cause for my inability to become pregnant. My fallopian tubes have been checked and they are fine. My ovaries and uterus are normally developed. Any information you can give will be helpful. — Mrs. F.

Comment: One important thing seems to be missing. Mention of whether or not your husband has been examined. It takes two to begin a good conception and pregnancy.

Had your husband submitted to examination? I say "submitted" because it seems many men refuse such investigation for fear that discovery of abnormal or absent sperm count, may, in some way, indicate that they are not "manly." (Which, of course, is not the case.) At this time, I consider your husband's condition the most important question that requires an answer.

Dear Dr Steincrohn: My doctor tells me that I am hypertensive and have an elevated BUN and creatinine. Will you explain? — Mrs. L.

Comment: One who is hypertensive has high blood pressure. BUN is abbreviation for blood area nitrogen. An elevated BUN and creatinine usually signify some kidney disorder.

Why not ask your doctor to explain more fully? Although he may be busy, I'm sure he'll take the time to let you know just what it is you two have to fight against, so that you will feel better.

Montreal Police Defuse Big Bomb

Troops Watch Orange Walks

BELFAST (CP)—About 100,000 marching Protestants today celebrated a 280-year-old victory over the Roman Catholics while nearly 17,000 policemen and British troops stood by to prevent expected outbreaks of sectarian violence in troubled Northern Ireland.

One skirmish broke out before the march began. Roman Catholic crowds in Rhodew Street in northwest Belfast set fire to an army barricade. Protestant crowds gathered and started pelting the Roman Catholics with rocks, and British troops were dispatched to the scene to deal with the outbreak.

The police and troops assembled in the biggest security operation in Northern Ireland's history were spread throughout Belfast and 18 other places where marchers were parading.

The Protestant parades celebrate the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 when King William of Orange crushed the forces of Roman Catholic King James II.

The sale of alcoholic beverages was banned through Northern Ireland, but more than 4,000 Scots came from Glasgow to march with the Orangemen and they brought copious supplies of beer and whiskey.

Along the border with the Roman Catholic-dominated Irish Republic to the south, Orangemen made arrangements with southern units to send in supplies of drinks.

But many of the banners carried in the Belfast parade were dedicated to temperance and some even pledged total abstinence.

Roman Catholics threw up a barricade in the Flax Street section of Belfast and in another area boisted the flag of southern Ireland. British troops ordered the barricade dismantled and the flag hauled down in the interest of keeping peace.

Last year, the parades touched off weeks of religious warfare, and tension has been rising since the imprisonment of Roman Catholic leader Bernadette Devlin two weeks ago.

Underworld Figure Dies in Car Blast

MONTREAL (CP) — The largest time bomb ever tackled by Montreal police was dismantled Sunday, several hours after an explosion ripped through a car and killed an underworld figure being sought by police.

The 150-pound bomb was found in the trunk of a small stolen foreign car parked in a laneway behind the head office of the Bank of Montreal in the heart of the city's financial district.

Police said that if the bomb had exploded at the set time of 4:15 a.m., it would have levelled the building and caused considerable damage to the surrounding area.

"It was a real bomb," one officer said. "The car was one big grenade." It was the second bomb device found in the district during the weekend.

The bomb was defused almost 11 hours after a man, described as a local underworld character, was killed when a bomb exploded under the seat of the late-model car he was driving.

Danny Pelensky, 31, sought by police in connection with last week's fatal shooting of underworld figure Giacomo Pocetti, 28, was killed when the explosion ripped through the car while he was driving along north-end Metropolitan Boulevard.

The force of the bomb decapitated Pelensky and sent the car out of control through a fence 150 feet away. Traffic was halted for more than an hour.

The victim was driving a car he had borrowed from a friend.

The fatal bombing was the third attempt on Pelensky's life in the last two years, police said.

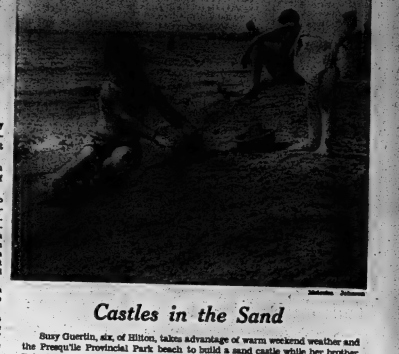
In April, 1968, Pelensky was found in the street of a Laurentian resort town with a severe bullet wound in his stomach.

Since 1954, Pelensky has been convicted on eight counts including breaking and entering, grievous assault and drug possession.

•Police also were called out Saturday to dismantle a bomb containing two sticks of dynamite in suburban Mount Royal.

The bomb was discovered behind the offices of Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Co. A woman employee going to work saw a suspicious looking package at about 8:30 a.m., and summoned police.

About 20 persons working in the building at the time were evacuated.



The two dismantled bombs were the second and third of the weekend following discovery of an eight-stick dynamite device Friday in a small laneway beside the former head office of the Royal Bank of Canada in the city's financial district.

That bomb was set to go off at 4 a.m.

Sgt. Robert Cote of the Montreal bomb squad was called in to deactivate the bomb found in the car Sunday. A timing device had been placed under the passenger seat.

Police said the car had been parked in La Ruelle Fortification, a tunnel-like lane behind

Train Kills Trio Asleep On Tracks

HOULTON, Me. (CP) — Three young men killed by a freight train Friday while sleeping on the tracks were identified Sunday as young Canadians from the Sydney, N.S., area.

Relatives of one of the victims from Cape Breton Island told police the dead were Terry William Burt, 26, of Sydney, and Kenneth Novak, 18, and David Bradley Burrows, 17, both of Sydney River.

The men were crushed at nearby Smyrna Mills by a 19-car freight train while lying in sleeping bags on the tracks.

Sheriff Darrell Crandall said there was no indication of foul play.

An autopsy reported listed the cause of death as severe head and body injuries.

U.S. Says Russia Ships Egypt Amphibious Vans

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — A United States report that the Soviet Union has sent amphibious troop carriers to Egypt increased concern here today about Soviet-Arab intentions in the Middle East.

One grim possibility being considered is that the Soviet Union has decided to back or to make possible an Egyptian attempt to cross the Suez canal in force and stabilish either a permanent bisk or a bridgehead on the east bank.

Joseph J. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, reported the further extension of Soviet military support for the United Arab Republic when he spoke about the Middle East crisis in a nationally televised interview Sunday.

Sisco, the White House and the U.S. defense department all declined to comment on a Newsweek magazine report that President Nixon has ordered a rush shipment of eight Phantom jets to Israel and future shipments at the rate of two a month.

Both the United States and Israel have rigidly refused to speak publicly about the U.S. proposal in Israel's request for 125 Phantoms and Skyhawks, but it is taken for granted here that the U.S. will at least replace planes lost in battle over the canal to Soviet missiles.

In the television interview, Sisco said U.S. intelligence has detected a large shipment of amphibious equipment arriving in Egypt in recent days and said this did not seem to be a defensive move.

Sources closest to Israeli thinking pointed to a June speech by President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt in Benghazi, Libya, in which he spoke of carrying the war of attrition against Israel across the canal once Egypt has established a complete air-defence system along the waterway.

They said the introduction of the advanced Soviet-made SAM-3 and the more sophisticated SAM-3 missiles close to the canal late last month could be influencing the Egyptians to consider an assault across the canal.

Israelis believe that Nasser's current trip to Moscow is partly for the purpose of seeking a greatly-increased flow of troop carriers.

The Soviet landing craft are believed to carry about 16 men each, and the sources said the Egyptians obviously would need many more for a canal crossing in strength that the one shipment reported so far.

An Egyptian strike across the canal and the Israeli response to it, it is felt, would constitute little short of all-out war and pose the almost certain likelihood of Israelis fighting Russians.

However, one less pessimistic school of thought in the state department is that the supply of missiles, air and amphibious equipment has mainly a diplomatic aim—of ensuring that the Arabs can deal from an equal position of strength in any peace negotiations. In contrast to their weakness six months ago when Israel enjoyed clear air superiority over the canal.

Officials holding this view say the Russians may be regretting that they are being pulled into such a major commitment to Nasser with the growing danger of a clash with the United States.

Israelis Cross Jordan

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli troops crossed the Jordan River early today and battled a Jordanian armed character of bunkers and trenches used as a forward base by Palestinian guerrillas, the Israeli military command announced.

A spokesman said at least four Jordanian soldiers were killed in the 2½-hour attack on the hilltop outpost just east of the river. Israeli losses were reported as one killed and eight wounded.

The spokesman said the post, nine miles south of the Sea of Galilee and less that a mile from the river, was an operational base for guerrilles attacking Israeli settlements in the Beisan Valley.

Queen and Family Move South Into Neat Manitoba Farmland

BRANDON (CP) — Queen Elizabeth and her family moved deeper into populated areas today after an adventure-filled weekend spent mostly among small groups in small communities.

As they moved south, from rock grandeur and scrub forest to the neat quilt-work of crop and summerfallow, the countryside seemed to be adroit trying to keep up with them.

Knots and throngs of people lined roadsides and packed country-fair stadium grandstands in places like Swan River and Brandon. This, to gether with brief royal visits by train, motorcade and helicopter, made crowd-estimating impossible.

The weekend had the spice of potential danger in the air, when an Indian leader blasted federal government Indian policy in the presence of the Queen and asked her to intercede.

Princess Anne stumbled and almost took a tumble when stepping down from a platform at The Pas.

Prince Charles' helicopter was found to be defective minutes after it had carried him and Anne, Andrew and Edward.

"We sincerely hope that you enjoy your visit here today in Duck Bay and remember us as like we will remember you, and tell your children about your visit here today in our centennial year.

"We are sure our Metis leaders of the past would be proud of us today."

Said, "we are mainly fishermen, trappers and hunters, but now we are caught up in the industrial society."

But there was also a beautiful courtesy in the closing lines:

"Our best wishes to your mother Queen Elizabeth the II and to your father Prince Philip and your brothers Charles, Edward and Andrew.

"We implore that you please your self before you please others, for yourself the results of a century of deprivation and ask that you advocate on our behalf to your loyal ministers the need for greater understanding on their part, the need to provide for greater participation of our people in the decision-making process of our society and the need for tolerance and understanding in our negotiations."

The Queen was caught Saturday at The Pas, 300 miles northwest of Winnipeg, in the crossfire of disagreement between the federal government and a variety of Indian spokesmen on the course of future Indian policy.

Sharing the platform with the Queen in a drizzling rain Dave Courchene, Manitoba Indian Brotherhood president, referred to the family links with treaty-signing days during the reign of Queen Victoria:

"We would ask that you see for yourself the results of a century of deprivation and ask that you advocate on our behalf to your loyal ministers the need for greater understanding on their part, the need to provide for greater participation of our people in the decision-making process of our society and the need for tolerance and understanding in our negotiations."

Eager Beavers

A mother beaver, setting up housekeeping with her five youngsters, chose the wrong place to move in — an underground culvert which drains the eastern portion of the runway at CFB Trenton. She had built three lodges inside the tunnel when roads and ground crew personnel, called in to investigate faulty drainage, evicted her, with her brood, to a pond near Cooper. Shooting off the temporary tenants and two of her offspring are Robert Berry, foreman Sandy Morrison and Gordon Pearson.

Beavers Are Evicted From Trenton Air Base

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON (Staff) — A conflict between nature and modern technology appears to have been successfully resolved at CFB Trenton.

The problem first arose in the spring of 1969 when CFB maintenance crews were forced to break up a beaver dam which backed water across the east end of the air base's runway.

A re-occurrence of drainage problems this spring sent the roads and grounds department into action.

Soon a search revealed a three - foot diameter underground culvert was plugged by beaver dams.

Foreman Sandy Morrison enlisted Robert Berry and Gordon Pearson, in rubber suits, hip waders and hard hats before sending them to clear out the 1,000 - foot long underground culvert.

The cleanup operation, which was to last 13 days, began Monday, June 22 with the pair working in cramped quarters through and filling a cart with the mud and debris then catching their breath while fellow workmen pulled the cart out of the culvert by rope.

Machines could not be used in the operation because the culverts runs inexplicably across the eastern end of the runway — the end often used for landing approaches.

While Mr. Berry and Mr. Pearson are working on their knees in three inches of water, they heard beavers, which "sounded like young puppies," further up the culvert.

Using their hands, a beaver face fork or a long-handled shovel, the men tore apart the three tightly-knit beaver lodges they found inside the culvert.

A breakthrough occurred on Thursday, June 25 after the men had proceeded 200 feet from the south end of the culvert.

While crowding ahead to see how debris blocked the culvert, Robert Berry was attacked by two young beavers.

Mr. Berry captured one of the young beavers and scared the second one away. He departed post haste with the hissing survival of two fully grown beavers.

Immediately, plans were made to capture the other beavers. That afternoon Robert and Gord crawled up the tunnel.

In front of themselves, they carried garbage can lids that they used to bang against the sides of the culvert and also to push the beavers to the north end where three Air-workers waited with garbage cans.

Robert Berry noted that the four young beavers would group around the mother and when she slapped her tail two would charge the men while the others retreated.

He said this process was repeated many times before the 60 lb. mother and her four young ones were finally ushered into the waiting garbage cans that covered the north end of the culvert.

That night, Stan Parks, a fellow employee, took the beavers back north by a pond near Cooper — restoring them to their natural environment and ending their threat to the air base.

During the next nine working days, the men saw fresh signs of other beavers while cleaning out the tunnel and collecting four stake truck loads of debris.

CFB Trenton officials are taking precautions to prevent another drainage threat to the runway. Steel grates are now being prepared for installation over both ends of the underground culvert to eliminate further damage by the eager beavers.

Jet Wing Assembled For Tests

TORONTO (CP) — Federal transport department scientists said today they have reassembled the right wing of the Air Canada jetliner DC-8 jetliner which crashed July 5 killing 108 persons.

"It looks as if we've got everything together," said Terry Hidge, one of the team of scientist-investigators. "There's nothing missing."

Scientists are running tests on the wing to try to recreate the sequence of events before the crash.

Witnesses to the crash said the jet's inner starboard engine and parts of the right wing fell off the plane before it plunged into a field north of Toronto International Airport.

They said the inner engine and wing fell off as the plane was making a second attempt to land. The outer starboard engine dropped to the runway as the plane made its first attempt to land.

Audit of Resources Is Approved by UCS

As a first step, to determine if all human needs are being met in Belleville, it was decided at a meeting held last Friday to go ahead with a audit of community resources suggested by the new UCS executive director, Ishay Cooperman.

Private agencies and institutions, governmental departments at the municipal, provincial and federal levels will be included in the survey.

The resource appraisal encompasses such facilities as day care nurseries, adult education, emergency services, housing, health services, leisure time facilities and services for immigrants.

Present at the meeting were Ishkay Cooperman, Mrs. Ruth Burrows, director, UCS volunteer bureau; Mrs. Margaret Maddocks of the UCS services to children committee; Hugh Pepper, second vice-president of UCS and a member of the faculty of Loyalist; superintendent of the Hastings County Board of Education; Frank Stokmans of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board; Lorne Williams, director of the Recreation-Arena Department; Dr. Evelyn Williamson a UCS board member and George Brooks, dean of Applied Arts and Business, Loyalist College.

Mr. Brooks responded favorably to Mr. Cooperman's suggestion that Loyalist College participate in the audit. He felt the social students of the Social Service program at Loyalist would be able to participate in the over-all study as a field exercise. That high school service clubs may also be interested in taking part in the project that will lead to a full assessment of Belleville's social resources and needs.

18-year-old Driver Enjoys Sulky Circuit

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — When Picton town Chris Storms officially earned his wheels this summer, he celebrated by taking his shaky girl for their first real drive. Driving, since then, has become a regular thing each Saturday night with this young man and a fast little filly named Viola McGregor.

The youngest driver on Belleville track this season, 18-year-old Chris has made five starts behind this 4-year-old pacer by Calumet McGregor out of Miss Doris Van. During one of these trips Chris piloted "Vi" to her first win and to his first winning drive.

Although Chris is among Ontario's youngest licensed drivers he is an old stable hand with seven years of experience in riding and driving.

His interest in harness racing developed as he vacationed with his uncle, James Huff, Kingston, and watched him work his standardbred, Direct Dillard in preparation for the track. Chris eventually decided to buy a piece of the action and jointly purchased a filly, Miss Happy Kim, with his father Edward Storms. "June" as she was nicknamed was harness broken as a yearling by this father and the same team then carefully trained. To keep the colt in condition in the winter months daily jogging was essential despite snowdrifts and sometimes subzero temperatures. Determined to continue June's training, Chris jogged her at the Picton fairgrounds track before going to school on winter mornings.

June's carefully maintained program seemed to be paying off as the sleek black filly started to compete on local tracks. By this time Chris had bought his father's share in the colt with money he earned working after school as a bee boy. Although too young to drive his horse in a race, Chris observed her on and looked forward to the day when he could swing up on the sulky and take the lines. He was disappointed and understandably saddened when June had to be destroyed following a racing accident at Orono.

Another horse could scarcely replace June but her half brother, The Cavan Blazer was purchased last summer by the Storms family to earn a place of his own in their stables. Trained by Ted Storms and driven by Douglas Searcy, "Blaze" won his race in Belleville Saturday night defeating six other starters. It was his third win of the summer.

Last fall Chris attended a standardbred section sale in Toronto where he placed the top bid on his mare, Viola McGregor. He trained her during the winter and worked her steadily this spring in preparation for the 1970 season in Belleville. Chris received his license after qualifying with "Vi" before a Belleville track judge. Since qualifying he has raced each Saturday night.

Describing his first win, Chris observed, "It was pretty good. It's nice to come first but you can't win all the time." Questioned about butterflies during a race the young driver replied, "It hasn't bothered me yet — maybe it will later. Other drivers say it bothers them to drive a race, a few even feel sick before they go out. If it stars to do that to me I won't keep on driving. There's no sport in that."

A grade 12 student at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Chris would one day like to He observes that he would gradually like to build up his own racing stable. Right now he is looking forward to a summer of making time with his girl, Viola McGregor.

Quebec Students Arrive Thursday

Fourteen Quinte district students are involved this year in the French-English Student Exchange, a program sponsored by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews.

Since July 2, area students have been visiting French partners in Quebec and will turn Thursday, together with their French hosts, who will remain in the district for two weeks.

While in Quebec, the students were entertained by community groups, including the Richilieu clubs, Chambers of Commerce, St. Jean Baptiste Society, Rotary Clubs, municipal councils and industrial firms.

Special events are arranged for the Ontario students while in Quebec, and the Quebec students when they visit their partners' homes in Ontario.

The students exchange involves students from 10 cities from Victoria to St. John's, Newfoundland. Over 160 Quebec cities and towns are involved in the exchange.

The Canadian Council of Cortelians and Jews has sponsored this annual exchange for 15 years to encourage bilingualism, understanding and respect. This year 3,000 students are taking part.

The visits are financed by the students and the federal government, corporations and business contribute to the costs.

ANAF Weekly News Notes

It was a happy occasion last Thursday, the day before my old, over 30, and well liked member was starting his journey back to his homeland for a brief holiday. Cde. "Scotty" Wilson, who fought through World War I with a famous Scottish regiment, was recalling a number some time. Dominion President J. C. Lundberg called for order and then presented Scotty with a bon voyage card and a handsome wallet with the wherewithal to get a bit of Teachers Highland Cream to drink the club's health while he was away. Scotty said, "Maybe the hangover will make me remember us." All joined in extending Cde. Wilcox a happy Journey to his beloved Scotland.

The members of the Combined Veterans Organizations Committee met to draft and make recommendations on the Woods Report are wearing happy smiles on their faces with satisfaction on what their hard work has accomplished over the past four years. The Parliamentary Committee on Veterans Affairs has accepted the majority of the recommendations that were submitted and these have been passed at the second reading. In fact, some of the recommendations have been improved for the benefit of the veteran. It is hoped that a full report on this will be published in the August issue of the Veterans Advocate. It should be of great interest to all veterans and their dependents, so be sure you don't miss it.

The Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada are embarking on a ten-year plan toward assisting in any way possible the youth movements of the country and their first venture starts shortly. With the consent of the Dutch and Canadian Governments, they are sending 22 teenagers representing every province and territory in Canada. Among them is an Eskimo lad, a student at Father Bellaw's College in Fort Churchill and another distinctive member is an Indian lass made from Fort Smith. She will be entering teachers college in Edmonton, where the Fall term starts.

They will leave Montreal for Holland on July 14 and, will be guests of the Netherlands. When they return, 22 Dutch teenagers will accompany them for a visit in Quebec and Ostario. During their stay they will visit Hamilton, where the Hamilton Unit has a program laid on and they will be in Belleville on August 5, 6 and 7. The Duke of Edinburgh Unit and the No. 1 Wing in Canada Among will be responsible for their billeting and sightseeing while they are here.

As far as possible they will be billeted in hopes that have teenagers of their own, but a coincidence there is a member of the Dutch contingent who happened to adopt a Canadian soldier's grave in Holland and is now the grave of a resident of Belleville's son.

It is a great idea and this effort is only the start of many more to follow. It is expected that the Canadian Dutch will be on hand to help welcome them here. Between them and the Unit, plus the friendliness of the people they should really have a very enjoyable three days.

The Duke of Edinburgh Unit, for its own special part in this help the youth movement, was honored to be requested to act as sponsors of the local Air Cadets. Having admired these lads for a good number of years and experiencing especially their invaluable assistance in selling poppies, also their control department when in their uniforms, the Unit was proud to accept the sponsorship.

For a number of years the club has granted them the use of the Tartan Lounge for their annual Christmas and New Year's Eve party festivities which they and their girl friends have thoroughly enjoyed and they have never been the least suspicious of trouble and they always cleaned up the hall before they left. In accepting on behalf of the Unit, the President expressed the hope for a long and pleasant association with these lads. The Unit, sponsoring committee will meet with the OC of the cadets and the two of officially take over at the first parade in the Armory.

The Dominion President announces that the next golf tournament will be held at the Stoco Golf Course on Sunday, July 26. To those wishing to go the fee will be $2 and refreshments will be supplied before returning home.

The Dominion President was a proud and happy man, as he escorted his charming daughter down the aisle to her place beside the groom. It was a lovely day for a beautiful bride and all members of the club wish them well as they start out on their new life. After the ceremony Cde. Jack Lundberg with his gracious lady, Bernice, received the guests with the newlyweds at a reception in the Lundberg's home.

During a ball the sing sign was heard and a voice said "Hark-fully. "That's all, there is then isn't any more, thank goodness." A remark that was heartily endorsed by fathers present who had had the same experience of getting daughters wedded.

Cde. H. Wright in the Peterborough Civic Hospital and W. Sheppard in the Geraldon Civic Hospital are all that are sick at present.

Bright Stickers For Handicapped

The Fire Prevention Bureau in Belleville has obtained some fluorescent stickers that are to be placed on windows or doors in Belleville homes containing an invalid or handicapped person.

Belleville Fire Chief Leo Culhane said this morning that the stickers will be printed by tomorrow and will be available from him or the Fire Prevention Bureau.

"The idea is to let people know that someone is in the home in that condition," Chief Culhane said.

"They should be placed in a conspicuous place so that the fire department will know that a handicapped person is in the building. It should help anyone who discovers a fire. A rescue could be made as a result of the stickers."

"It could be serious if no one knew a crippled person was in the building at the time of a fire."

The stickers are two and a half inches square and are fluorescent so that they can easily be spotted at night. Red in color, "Fire Department Rescue" is printed on top with the fire department's phone number beneath.

"It is notification that someone is there who is handicapped," Chief Culhane said.

Sprinkler System Triggers Alarm

A malfunction in the sprinkler system at Belleville Arena sent five fire trucks to the rink square shortly after 10 p.m. Sunday.

Police assisted off the area to traffic and Lakeshore Natural Gas maintenance men were summoned in close gas mains.

But after firemen broke a pane of glass in the door to gain entry, it was discovered that a drop in pressure in the air in the sprinkler system Kelcheson.

Charles and Anne

Without a doubt it is a smash-hit of a Royal tour. It is the most informal one yet, too, up there in the Arctic, and if Royalty's popularity has been slipping somewhat in recent years it looks as if Prince Charles and Princess Anne are restoring it with dispatch.

Not that their parents are any the less attractive or effective in this most difficult of all roles. Indeed the Queen at 44 is said to be looking younger and slimmer than ever, and Prince Philip is debonair and dashing as ever. Nevertheless we can credit the two young people with much of the success of the tour. There was Prince Charles crowning an excited 18-year-old as Canada's Indian Princess for 1970 and it was all the more appropriate for the fact that the young woman's lineage, as one of the native people of this continent, is older by far than even that of the Royal Family. And there was the girl at the Yellowknife barbecue, rock music and all, who exclaimed: "Gee, he's not stuck up at all."

And consider Princess Anne, hair swept up and wearing a mini coat and matching hat standing on a Yellowknife platform and being ogled unashamedly by a long-haired youth; and the same Royal lady, her hair down and flanked by two girls of about her own age, urging the contents of that most bourgeois of all flavorings, ketchup, onto a malchingly bourgeois hamburger.

The truth of course, is that the princes and her brother, the heir to the throne, were likely having as interesting and entertaining a time as they have ever known, while at the same time displaying the compassion, intuition and rapport with others which are among the distinguishing marks of the Royal family.

It is as veteran newsman Charles Lynch, who is with the Royal party, said, Charles and Anne have added "a fresh new dimension to the monarchy business."

Contrasting Fortunes

Ignoring some of the more lurid contents of the U.S. newspaper, The National Inquirer — like its sibling of the extravagant views of ripple leader Jerry Rubin — a recent issue contained some interesting articles. Two concern the contrasting fortunes of showbusiness.

For instance, there was the place about 18-year-old Ray Ward, who has been making $130 a week as star of the London stage version of Oliver, but has now given up the uncertainty of showbiz for a full time job as a junior postman. Listening to actors and actresses wondering where their next job was coming from had worried the young man, an actor since he was 11 and veteran of radio, television and movies like Goodbye, Mr. Chips and Treasure Island.

Young Ward may have a lesson for our unemployed in Canada. He says he is hard up now but happier, the job is steady — "and who knows," he is quoted as saying, "one day I may even end up as Postmaster General."

Less fortunate, as another article in the newspaper points out, is 36-year-old Johnny Moore, who back in 1960 was the Beatles' first drummer. Unhappy with the grind of one-night stands and with the Beatles' music which "didn't seem right to me," Moore quit the group to form his own combo. It failed and he took a job in a Liverpool bottle factory; recently it sank down and Moore, talking about a comeback (he still has the drumsticks from the Beatles' days) is trying to support his wife and two small girls on $26.40 a week welfare.

Thus, a glimpse of the contrasting fortunes of showbusiness, and perhaps a lesson or two to be learned.

Midis Anyone

"The trouble with the American male is that he is hung up on being a male. The primitives had it by the grandard." So says Los Angeles designer Rebecca Weber who has produced a midi skirt for men which she says will catch on at resorts, golf courses and around swimming pools.

Well now, from a sampling of interviews in the city of smog it would appear the men will be in no rush to sally forth in such a garb. Like the man who said, "it is the most stupid thing I ever heard of." Dangerous for driving too, we suspect.

It may be all right for the "primitives", as designer Weber calls them. Just back from Fiji, she says policemen there, big muscular men, wear wrap-around skirts and of course she is right for we have seen those very same muscular fellows in our travels ourselves. However, we imagine North American men would prefer to remain their old hung-up selves.

Meanwhile, here is another titbit on the mini-midi confrontation. An Associated Press report from Mount Vernon, N.Y., says a girl was refused her diploma from Nichols junior high school because she wore a midi-length dress to the graduation. All the other girls were wearing mid-thigh minis.

Midis anyone?

Cabinet Approves More Regional Tours by Ministers

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his 28 ministers will be travelling more, especially to out-of-the-way places.

Mr. Trudeau has made tentative plans to visit northern British Columbia in early August. He hopes to tour some region of Quebec and some part of the Maritime this fall.

The cabinet has approved a request of the Liberal Federation for each minister to make a two-day tour outside the major population centres over and above his normal round of speaking engagements.

That's great but it's a lot of talking. In the first three months of this year, cabinet ministers undertook a total of 331 speaking engagements in every province, the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

After its troubles surrounding releases of the Le Dain report on drug abuse, the cabinet hopes make all such reports public the minute it gets its hands on them.

The Le Dain report leaked before the government could make it public. As a result, a Commons committee is going to study it, the fall what to do about such problems.

In the past, the government has usually been expected to have a statement ready on its views on the recommendations of special inquiries at the same time as it makes public the report of those inquiries.

However, Justice Minister John Turner made public in less than the report of the judicial inquiry into the unlawful deportation from Canada of three U.S. Army deserters.

He said he was doing so without comment. Ministers were still studying the report, he said.

The cabinet may choose to follow this course in the future and thus avoid the risk of premature leaks. But there is nothing in the law which requires a government to make public such a report within a specified time of its receipt — or ever.

The special non-parliamentary committee looking into a possible $14,000-a-year MP's pay is not expected to get its report to the government until late fall before Parliament re-assembles Oct. 5 after its 27-day holiday.

The original target date had been late June or early July but the committee, headed by T. N. Beaupre of Montreal, president of Dominion Ltd., soon ran rush now that Parliament is adjourned for the summer.

It is understood that the committee is taking into account as one factor in its deliberations the government's anti-inflation policy of holding increases no larger than six per cent.

In any cabinet musical-chair, look for one member to stay where he is: Jean Marchand, regional economic expansion minister.

Mr. Marchand got a promise he'll remain when Prime Edward Islanders approved the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council plan in their provincial election.

The Modern Obsession with Youth

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Elton J. Wilson's letter was interesting, and her question, "How much do you respect a mind that blindly accepts?" is worthy of an answer.

I must refute her allegation of a display of pedantry. I stated facts and made fair comment on events as they stood at the time. Nor do I comprehend states she was moved to "applaud" the activities" of the young people concerned."

The only known "young" participant as far as I recall, was Mr. Kehoe, a native of Toronto, who was the promoter of the festival. His age, I believe, is 32. His primary motive I think is fair to suspect, was to make a profit. The motives of the mystical "young people" the lady refers to, were certainly never made known.

I agree wholeheartedly that every encouragement should be given any endeavor likely to enhance the finer attributes of man. On CJBQ's Open Line radio program, Mr. Kehoe was evasive when taxed on the suggested "immense benefits" to be derived from the festival. He became agitated when Wes Indian steel bands were mentioned along with Sir George Williams University. It is easy to understand why.

In answer to your correspondent's question, "If a w much do you respect a mind that blindly accepts?" The mind that I am afraid of is not the questioning mind, but the one that replaces debate with destruction, sense with savagery, reason with rancor, and maturity with maudlin.

We seldom hear from the silent majority of our youth — they have no banner behind themselves to take over the reins of authority as the members of the Government have done. All the attention is lavished upon that noisy minority whose pitiful antics are considered newsworthy by large sections of the Press.

Today's obsessional pre - occupation with the dissenters of Canadian youth, has assumed unhealthy proportions. The introduction of the word "teenager" gave society a new individual who has been pandered to, exploited and commercialized to such an extent, it is, perhaps, understandable why they could accept the same ridiculous adulation on less adulthood.

I am sorry, I cannot qualify as an "intellectual", as to-date I have not advocated the overthrow of the Government, threatened the life of the Prime Minister, or thrown scones at American Embassies.

W. C. HOCKLEY.

Students Free From Leftist Influence Too

In Israel Everyone Is A Soldier Say Arabs

Cy Fox, of the London staff of The Canadian Press, visited Egypt and Jordan as well as Israel during a tour of the Middle East crisis area. This is another in a series of articles on his findings.

By CY FOX

TEL AVIV (CP) — The surface of life in Tel Aviv is still pretty well relaxed, but the nagging spectre of war keeps crowding in.

Newspapers—Hebrew, English and French—regularly run photographs of Israelis killed on any of the three battle fronts or dead from acts of sabotage by Arab guerrillas within Israel's own frontiers.

In the seven-passenger taxis plying between Tel Aviv an Jerusalem, the top of the hour is bound to bring demands from otherwise passive travellers that the car radio should be switched on for the latest war news.

On Jerusalem's city buses a radio is constantly in operation, which means a steady diet of pop music but also an hourly word of battle events and, sometimes, the recital of names of young Israelis killed in the conflict.

Lately the toll of lives has been uncomfortably high for a population numbering barely 2,500,000, although this is offset cheered by the latest manifestations of chronic Arab disunity and their own military prowess, especially in the air over Egypt.

Attacks by Egyptian soldiers across the Suez canal, reflecting the efforts of Soviet aid to the United Arab Republic, emphasize that Egypt has come a long way militarily since the blitzkrieg-style victory scored by Israel in the six-day war three years ago.

The Soviet-supported buildup of President Nasser's forces is enough to give the Israeli man in the street extra cause for worry.

To a number of dissenters from official policy, this only means an entirely new situation in which their country will never be allowed again to enjoy an easy military superiority over the Arabs.

On others, the signs of Arab revival have a different effect.

"We are apprehensive, yes, but not intimidated," said one government official.

Support in Israel for the blind of peace overtures represented by veteran Zionist Nahum Goldmann comes from "not even a minority" of the population, the official added.

Yet solemn concern about the war situation is widely spread even if defeatism is not.

Tel Aviv pedestrians are likely to stop in their tracks in restaurant lunch hours and visible from the sidewalk flash pictures of the day's war dead or actually scenes from the fronts.

Middle-aged girls—and Israel's young female generation ranks with the world's most beautiful—bring to their soldier boy-friends with a new, war-induced possessiveness.

The Israelis retain two great advantages in their military struggle for survival—a potent air force used in the manner of free-wheeling artillery and, on the other side, the divisiveness which for centuries has kept the Arabs from rallying effectively behind a common enemy.

There also is Israel's ability to thrive under adversity, an asset magnified by the fact that, as the Arabs bitterly put it, every Israeli is a soldier.

All this means that probably the most impressive area of the country under the present circumstances of virtually constant military menace is not bustling, normal-seeming Tel Aviv but the Jordan River communities which daily face attack from guerrillas and other Arab forces.

The Arabs keep across "infiltration" or collective settlements the Kfar Ruppin in a steady state of alert.

There are periodic bombbarrages by Jordanian artillery based in hilltop areas of the river and overlooking miles of surrounding countryside.

There are raids by the guerrillas—or "terrorists," as the Israelis label them—which are called—who employ Communist-made rockets and bazookas.

Kfar Ruppin, despite its round-the-clock tension, is Gideon's weak bank, defiantly carries on its busy agricultural life at all times, except when the risk of death becomes too great.

A Canadian reporter, in a government car which skirted military checks and regularly responded to a guard's admonishment to "drive fast or you might get shot by the Arabs," finally reached Kfar Ruppin, only to find it an apparent ghost town.

"Czech," a stocky veteran of the one-time Israeli underground army known as Haganna, was one of the few Kfar Ruppin residents not in the community's shelters.

Long involved with defence of the kibbutz, Czech took the visitor on a tour of its settlement's river-line barricades—notably a double electrified fence designed to warn against guerrilla attempts to infiltrate towards the community.

The main reaction in official quarters to the stepped-up role of Russia in Egypt is extra Israeli pressure for more American weapons, which Tel Aviv spokesmen proudly insist will be paid for and not sought as Washington handouts.

The Russians, meanwhile, are assailed as new-style imperialists who seek to make Nasser a satellite and thus to turn the Middle East crisis bubbling.

Without the constant danger of all-out war in the area, Moscow would have no excuse for maintaining its presence in countries like Egypt and Syria, said an Israeli spokesman on foreign affairs.

He termed Israel a "bastion of the free world" and spoke of a need for solidarity among "smaller" states such as this country and Canada.

To him, Premier Goldmeier, whose plans for a peace visit to Cairo drew a negative response from Prime Minister Golda Meir earlier this year, appeared to have had no solid basis for expecting to see President Nasser.

Goldmeier, 75-year-old former president of the World Zionist Organization, also is accused of naivety and even a self-seeking attitude in matters of Middle East politics.

One government response to the peace demonstrations occasioned by the Goldmeier affair was to label them the work of small Communist groups.

This kind of statement prompted a Jerusalem professor to protest that "no trend of Israeli opinion can pretend to a monopoly of any of wisdom, responsibility and patriotism while denouncing others as those who are not worthy of our leaders—as saboteurs and traitors."

Recent killings of children and other civilians through guerrilla action in Israel are fed the fires of "hewish" anger in this country, while the spirits of Israelis there are likely to be raised considerably by the internal dissensions that have ripped through Arab ranks in Jordan and elsewhere.

But some Israelis maintain that their country must undertake a truly supreme—accomplishing other than what they call reliance on military superiority—to the Middle East crisis.

The "hawkish" season could not interest Israel's most commentator Simha Flapan in the Tel Aviv monthly magazine New Outlook.

"In the military sphere, the Soviets stepped in with more than arms, experts and technicians (for Nasser), they demonstrated that the whole escalation may lead to a confrontation with the Soviets."

The Israeli strategy of ensuring the Arabs into a peace settlement through force of arms had in fact encouraged extremists in the Arab countries, while Israel's Western friends had become reluctant to be identified with inducing this country's intransigence and military de-escalation."

The result, said Flapan writes, has been the start of "a process of sobering up . . . among the Israeli public."

He denies that Communists or a tiny minority of Israelis are alone responsible for the talk of foreign-policy change.

A "great debate" still is in progress among Israeli intellectuals but primarily in the left-wing Mapam party, a fact which makes it little reported outside this country, Flapan declares.

Those involved consider that the new result has been a degree of softening in the Golda Meir line, which caused some anxiety in Israel's Canadian government.

Nevertheless Israeli officials insist that the government remains united except for some disagreement over tactics.

And they also speak proudly of their country's students as free from the influence of the "New Left" movement so conspicuous among the younger generation in Western Europe and North America.

Israeli students are generally non-rebellious. And so did Donald Carr-Smith, a leader of the student revolt in France two years ago.

Carr-Smith says he is not a Zionist although born of a Jewish mother, and when he spoke to young Israelis this spring.

Anti-leftists attribute the outlook of young Israelis to the effects of military service —which lasts for a maximum of 30 months in the case of men under 23, and 24 months for women in the same age bracket.

Next: Arab protest movement grows.

Scholarly Argument Over Persian Poet

LONDON (Reuters) — The moving finger having writ did not move on in the case of Robert Graves's translation of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

Instead, it stayed to point up a bitter two-year quarrel between Graves, a distinguished British poet, and Britain's Persian scholars.

The argument revolved round the authenticity of a 13th century manuscript which, Graves said, threw an entirely new light on how the famous poems of Omar Khayyam should be rendered into English.

The manuscript was brought to Graves's attention by Omar Ali-Shah, a scholar of Afghan extraction who said the document had been in his family since the 12th century.

Graves and Ali-Shah collaborated in producing a new translation of the Omar Khayyam works. This differed substantially from the generally accepted version produced by Edward Fitzgerald in 1859.

For instance, the way Fitzgerald turned it into English produced the celebrated line: "A book of verses underneath the bough, a jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou beside me singing in the wilderness—ah, wilderness was paradise enow."

In Graves's version it came out like this: "Should our day's portion be one mascot loaf, a haunch of mutton and a gourd of wine set for us two alone on the wide plain, no sultan's bounty could evoke such joy."

Graves and Ali-Shah claimed Fitzgerald had perverted the 12th century Persian poet's thoughts. They said he had turned the work of a religious mystic into a Victorian hedonist who praised wine instead of glorifying God.

The argument was quickly joined by scholars in the columns of newspapers and magazines. Many of them challenged the authenticity of the Ali-Shah family manuscript whose existence had not been suspected previously.

Ali-Shah said that a symposium would be held in three when the manuscript would be produced. The publishers have said the case against the book has not been proved.

As for the moving finger which Fitzgerald said "writes, and having writ moves on," well it all the way to heaven. You don't have to load up on pills—you can load up on Bible books of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The best way to turn off drugs is to turn on with Jesus and stay loaded 24 hours a day."

Four of his converts, Jim McPherson, 23, Sandra Rush, once on drugs; P. J. Peterson, 29, Phoenix, Ariz., a onetime alcoholic night club entertainer; Jesus Wier, 26, a former black militant, and Ramsey Gilchrist, 21 Baton Rouge, La., once a dropout agitator, were with Blessitt on his pilgrimage.

In pairs, they take turns in two-hour shifts at carrying the 18-foot cross, each shouldering an end of the four-foot cross-beam. The base of the upright rolls on two wheels, attached to keep the wood from being worn away by dragging.

They cover about three miles an hour, spending nights in two campers pulled from stop to stop by cars driven by the pilgrim's wife, Sherry, and one of the men.

Morons Have Specialties

He plays two or three games a day and hasn't lost in nine years. He has an IQ of 60.

Pretty good at dates and calculation? So is Paul, who has an IQ of 28.

He'll tell you instantly on what day of the week your birthday fell as far back as a decade ago—and on what day it will fall as far forward as 1979.

Play a musical instrument?

Clement, who has an IQ of 30, has to listen but once to any song and he can play it on his guitar. He can fix small radios, too.

These three middle-aged men, patients in Ward 18 of Pacific State Hospital, belong to an elite class of psychological contradictions known as "idiot savants"—mentally retarded geniuses.

Incapable of living in the outside world, they have some phenomenal talent or aptitude comparable to some of the brightest members of society, usually in such fields as mathematics, drawing, music, calendar calculating and memorization.

Doctors chalk the ability up to a computer-like capacity for memorization and repetition, but they don't know how the ability develops.

Checker whiz Willy, 53, blind in one eye and hard of hearing, maps his suspenders and giggles when challenged at checkers.

"Ahhh, wanna get beat, bish?" he says in a cocky tone. "I beat you. I beat you real good in less than 25 moves."

He quickly arranges the checkers, takes the reds, and moves first. He doesn't stop talking, moving clumsily like a robot, but without hesitation. He doesn't seem to concentrate. In fact, he doesn't seem to be paying attention.

He asks for 28 cents when he wins and treats himself to chocolate doughnuts at the hospital snack bar.

Clement is a tall, quiet, overgrowing man of 47. A hospital aide, Lola Garcia, discovered his talent when she passed his room last September and heard him plucking "Winchester Cathedral" on a toy guitar. He now has a full-size guitar donated by a local family.

But, Mrs. Garcia added, Clement does have a vice. He steals transistor radios from fellow patients and tinkers with them.

"Unfortunately, if a radio does work, he'll break it just so he can fool around with it. He loves to tinker."

Paul, the calendar calculator, is 35, heavy-set and addicted to afternoon soap operas on television.

As he shuffled toward the TV room of the ward, Mrs. Garcia called to him from her office.

"Paul," she asked, this man's birthday is October 24. What day will that fall on in 1979?"

"Huh, Friday."

"What day did my birthday fall on in 1962?"

"Wednesday."

But when Mrs. Garcia asked, "Paul, how much is two and two," he was silent.

Like Willy and Clement, he is unable to do the most rudimentary arithmetic.

Study Nerves

EDMONTON (CP) — A mechanical engineer and a biologist have broken the academic discipline barriers to study and do research together.

Dr. G. H. S. Lock, University of Alberta mechanical engineering professor, and physiology professor Dr. Richard Smith are studying the flow of fluids within nerve fibres and the behavior of severed nerves.

The search may contribute important knowledge to the study of regrowth of severed limbs.

The researchers say there are many areas in which the engineering sciences and the life sciences can and should work together.

"The idea of applying mathematical and engineering methods to biology intrigues me," says Dr. Lock.

Their research is aimed at a better understanding of how the fluid in the nerve fibre flows—a factor which could be significant in the regeneration of limbs.

Research has already shown that a nerve from the back leg of a frog can be threaded into the stump of a severed front leg and the front leg will grow again.

More-limited success was obtained with experiments on opossums, and it has not been tried with animals higher up the

A nerve fibre, which is about one-tenth the thickness of a fine hair, is an elastic tube which is slightly distended through internal pressure, Dr. Smith and Dr. Lock believe.

They want to try to understand the way in which the fluid material flows out the ends of the fibre when it is cut.

Cross-Carrier Draws Stares

NEW YORK (AP) — Some onlookers' lifestyle stare, mildly amused or puzzled. Others make wisecracks. "More books!" Still others treat along briefly, approving, asking questions. And from city to city, policemen sigh and wave the strange procession along.

"We're Jesus people," says Rev. Arthur Blessitt, crosscountry bearer of a heavy, wooden cross, big enough to crucify a man on.

Twice, he has had his walking hands rescued after sweating holes in them on his 2,500-mile trek from Los Angeles to Washington, toting the 185-pound Christian symbol, made of oil-treated, old four-by-fours.

"We found them in a junkyard," he says.

Blessitt, 29, sunburned, sandy-haired and clad in T-shirt and faded denims, came through New York city recently, and headed south, tugging along his curious cargo to "call this nation back to God and real brotherhood."

"As we've walked along the highways across his country, from city to city, at every stop we've seen hate and violence and bitterness," he says. "But we've also seen a tremendous spiritual birth taking place.

"It's beginning. It's happening now. Even especially among young people, a real spiritual awakening. We've got to change. We're either going to have a bath of blood or a bath of love within the next year."

Blessitt, a Mississippi-reared Southern Baptist known as the "Preacher of Sunset Strip" in Hollywood, runs a "gospel night club" there called His Place, administered by drug addicts, street gangs, hippies, prostitutes, motorcycle riders, runaways and topless dancers.

It serves coffee, soft drinks and "neat" talk.

"You don't have to drop out to get high," he says. "All you have to do is pray, and you'll get all the way to heaven. You don't have to load up on pills—you can load up on Bible books of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The best way to turn off drugs is to turn on Jesus."

It had been there for some time before it aroused the curiosity of a Bank of Montreal security guard who peered into the car and saw what he thought were bricks, wires which are used by car thieves to bypass the ignition switch. The guard called police.

Sgt. Cote worked feverishly for nearly an hour, attempting to remove the device with 15-foot poles. At that time he was unaware the car's trunk was loaded with explosives.

Mid knowing what time it was rigged to explode, Sgt. Cote repeated suggestions to have the car towed away to another site.

He gave the all-clear about 12:30 a.m. Sunday and a subsequent search uncovered the unprecedented load of dynamite.

Ann Landers

Reader Accuses Media Of Gross Cruelty

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How cruel can the news media get! A few days ago I heard on the radio that a woman who lives in London — only they mentioned her by name — failed the bar exam for the 20th time. The poor thing had been trying for 11 years to pass and now she is giving up. She invested over $700 on driving lessons, tutors and, last fees which was required in England before one can take the examinations.

Can you imagine that woman's shame — after having failed so many times? And then to have it published all over the world must have destroyed her. To my way of thinking it is the most heartless thing I ever heard of. Why would they do it? — SORRY FOR HER.

DEAR SORRY: Everyone likes to read of the unusual — and this story certainly qualifies. It also makes the people who have failed their driving tests three and four times feel better, I agree, however, it would have been just as well had they not mentioned her name.

* * * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I feel compelled to write in reference to "Hung Up" — the woman who didn't know whether or not to marry a man who hated her young daughter by a previous marriage. The poor kid happened to bear a striking resemblance to his ex-wife whom he despised.

Her was nine at the time. She was an image of her father, her was nine at the time. She was an image of her father, whom my husband loathed. I, too, thought love would conquer all. Here is the way it turned out.

My husband picks on her unmercifully. She hates him. The girl has turned from a smiling, pleasant person into a sullen, unhappy liar. I am constantly in the middle. Her stepfather never refers to her by name. It's always "your daughter."

The guilt I feel for bringing up this child in such a hostile environment is driving me crazy. If "Hung Up's" daughter is hating her name now, refusing to come out even for meals, I shudder to think of the future.

Unless the mother is willing to ditch the girl in a boarding school and then ship her off to Europe during summer vacations, she is in for a hell on earth. If she doesn't it will be hell for the girl. Either way the marriage is doomed. If the mother were wise she'd have already made the trek to the altar! I hope she changes her mind. — TOO LATE FOR ME, I MARRIED HIM.

DEAR TOO LATE: I received a surprising number of letters which read a great deal like yours. Most of the writers were women, but a few men had a similar story to tell about second wives who mistreated their children. How sad for all of them.

* * * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell folks that when they see a person with a black eye not to ask, "What happened?" Anybody with half a brain can see that somebody probably hung on a haymaker.

And while you're at it, tell people that the jokes about shiners are not funny to the person who has one. I have had two in four weeks and I am sick of nosey questions and stale wisecracks. Thank you. — DUCKED TOO LATE.

DEAR DUCKEY: Two in four weeks? A person who has that much trouble with his eyes must also have a problem with his mouth. If ten isn't enough, count to forty.

Successful Living

Son Finds Conversing Difficult

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have a son who finds making conversation a real trial. He is so very quiet and doesn't seem able to think of anything to say, when in a gathering or meeting someone, consequently is very embarrassed.

Would having had gland trouble all of his life add to this problem? I think something to help his confidence, as he didn't feel people are staring, would help — but I am lost by myself. He does have quite relations and I don't feel this way myself, so sure would like some advice. — Lost.

Dear Lost: Any kind of physical handicap or illness has an emotional effect. His special difficulty may have meant missing out on the fun, or actual physical inertia. Perhaps he couldn't join in sports or demanding studies.

When the challenge is too great, a struggling personality may just give up, or go on the defensive.

He needs to get involved. Does he have a hobby to express his creative abilities? Consider getting him into a group where he can work with his hands. Or into a public speaking class.

Best of all, encourage him to practise being a host in his own home. There he would stop worrying about who is staring at him and start thinking about them.

* * *

Dear Doris: About my great-granddaughter and Adam and Eve. Her mother and I tried to help her recall things about her recitation, although it was the actions, more even than the verbal part, which entertained us. However, we gave up as the child got really embarrassed and almost wept.

I told her mother to call your letter out of the paper and put it away in some book for her daughter may need it some years hence.

Myself, I always think at the back of one's mind things are remembered; and when she reads the letter the child would know that it really happened.

Her brother has taken up "Albert and the Lion", so we may still enjoy that. — Proud Granny.

Dear Granny: You will just have to skip it for now, of course. We can't have your little girl distressed.

Later on if she leaves it alone she may indeed be able to reproduce it. Our psychologists say that nothing is ever entirely lost. How nice that you have little brother coming along with his own renditions!

* * *

Dear Doris: When the bride and groom cut the wedding cake, does the groom offer the bride a piece of cake first? The groom is our son. We would like to put an announcement in our local paper. Would it be proper to ask the bride's mother for a copy of the announcement she may have placed in their local paper, or would we say, "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith (us) are pleased to announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their oldest son Manuel James to Mary Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evelyn Blake."?

I have seen this done but did not know whether it was proper or not. — Our First.

Dear First: When the cake is cut bride and groom usually share the first slice.

Your wording is wrong. It is the bride's parents who make the announcement, even in the groom's home town. Use an exact copy of the one they used.

Summer Potato Salads

By MARY MOORE

When I served my test mashed potato salad to my sister she said "Potato salads always need to be made with mashed potatoes."

You may remember that nearly three weeks ago I promised Mrs. Pearl W. I would try to reproduce a reasonable facsimile of the delicatessen potato salad she liked. She said it was like mashed potatoes but might have been put through the meat grinder. That is how I tried it and that is another one entitled below.

OLD FASHIONED POTATO SALAD No. 1 (serves 4 generously)

NOTE: This method eliminates the time consuming dicing step.

6 medium potatoes (5 cups not packed after cooking, peeling and grinding — see below)
¼ cup chopped, half-pared cucumber.
¼ cup shredded raw carrot (I grew mine finely chopped
½ cup finely chopped celery
¼ tsp. salt
about ¾ cup salad dressing OR mayonnaise

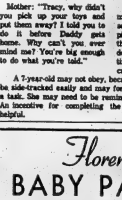
Cook potatoes in skins until nearly tender. Drain, chill, pare and put through coarse knife of grinder. Add all remaining ingredients and chill thoroughly.

PERFECT POTATO SALAD No. 2 (serves 6)

6 medium-large new potatoes pared and halved
2 tbs. vinegar
½ cup finely chopped chives (OR ¼ cup finely chopped green onion)
3 hard-cooked eggs chopped
½ cup chopped pared cucumber
3/4 cup finely chopped celery
½ to 1 cup genuine mayonnaise
¼ tsp. salt

Scrub and pare potatoes and cut in halves. Cover with boiling water, add vinegar (to prevent darkening) and boil covered till nearly tender. DO NOT OVERCOOK. Drain and cool. Cut into one-inch cubes. Turn into a large bowl and add chives (or green onion), chopped hard-cooked eggs, cucumber, celery, mayonnaise and salt and gently mix. Chill covered until serving time.

NOTES: 1) If necessary thin salad may be made 24 hours in advance and chilled, covered. 2) Variations: you may add ¼ cup cooked new green peas or-and ¼ cup finely chopped parsley.



MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Pork and Beans with Bacon; Catsup; Fresh Brown Bread; Old Fashioned Cole Slaw; Shredded Fresh Pineapple; Lady Fingers; Coffee.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Tracy, why didn't you pick up your toys and put them away? I told you to do it before Daddy gets home. Why can't you ever mind me? You're big enough to do what you're told."

Mother: "Tracy, look at me while I remind you about something. Will you go in and pick up your toys and put them into the toy box? If you do it right now, you'll have time to help me frost the cake for dinner."

A 7-year-old may not obey, because at this age, she tends to be side-tracked easily and may forget you even told her about a task. She may need to be reminded when it's time to start. An incentive for completing the task without delay also is helpful.

A Quarter of A Century After

Big Six of First Atomic Explosion Survey Past and Future

The nuclear age dawned July 16, 1945, with the first test of the atomic bomb on an isolated site in New Mexico. What did it mean to the men who built and detonated it? And, 25 years later, what did that fabulous blast mean for the world?

By BILL STOCKTON

BINGHAM, N.M. (AP) — Postmaster Harold Dean stood beside the gas pump outside Bingham's solitary building, the combination post office and store, and gazed down the lonely ribbon of asphalt stretching across the bleak New Mexico desert.

"Has it really been 25 years?" he mused, rubbing a weathered hand across his sunlined face.

Germany had surrendered to the Allies two months earlier and Truman was in Potsdam for a meeting with Churchill and Stalin.

In the Pacific, troop movements had begun for the invasion of Japan four months away. Military experts predicted 500,000 Americans might die.

Zero hour came in a blinding flash of light at 5:29:45 a.m. Mountain War Time.

Harold Dean was asleep in the rear of his store. He had kept it open late two nights in a row to accommodate soldiers bivouacked nearby. Unknown to them, the soldiers were there to evacuate isolated ranchers if need be.

"All of a sudden came the loudest bang I've ever heard. The first thing I remember is standing at the foot of the bed saying, 'Was that thunder?' But I knew it wasn't thunder.

"I was so tired I went back to bed. But I couldn't sleep. By then it was light, so I got up and looked out. That's when I saw the cloud."

Four weeks later, two Japanese cities lay in rubble and the Second World War had ended. World politics would never be the same again.

The alumni of Trinity are scattered now, but their legacy lives on.

It glides beneath the oceans in a submarine powered by a miniature reactor and carrying nuclear-tipped missiles.

It beats in the breast of a woman in France, whose life depends on a tiny atomic generator regulating her heartbeat.

It becomes a power-hungry world as the only salvation when conventional energy sources are dead.

And it is inexorably entwined in a struggle to preserve earth's environment for generations hence.

The Trinity legacy can be told by these men: Vannevar Bush, Norris Bradbury, Hillier Stafford Warren and Glenn Seaborg.

Vannevar Bush, a distinguished electrical engineer from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was head of the Office of Scientific Research and Development. He oversaw an army of 30,000 working "in radar, the proximity fuse and a flock of defence projects, including the $2,000,000,000 Manhattan Project to develop a nuclear weapon.

Now 80, he lives in retirement in Belmont, Mass.

"The advent of the atom bomb was inevitable, the state of science being what it was then," he said.

"Our fear was that Hitler would get it first. If Hitler had gotten the bomb into production before we did, he would have conquered the world."

Norris Bradbury was responsible for assembly of "Fat Man," as the bomb was dubbed. He battled dust and stifling heat readying the device in the final, frustrating week.

A small, wiry man, now 61, Bradbury was ordered in 1944 to Los Alamos, the secret laboratory in the mountains west of Santa Fe, N.M.

Under the direction of physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer, scientists and engineers gathered at Los Alamos to design and build the bomb. Oppenheimer resigned after the war and Bradbury succeeded him, directing development of the hydrogen bomb. Bradbury retires as Los Alamos director Sept. 1.

Jim Tuck is a Los Alamos pioneer. If he and others around the world can tame the hydrogen bomb, man will be assured for centuries of cheap, pollution-and radiation-free electrical power generated from the "heavy" hydrogen in sea water.

Born 48 years ago in England, Tuck was scientific adviser to Churchill and came to Los Alamos in 1944.

Tuck went back to England after the war, but returned to Los Alamos in 1950 to help with the hydrogen bomb. He worked on controlled fusion on the side, then full time.

A fusion power reactor would be devoid of most dangers inherent in fission reactors. There would be no danger of an explosion; only a small radiation danger.

Tuck won't predict how long small fusion reactors become reality. But he considers fission reactors only an interim solution to man's insatiable demand for power.

Ed McMillan has devoted his career to understanding matter. Now 52, he shared the Nobel Prize in physics in 1951 for helping discover and chemically understand several new elements. He was at Trinity.

Now he's director of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory overlooking San Francisco Bay.

Warren, 75, is retired but maintains an office and laboratory at the medical school of University of California at Los Angeles.

"After the war, the imaginations of biologists and clinical and medical researchers was greatly stimulated by the possibilities the release of nuclear energy had presented.

"The production and release of isotopes has done more for medicine in general than any one thing. Isotopes are a very useful tool and have many still-unrealised possibilities."

Radiation levels have occupied much of Glenn Seaborg's time recently. So, too, have thermal pollution, location of nuclear reactors, underground nuclear explosions and a multitude of atomic energy problems.

Seaborg, who shared the Nobel Prize with McMillan in 1951, has been chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission since 1961. A tall man of 58 with a shy smile, he left a chancellorship at the University of California to join the AEC.

Seaborg wasn't at Trinity. He was working at the metallurgical laboratory at the University of Chicago.

Along with other bright chemists, Seaborg sought to define the chemistry and metallurgy of plutonium and uranium, selected as the only feasible fuels for a nuclear weapon. Producing useable amounts of the two metals eventually occupied the bulk of the Manhattan Project effort.

In this period of environmental crusade, Seaborg's job is not easy. The nuclear industry with its radiation, power plants, underground explosions and useable weapons has become, rightly or wrongly, a villain.

So Seaborg has travelled widely telling atomic energy's story. He stresses the care used to select radiation standards; points out the need for power to maintain North America's standard of living and clean her environment; emphasizes the atom's role in medicine; cites the AEC's almost spotless safety record; calls for open public education about atomic energy.

In short, Glenn Seaborg has become the defence counsel for the atom, on trial not so much for its past as for its possible threat to the future.

"It does little good to make scapegoats of our ancestors or one or another segments of our society for the crises we face today," Seaborg said.

"Our environmental crisis could not have been theorized or accepted in the abstract before. It was an experiment that had to be lived in conjunction with the other problems of human growth that have evolved and which we must now move on to resolve."

Atomic energy, part of the problem, also must be part of the solution.

Gary Bowerman Reaches Goal at Milwaukee Open

Gary Bowerman, Belleville's lone representative on the Professional Golfers' Tour, watered himself of qualifying for a second season amongst the world's best by picking up a $2,031 cheque at the Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

Bowerman carded a 283 total to blush seven strokes behind the winner, Deane Beman, in 14th position.

* * *

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A confident Deane Beman withdrew from the British Open to play at Milwaukee because of the warm weather and a chance to get in more practice.

"I was happy about my decision before," he said Sunday, after winning the $110,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament. "Now I'm elated."

The 33-year-old Beman fired 4 under-par 276 to capture the $22,000 first place check.

Three strokes back were Don Massengale, Dick Crawford and Ted Hayes, all tied at 279.

"I had an exemption and had planned to play in the British Open," Beman said. "But my performance has been mediocre lately and I thought the weather in Milwaukee would be warmer and I could get in more practice."

It was only the second victory for Beman on the PGA tour, with the first coming in last year's Texas Open.

The Bethesda, Md. golfer, who became pro four years ago, turned in his final round of 69 with sparkling iron play.

He blasted out of a trap on the first hole to within 12 feet of the pin. And, until he made the turn, it was one of his longest putts of the day.

On two, he hit a four iron to within six feet, the same distance he left a wedge shot on the fourth hole. On No. 9, he rifled a two iron to within five feet of the flag.

Asked if winning a tournament that didn't include the glamour names of gold—all of whom were playing in the more prestigious tournament at St. Andrews, Scotland—Beman politely refused to comment.

"If I had gone over and played as well as I've played here, I might have won it," he said.

Rain Fails to Dampen Scarborough In 'Golden Bat' Bantam Tournament

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville's "Golden Bat" bantam baseball tournament finished the weekend as an unqualified — if somewhat wet — success.

Summer rains Friday night and Saturday, set the tourney schedule back, and threatened to force a complete ball, but for the efforts of numerous volunteer workers, who whipped the seven local baseball diamonds into excellent playing condition for Sunday's heavy schedule of games.

Scarborough Village took advantage of the heavy burden placed on competing mound staffs to come up with their second consecutive "A" championship, as well as the grand title game, for the Golden Bat.

The Toronto team coupled their second title, in as many years by downing the "B" championship from Peterborough 9-5 in the final game.

Pitching depth and power hitting carried Scarborough through the Grand championship game, as Dan Atkinson, Gary Hudson and Keith Marchant all saw mound duty.

Lethbanker, John Huddlestone who had pitched two no - hitters in his first pair of appearances found the strain of hurling four games in one day too difficult, getting knocked out of the box in the fifth inning.

Atkinson was the game's outstanding player, collecting a pair of home runs and playing an outstanding game at shortstop and at the bases after being relieved of his pitching duties.

Scarborough opened their tournament action with a 10-9 drubbing of Peterborough and added wins over East York, West Hill and Welland, en route to the championship.

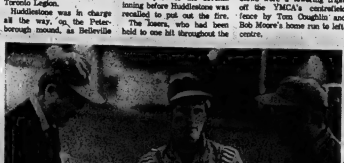
The game against Welland was the stiffest opposition in the "A" title game edging Welland 2-1.

Gary Thistle pitched Scarborough to the win with a four - hitter, as well as chipping in a pair of singles and scoring once, on Jim Gray's pair of runs, and driving in the other, Atkinson and John Fisher picked up the other two safeties.

In the "B" championship game, Peterborough had little trouble disposing of a game, but out - classed Belleville team.

The home town bantams played exceptionally well after their first-game loss to Trenton, pulling off last - losing wins against Thurlow and Toronto Legion.

Huddlestone was in charge all the way, on the Peterborough mound, as Belleville got all their runs against reliever Gary Pulham, who worked part of the seventh inning before Huddlestone was recalled to put out the fire.



The losers, who had been held to one hit throughout the game, exploded for all their runs in the final frame. Key blows were a towering triple by the YMCA's centrefield fence by Tom Coughlin and Bob Moore's home run to left-centre.

Belleville had pulled the tourney's major upset by downing Toronto Legion 8-4 with a three - run outburst in the bottom of the seventh.

Three walks, singles by Moore and Peter Molaski and an infield error gave the Legion 98 team the win. Reg. Adams picked up the win in relief of Ron McTaggart.

"I just wish that there was some way I could mention everyone who helped with this tournament", said chairman Ron Lupenette. "They were working from seven o'clock in the morning to fix up the diamonds, and there's no way it could have gone on without them."

Hot Corner Action

Belleville third baseman Terry Madden gets the throw too late to put the tag on Peterborough shortstop Mike Fryia in the "B" championship game of the "Golden Bat" bantam baseball tournament. Peterborough took a 9-4 decision before bowing to Scarborough Village in the grand championship.

Repeat Performance

Tournament Director Ron Lupenette and Belleville mayor, Russell Scott, present the 'Golden Bat' to Scarborough captain Keith Marchant after his team defeated Peterborough 9-5 in the Grand Championship game. It was the second in as many years for Scarborough.

Juniors Win Oshawa Tourney

The Richard Ellis Juniors used team work and the most valuable player of the tournament to sweep aside, all opponents in their upset victory at the Ida Arnaud All-Ontario Oshawa Junior Tournament.

The best junior teams in Ontario were present Saturday as the quest for the O'Keefe Trophy got underway. Gail Woodstock, Hampton, Willowdale, Scarboro, Oshawa, and last year's all-Ontario champs Peterborough were just a few of the highcalibre entrants.

Belleville played four games, winning them all, in picking up the trophy. Dunbarton fell the Ellis ace first dropping a 4-3 decision to the Juniors. But Perry was the next to go as the Ellis crew whipped them 8-0. Five time tournament champions Oshawa who were also favored to win this one, fell victim to Dale Duval's second inning homer and a 1-0 loss. In the championship game the Juniors fell many anxious moments before finally defeating a strong Scarboro team 8-7.

An added delight for the Juniors was the winning of the most valuable player award by short stop Dale Duval. Duval played outstanding ball in the field making many spectacular plays besides being deadly at the plate, illustrated by his game winning homer against Oshawa.

Dale's been playing good ball all year but at this tournament he was just fantastic, making unbelievable plays around short stop" lauds coach Harold Reid. "The Ellis infielder's play brought him an offer to play for the Oshawa Twp's, one of the better clubs in Ontario.

Although a distinct honor Dale will remain with his teamates in Belleville, eager for an Ontario championship. His teamates proved the worth of working together as they gave hurlers Scott Reid and Ted Waite all the support they needed.

Reid and Waite alternated the pitching chores with the only, tense moments being in the final game where Scott relieved Ted in the seventh. Oshawa had been battling back the entire game but Reid's two run double in the eighth preserved the victory.

"It was a team effort all the way with every one of my players hitting in some way either with a big hit or a good fielding play. They're a great bunch of boys to want to play ball — making my coaching duties all the easier," cites Reid.

Falcons Boot Trenton

The Belleville Falcon Bantams found Trenton a very hospitable host Sunday as they whipped the home team 5-1.

Belleville scored the first five goals before Trenton's Bob Lebrun broke the Falcon defence. The Hertz and John Romano had the goals each and Keven Parry one for the victorious Belleville Squad.

Harness Fans Play for Big 'Stakes'

The OHHA "B" Stakes attracted the largest crowd of the season to the Belleville Fairgrounds Saturday night as well as setting a record for Pari-mutuel betting. A packed house of 1206 people bet $36,200 besides witnessing some of the fastest times of the year.

Miss Belle Bars overcame several recalls due to the overexuberance of the horses to record a 2:18.1 mile the fastest of the Stake events for 2 year olds.

Selkahawkin won the first division stake race in 2:11.2. These stake races are the second such races in a series run across Ontario.

In local horse action, a photo finish in the fifth race regulated Magic Flight to third place behind Little Buddy and Brian Wann. It was the first loss on Belleville track this year for Al Vance's Flight.

The biggest win return of the night also accompanied the fastest time for a local horse as Larry Zebedee's Shakin returned $23.60 to win.

The Second Time Around

Jack Nicklaus, USA, leaps high after he made the winning putt in the British Open Golf Championship.

Nicklaus Wins British Open

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "How lucky can you get!"

That was the comment Sunday from big Jack Nicklaus from Ohio after winning his second British open golf championship.

Nicklaus defeated fellow-American Doug Sanders by one stroke in an 18-hole playoff on the famed Old Course at St. Andrews, birthplace of the game.

The two were deadlocked Saturday at the end of the regulation 72 holes after Sanders missed a four-foot putt which would have given him the title.

"I never expected to be here now," said Nicklaus Sunday. "Doug had it all wrapped up on the final hole Saturday. Then he missed that short putt."

Nicklaus carped a seven-footer on the 18th hole Sunday to win the title, finishing in par 72 for the 6,391-yard layout. Sanders carded a 72.

"I think Jack mastered those greens better than me," said Sanders. "I found myself slagging as the wind got naughty."

It was a bitter defeat for the wisecracking Sanders, who has been in a prolonged slump. He has won a number of tournaments, in the United States but never a major golf title. He has been second numerous times, however.

Nicklaus, one of the few golfers in the world to hold the Big Four professional championships—British and United States opens, U.S. PGA and Masters, picked up his first major triumph since 1967.

Harold Henning of South Africa and Lee Trevino of the U.S. wound up in third place Saturday in the greatest field the British Open, first played for 118 years ago, has ever known.

Nicklaus and Sanders tied at 282—five under par after four rounds. That made a playoff necessary.

Henning and Trevino finished at 285 after four rounds. Tony Jacklin, the defending champion from England and reigning U.S. Open champion, came next with 286 followed by Neil Coles and Peter Oosterhuis of England with 287.

McLaren Power

— Denis Hulme of New Zealand drove to an easy triumph in the Watkins Glen Can-Am road race Sunday, stretching the McLaren team's victory string to 16 in a row in the non-Formular series.

Hulme, 39-year-old former world driving champion who now lives in England, was never threatened as he completed 87 laps over the 3.3-mile Grand Prix course in one hour, 11 minutes and 16 seconds for an average speed of 118.86 miles an hour.

Jo Siffert of Switzerland came in second in a Porsche 917.

Third place Sunday went to Richard Attwood of England in an identical Porsche.

World champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland in the Chaparral had the fastest lap in the race, 125.94 m.p.h., for which he was paid $1,000.

Pedro Rodriguez also had problems with his car. He gave up on the 33rd lap with gear-box trouble.

It was the first triumph of the season for Hulme, who won the Can-Am series in 1974 and was runner-up to his late co-driver and team owner Bruce McLaren last year. McLaren died in a crash June 8.

McLaren's cars now have won 22 of the last 25 Can-Am events. Dan Gurney, who finished 10th Sunday after running into engine problems, had won the first two races of the season.

LA BAULE, France (CP) — Canada won the Cup of Nations — the last event — at the international horse show here Sunday after a jump-off round against France. The two teams were tied after the scheduled round of jumping. Canada's team of Jim Day, Oakville, Jim Elder, Aurora, Ont., Mofa Dunlop, Newmarket, Ont., and Jim Gayford, Gormley, Ont. finished without faults on the jump-off while France had four penalty points. The event — the only one in the show in which nations were represented by teams — had 10 entrants. The United States and Britain finished tied for third with 16 points off each. British world champion David Broome did not take part because both his horses had suffered slight injuries. Saturday the Canadian team placed all five of its members in the ribbons. Jim Day on Canadian Club and Moffat Dunlop on Argyll placed second and fourth respectively, in a speed-handling competition in which only four out of the 28 riders completed without a fence down. With a tight time allowance, Raimundo d'Inzeo of Italy on Florelle II won the class title with a one-quarter fault, followed by Day with a one-half fault. Nelson Pessoa of Brazil on Pasaop was third-with a three-quarter fault. Jim Elder finished ninth on Beefeater.

EDINBURGH, Scotland (Reuters) — Attractive Australian Carol Ryan, who loves highland dancing, has offered £50 ($150) and free beer to anyone who will marry her so she can stay in Scotland — especially for the opening of the Commonwealth Games. For 23-year-old Carol has been told by the interior ministry that she must leave Britain immediately as her permit has run out. But she does not want to miss her big moment at the Commonwealth Games there this week when she is due to take part in highland dancing at the official opening ceremony. What sort of man does she want to marry? "Well, he'll have to be British and understand that the marriage would be annulled right away," she said. Carol will not go broke providing free beer for her husband — she receives 144 bottles free every year from her employer — a brewery firm.

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Australian Ron Clark, world record holder for two miles in 10,000 metres but without an Olympic gold medal, announced his retirement from track Sunday at the age of 33. "The 1972 Olympics in Munich are out of the question for me," said the crew-cut Melbourne travel agent. "I just couldn't reach the top again." Clarke said his final appearance will be in Oslo next month after competing in the 10,000 metres in the Commonwealth Games starting here Thursday. "I have many of my best races there (Oslo). That is where I will bow out."

Russians Spread Laurels

EDMONTON (CP) — Their opposition got the praise at the world amateur wrestling championships but Russia took home take of 20 gold medals in the tournament attended by 34 countries.

Russian coach Anatoly Kolesov said the calibre of wrestling was "the best I have ever seen in a number of years."

He also praised Canadian officials after the 17th world championships wound up with 10 free-style finals Saturday night.

"Your Canadian officials are among the best in the world. No politics."

The Russians won their second straight team title with an overall total of 83 points in six days of Greco-Roman and free-style events.

In freestyle, they won four gold medals and one bronze, while taking five gold, one bronze and three silver medals in Greco-Roman.

They took 10 gold medals, six in Greco-Roman, at last year's championships in Japan.

Bulgaria finished second this year in the overall race with 22.4 points, while Japan had 44 and the United States 43.

Canadian got 8.3 points in over-all standings when Ratko Rapsic of Toronto finished in a sixth-place tie with Norwegian and Polish wrestlers in the 180½-pound Greco-Roman division.

Russian gold medal winners Saturday were Yuori Shachmuradon, 180½ pounds, heavyweight Alexander Medved, Vladimir Gulchin, 220 pounds, and Gennadi Starchov, who beat Bill Harlow of Chicago in the 198-pound class.

After 12 years of wrestling, Medved, 32, now has six world and two Olympic titles.

Iran, always a threat in free-style, captured three gold medals on the final day, while the U.S., Turkey and Japan took one each.

Ralmey Sound

TORONTO (CP) — Bad news from the Argonaut training camp for rest of the Canadian Football League-Dave Raimey's knee appears sound.

The Eastern Conference all-star reported Sunday following a scrimmage:

"I can even touch my toes again. I couldn't do that last week."

Ralmey underwent knee surgery during the winter and has undergone a strenuous training program while recovering.

Cincy Sluggers Lead NL All-Stars to Battle

CINCINNATI (AP) — A battery of National League's biggest guns, led by homerunners Tony Perez and Johnny Bench, should put American League pitching and the forces of Detroit Stadium to a severe test in Tuesday night's 41st all-star Game.

National League manager Gil Hodges and fellow League skipper Earl Weaver were to announce their batting orders for the mid-season classic today, and it was anticipated that right-handers Tom Seaver 14-5 of Hodges' New York Mets and Jim Palmer 12-6 of Weaver's Baltimore Orioles would be named the opposing starting pitchers.

Other NL starters are to be shortstop Eddie Allen of St. Louis Cardinals, second baseman Glenn Beckert and shortstop Don Kessinger of Chicago Cubs, third baseman Pepper Martin and catcher Bench of Cincinnati and outfielders Hank Aaron and Rico Carty of Atlanta Braves and Willie Mays of San Francisco Giants.

Starting for the AL will be first baseman Boog Powell and second baseman Dave Johnson of Baltimore, shortstop Luis Aparicio of Chicago White Sox, third baseman Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota Twins, catcher Bill Freehan of Detroit Tigers and outfielders Carl Yastrzemski of Boston, Reggie Jackson of Oakland Athletics and Frank Howard of Washington Senators and Frank Robinson of the Orioles.

Each of the starting lineups is six-deep in long ball hitters, with the Nationals showing a 131-123 advantage in homers to date this season.

Mays, a .343 hitter in 39 previous showings whose 67 at-bats, 23 runs scored and 23 hits are records for the classic, has his three all-star homers.

Perez, Bench and Allen have socked one apiece. Aaron has failed to connect in 18 previous games.

Mets Wishing Raymond Was on Air—Not Mound

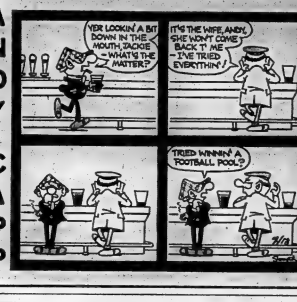
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Claude Raymond turned down a chance to retire this season and do the French-language broadcasts for Montreal Expos of the National League.

New York Mets wish he had taken the offer but the Expos are glad he decided to stay active.

Besides saving his voice, Raymond has saved 17 games for the Expos this year, compared to a cumulative total of two rescues by the rest of Montreal's pitching staff.

Sunday Raymond pulled his third straight game out of the fire and each time it was the Mets he dampened down.



New York's loss left the Mets 11½ games behind first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East. The Pirates beat St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 in 10 innings but lost pitcher Steve Blass with a cracked pitching elbow on the eve of the annual all-star game break.

Houston Astros edged San Francisco Giants 5-4, Cincinnati Reds nipped Atlanta Braves 6-5, San Diego Padres took Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 and Chicago Cubs trounced Philadelphia Phillies 10-2.

Saturday, Montreal tripped the Mets 6-2, Cincinnati downed Atlanta 7-6, Philadelphia drubbed Chicago 18-4, San Diego outlasted Los Angeles 4-3 and Houston defeated San Francisco 8-4 in 14 innings while the Pirates were dropping St. Louis 8-7.

The 33-year-old Raymond, in his 12th major league season, said that some Montreal writers in spring training thought he was finished and was being kept only because he's French-Canadian.

"That really hurt me," the relief ace said Sunday. "I worked a little harder and I've been having the best year I ever had."

Lasher Gets Twin Hits From Conigliaro Kids

Tony Conigliaro and Billy Conigliaro hit Fred Lasher Sunday and it was debatable which of the brothers made the Cleveland Indian pitcher feel worse.

Tony C. charged Lasher after being struck on the left arm by a pitch in the first inning of Sunday's nightcap. He kicked Lasher in the hip—the hurler got a tetanus shot for a small spike wound—and punched him in the nose before being thrown out of the game.

Lasher stuck around and Billy C. hit a home run in the second inning that started Boston Red Sox to an 8-2 victory. They also won the opener 6-3.

"I couldn't think of anything else but to go and get him," said Tony, nearly bloodied when struck in the face by a pitch from California's Jack Hamilton in August, 1967) and didn't return to action until last season.

Sunday's outburst was the aftermath of a July 4 game in which Lasher knocked Conigliaro down with a pitch and then was quoted as saying: "Tell Tony C. he better be a little careful the next time he faces me because he just may get a little jammed."

"The pitch was inside, but it wasn't thrown at Tony," the umpire said.

Tom Satriano and John Kennedy also honored for the Red Sox in the nightcap while Tony C. and Rico Petrocelli connected in the first game. Dalton Sans, Tony Horton and Ted Uhlaender cracked home runs for the Indians, who fell into fourth place in the American League East when Washington Senators beat New York Yankees 7-3.

Elsewhere Sunday in the AL, Baltimore Orioles whipped Detroit 13-3 after the Tigers took the opener 7-3, California Angels downed Minnesota Twins 6-2, Oakland Athletics edged Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 but lost the second game 2-1, and Chicago White Sox battered Kansas City Royals 10-5.

In games Saturday, Baltimore nipped Detroit 6-5, Cleveland defeated Boston 3-1, Oakland drubbed Milwaukee 11-1, New York downed Washington 3-1, Kansas City stopped a 6-6 whitewash of Chicago and Minnesota took California 5-2.

Mickey Stanley, Bill Freehan and Al Kaline belted Detroit homers as the Tigers rocked Dave McNally for seven runs in the first three innings of their opening game. But the Orioles walloped three homers of their own —by Boog Powell, Ellie Hendricks and Merv Rettenmund— and shelled Denny McLain, 8-2, and two relievers for seven runs in the sixth inning of the nightcap to maintain their six-game bulge over the Tigers in the AL East.

The Yankees fell seven games behind Baltimore when Washington rocked Mel Stottlemyre for five runs in the first two innings and breezed behind Jim Hannan.

Papyrus Boat Makes It

Heyerdahl in Barbados After Atlantic Voyage

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — After a two-month transatlantic crossing that he says proves the Egyptians could have discovered North America 4,000 years ago, Thor Heyerdahl and his seven international crew members planned to haul their waterlogged papyrus boat Ra II out of Bridgetown's harbor today prior to shipping it back to Europe.

The 57-year-old Norwegian explorer and his crew spent their first night ashore Sunday after completing their 3,268-mile crossing that began May 17 in Safi, Morocco.

Saying that the successful completion of his journey proved the ancient Egyptians could have crossed the Atlantic, Heyerdahl said as he stepped ashore late Sunday afternoon:

"This is a great, great, great moment. We have definitely proved that papyrus is seaworthy."

Only the Ra's pointed prow and stern sections were above the water, and the government tug Culpepper towed it the last eight miles into harbor. But officials said the Ra could have made Bridgetown unaided; she just needed assistance to complete the journey before dark.

"It's good to be back again," Heyerdahl called to well-wishers as he tied up at the customs dock in the capital of Barbados.

"We are delighted to be here, especially when we came so close last year."

Heyerdahl's first attempt last year to prove his theory ended 60 miles short of Barbados when the Ra, a larger copy of the Egyptian boats shown on ancient tomb carvings, broke up in high seas.

Bing Crosby and Bob Hope created the craze for golf, and hunting was furthered by Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and Robert Taylor.

The trend toward speed cars will be demonstrated Aug. 9 with a pro-amateur Celebrity Invitational Race at the new Ontario Motor Speedway. Among those already announced for the race are Paul Newman, Dick Smothers and director Roman Polanski, as well as astronaut Pete Conrad.

Other possibilities include Robert Redford, Clint Eastwood and James Garner. Steve McQueen would probably like to enter the race, which will contribute $20,000 to the Motion Picture and Television Relief Fund. But he's in Europe making a movie about car racing.

What attracts the stars to the dangerous sport? David Lockwin, President of the Ontario Speedway, offers this explanation:

"I may be prejudiced, but I think race drivers are the heroes of the 1970s.

"The superheroes of today—movie stars and astronauts—need heroes of their own, and they find much to admire in race drivers. Racing is also an excellent release from the tensions those superheroes are under.

"Paul Newman and I own a formula Ford, and we sometimes spend 12 hours racing around the track, one after the other. When we're done, we feel that we have put in a hard day's exercise. The mental relaxation is incalculable."

The Ontario Speedway, 48 miles east of Los Angeles, has Hollywood backing. During the formative stages Lockton discussed the project with Kirk Douglas. He was so impressed with the actor's ideas that Douglas was added to the board of directors. Dick Smothers is another member, and Newman is likely to be added.

The $25,000,000 raceway is taking shape amid the orange groves. After the preview with the pro-am celebrity race, the track will officially open with the California 500 Sept. 6. The stadium is designed to seat 160,000 and Lockton hopes to fill it.

"There is a greater density of auto racing fans in southern California than anywhere else in the country," he says.

But it's the non-fans that the track needs to attract, Lockton admitted, and the advertising is aimed at them. The track will be in use daily with tests, television commercials and tours and there will be 35 to 40 racing days.

Auto Racing Is the 'in' Sport With Hollywood Trend Setters

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In every era the film colony has had its "in" sport. Now it's auto racing.

Polo was the rage in the 1920s, with Walt Disney, Will Rogers, Spencer Tracy and other notables playing every Sunday. Then Charles Farrell's Racquet Club in Palm Springs helped make tennis the fashionable sport.

If Gas Is Chronic, Discover Cause

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I get a lot of gas. I've tried antacids but they don't help. The gas bothers me especially after I've eaten. Do you have any suggestions? Should I see a doctor? — Mrs. D.

Comment: I am glad you asked the question "should I see a doctor?" Undoubtedly, many readers tire of my frequent suggestions that a medical examination is the sensible solution to a problem. Coming from you, perhaps they will forgive me this time.

"Gas" is a common complaint. Here is a boy who eats a double or triple portion of baked beans. Gas is not an unusual complication. But he needs no antacids or other medication. All he needs is time for the beans to be digested — and a resolve not to overburden himself again. (I would not send him to a doctor.)

Here is a man who has indulged himself at a cocktail party. The reason for his gas is evident. After surviving the morning after, it's likely that his discomfort will disappear. (I would not send him to a doctor, either).

And so with many other evident causes of "gas." However, when this symptom recurs daily, it deserves medical study, rather than hit or miss self-help — counter drugstore treatment.

An occasional pill or dose of Maalox won't hurt anyone, but the need for it several times a day, week after week, spells out the need for investigation. What's causing the gas?

* * *

Does the gas, or pressure under the chest come on invariably when one exerts? Possibly the cause in angina pectoris. Or some other form of heart disease.

Is it due to ulcer? To hiatal hernia? To chronic pancreatitis? To trouble in the large bowel? Or, is there a simple solution? Perhaps you eat too much and too fast, Mrs. D.

By what I've said, I think you realize that I've seconded your motion: better see your doctor. A short spell of gaseous discomfort does not deserve a medical review; but gas that keeps on recurring day after day certainly is reason enough for a medical visit. Self - treatment will get you nowhere.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Here are the results of my glucose tolerance test. Fasting blood sugar 137, One - hour: 244. Two hours: 221. Three-hour: 139. Would you say that this is an indication of diabetes mellitus? — Mr. K.

Comment: The way your doctor will have to make the actual diagnosis.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a nose that has depressed me all my life. I am very much interested in plastic surgery, but I am now 46 years of age. Is it worthwhile? Or should I forget it? — Mrs. M.

Comment: Ask your doctor. He is an indication of diabetes mellitus? — Mr. K.

Comment: It is a case that, the deciding should be yours and not that of family or friends. It is more personal than everybody deciding upon an appendectomy or gall bladder operation.

Be sure you engage the services of a competent plastic surgeon recommended by your own doctor or by your local medical society or hospitals.

I recall a patient who had such work - surgery. At exactly your age, Mrs. D. She became a very happy person. Like many others, she kept saying, "why didn't I have it done 30 years ago?"

Ms. close friends and my family discourage me. They say it am foolish to shoulder it at my age. But I'm at the point where it is depressing me. I'd love to have it done. What do you think? — Mrs. D.

Waffle Group Will Not Contest NDP Leadership

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Waffle group will not run a candidate for the leadership of the provincial New Democratic party nor throw its weight behind any other candidate at the party's October convention.

At a weekend conference, about 60 members of the radical young NDP group decided instead to fight the party leadership on policy questions, attempting to force a shift to the left.

"We feel the key issue for the Waffle is to organize and build a serious socialist left in the party," James Lazier, chairman of the 600-member Ontario group said Saturday.

"We decided that challenging on policy, not for the leadership, was the more realistic way to do this."

Mr. Lazer, a 28-year-old history lecturer at Queen's University, Kingston, had been expected to run for the Waffle, challenging Stephen Lewis, MPP for Scarborough West, who so far is the only declared candidate for the leadership post vacated by longtime leader Donald MacDonald.

The Waffle was formed about a year and a half ago in several provincial ridings to promote the socialist-nationalist ideas of, MPP thinkers such as Melville Watkins, a University in Toronto economist. The name is an in-group joke chosen by Wafflers who found that on more issues they were willing to "waffle" or compromise their ideas for a more practical approach.

Mr. Watkins, author of the federal Watkins report on U.S. domination of Canadian industries, is himself expected to stand next April as the group's candidate in the national NDP leadership contest following the retirement of T. C. Douglas.

Mr. Lazer said the Ontario Waffle will put up a partial slate of candidates for executive positions within the party, such as the party presidency, before the NDP's Oct. 1-3 convention in Toronto.

However, the main battle will be over policy, with the Waffle expected to push for support of 25 per cent or more of the 1,200 delegates on key issues.

Special Tools Required When Cleaning Battery

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

Some time ago, you mentioned that the average motorist could minimize costs by doing his own minor running repairs.

"I have decided to take your advice and am gradually accumulating a suitable tool kit. I would like to know what tools are needed to properly clean the battery and what I should expect to pay for them.

"Also, what is the correct cleaning procedure and how often should it be done?" — Mr. R. W., Belleville, Ont.

To thoroughly clean the battery, you will need a special puller to remove the cables from the battery posts, and a combination tool comprised of wire brushes for cleaning the inside of the battery cables and the outside of the battery posts. These tools are available at most auto parts stores for about $3.

A battery should be cleaned at least every six months or at the first sign of corrosion build-up.

Start out by coating the battery with a solution of baking soda and water. When the solution stop, foaming, rinse off with straight water. It is sometimes necessary to use a wire brush to remove thick corrosion deposits from around the battery cables and posts. Upon completion of the external cleaning, the next important step is to remove the cables from the battery posts (using the puller you just bought). Attempting to remove the cables by hand or prying them from the posts with a screwdriver, can loosen the posts or crack the top of the battery.

The inside of the cables and the outside of the posts must be cleaned right down to bare metal with the combination wire brushing tool. Badly corroded cables should be replaced or replaced. When this is done, replace the cables and make sure they are thoroughly tightened. A thin coating of petroleum jelly on the cables and posts will resist corrosion.

If cleaning has been neglected for some time, it is usually necessary to remove the battery and clean the corrosion that forms on the lower cradle and the battery hold-down mechanism. Once cleaned (and you may have to do a lot of scraping), this mechanism should also be coated with petroleum jelly.

Anyone who is mechanically inclined and has the necessary pliler and cleaning tool would find that cleaning of the battery is really quite simple. And I couldn't think of a better place for do - it - yourselfers to make a start.

Corrosion build-up between the battery cables and posts can completely insulate one from the other, resulting in non-starting and other serious electrical failures.

Remember, however, that the battery should still be tested by a trained technician periodically to establish its condition of charge, and also to check the output of the alternator or generator.

Broadcasters Mispronounce

Why Don't Radio and Television Announcers Tell Us Loud and Clear?

— That there is no "pota" or "compotent," and no "nip" in "municipal."

— That the adverb meaning "evidently" is "pay-tently," not "pat-ently."

— That the verb "frequent" is stressed on the first syllable, not the first, unlike the adjective.

— That there is no "pear" in "comparable," no "fur" in "preferable," and no "mid" in "formidable."

— That there is no "cue" in "nuclear" (the most prevalent mispronunciation seems to be "nucular.")

— That there is no "bee" in "obeisance," and the second syllable should sound like "obey."

— That there is no number such as "nuhmuh." And there is no "thirdly," either.)

— That there are only three syllables, not four, in the word "preferable."

— That there are only four syllables, not five, in "nuclear."

— That "cereteal" should be stressed on the first syllable, and not the second (although I suspect that is a losing battle with the Cereteal Paisy Association.)

— That there is no such food, either in English or in French, as "or derve," or any word that starts with "or" in English or French, as a "Maider D."

— That an outer circle of Hell for illiterates would consist exclusively of those who persist in calling it "Febuary."

— That the chief officer of American municipalities is not the "Mare."

— That "because" should rhyme with "cause," and not with "buzz."

— That there is no "beast" in "bestial," there is no "bess" in "bestow," and there is no "dack" in "daiquiri," and no "pick" in despicable."

— That both boundiary and incidentally have five syllables, not three (the "indi" is from the Latin for "evil," not for "masculine.") — That the word "pomegranate" is lovely.

— That there is no "on" in "envoy," which is not a French word, but a very old English one.

— That it is a double error for the announcer whose wife calls the news "nooza" to call the afternoon "afternoon."

— That there is no "yum" in "column," and no "bee" in "incognito."

— That there are only four syllables, not five, in "auxiliary."

— That "cereteal" should be stressed on the first syllable, and not the second (although I suspect that is a losing battle with the Cereteal Paisy Association.)

— That there is no such food, either in English or in French, as "or derve," or any word that starts with "or" in English or French, as a "Maider D."

B.C. Is Hardest Hit by Industrial Layoff

By HARRY FORLL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Premier W. A. C. Bennett maintains for the world that British Columbia is forward and booming. But right now the biggest booms are coming from the confrontations in the area of labor and management.

Although there are other major industrial layoffs across Canada, B.C. is the hardest-hit province with 28,000 workers out in the construction industry, another 28,000 threatening to go out in the lumber industry and strike votes reported Saturday from steelworkers and pulp workers.

Thousands of workers also are idle or expected to be idle in Ontario, mainly in the Toronto area, and about 1,000 in the Montreal area, but in terms of percentages of the labor force in major industries, it is small.

In other parts of the country, there are virtually no major layoffs in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Mrs. Bennett admits that B.C.'s economy has been reduced considerably in recent months and has offered no immediate personally the lumber industry dispute.

The construction industry has been idle since mid-April, but the men were expected to return to work this week following an ultimatum by Labor Minister Allan Peterson who threatened to use a section of the B.C. labor law which gives the government the right to intervene "in the public interest."

Steelworkers in the East Kootenays and in Vancouver Island and pulp workers at Kamloops and Campbell River approved strike action in Saturday votes but set no dates.

Workers in the B.C. forest industry, members of the International Woodworkers of America, are threatening to go on strike in a dispute over a new contract. The last contract expired in June.

Earlier this year, forest industry production was hampered by a strike of lowboat workers which was settled promptly.

In the B.C. construction industry, it has been estimated that the payroll losses since April have amounted to $50,000,000.

The Canadian Lipstic in B.C. are the result basically of wage disputes, in Eastern Canada they are the result of business conditions.

Business spokesman in the Toronto area say the economy is in a slump and there is pressure on the export market because the Canadian dollar was unpegged.

Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. said it will reduce its white-collar work force of 300 in Toronto by 10 per cent. Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. also in Toronto, said it has released 100 of 653 workers from its lamp and wiring device manufacture of turbines.

Mack Metals, business agent for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said many workers in the garment industry in Toronto now are on shorter work weeks because of a recession in the economy.

Massey-Ferguson Industries Ltd. in Brantford, Ont., said that a general slowdown in the farm implement industry will not move than 500 persons out of work July 17 at two combine assembly plants.

But the company said half of them could be recalled in early September, when full production is expected to resume.

While Farm equipment Co. Ltd. in Brantford laid off more than 200 workers in June. They are due to return to work but will be laid off again Aug. 31. The company said the men will probably be recalled early next year.

In Kingston, Ont., De Pont of Canada Ltd. said it will reduce its work force by 75 before the end of this year. The company, which employs about 1,200, laid off 41 persons in June.

Canadair Ltd. in Montreal meanwhile has announced it is continuing to lay off workers because of reductions in defence spending by the Canadian and United States governments.

The plant, which normally employs about 7,500, has laid off about 1,000 this year.

The Quebec government says that layoffs across the provinces are expected in the textile and shoe industries.

In Nova Scotia, a major layoff of 400 men idled when Fairey Aviation Co. Ltd. closed work facilities at Eastern Passage and at the Halifax International Airport. The company does repair work on aircraft and helicopters.

Work at three flat-processing plants in Nova Scotia also was reduced because of a strike by trawler fishermen.

But while many business spokesmen blamed a recession for the layoffs, others said the economy is on the upswing and parts of the country reported increasing employment.

In the Kitchener, Ont., area, unemployment figures stand at 4.7 per cent, well below Canada's average of 6.5 per cent.

Said Russ Howell, owner of a construction company: "Things have really picked up. ... The whole economy is in an upswing and I think we will see a boom in housing sales by the fall."

In the Ottawa-Hull area, there has been an expansion in employment, a spokesman for the Ottawa-Hull area, there has been an expansion in employment. A spokesman for the commercial development council in Ottawa said there was only one major reduction in the work force this year: An underwear manufacturer moved to smaller premises.

The non-government employment level in the Ottawa-Hull area has increased by about four per cent since last year and a spokesman for the Quebec Employment Centre said the employment situation in Hull now is better than in most parts of Quebec.

Racial Riots Hit Three U.S. Cities

A state of emergency was clamped on Michigan City, Ind., and curfews were in effect today in two other United States cities hit by racial disorders.

One hundred and fifty National Guard troops were brought into Michigan City, population 38,000, to aid state and city police in enforcing a 9 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew and to prevent gatherings of groups during the day.

Eight were in New Bedford, Mass., and Highland Park, Mich., halted trouble in those two cities by Sunday night.

The trouble in Michigan City, where about 15 per cent of the population is black, began Saturday night after three Negroes were arrested in a tavern for disorderly conduct.

In New Bedford, the trouble began last week when a black hailed for driving his car with a faulty headlight was arrested for disorderly conduct.

The Highland Park disturbance occurred after the shooting death Saturday night of a black in a bar. A bartender was later arraigned on second degree murder charges. The bar was later fire-bombed and badly damaged.

In Michigan City, at least 20 persons were arrested Sunday night after violence flared in the predominantly black north side of the community on the shore of Lake Michigan.

A white man was pulled from his auto and beaten and was in hospital in fair condition. Nine persons were reported injured Saturday night, and 11 arrests were made.

A ban was placed on the sales of firearms, ammunition, alcoholic beverages and inflammables.

In New Bedford, a dozen persons were arrested Sunday night for violating a 9 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew but there were no reports of serious incidents.

Blacks in Negro neighborhoods of Kenosha, Wis., set up barricades to keep out whites. One black youth was shot to death and three others wounded Saturday night. They were the targets of shotgun blasts fired from a speeding car.

Three white youths were arrested Sunday and charged with murder.

Girl Conscious

MONTREAL (CP) — Californian Margaret Jones, 18, found unconscious last Tuesday on a roadside, has regained consciousness and may be able to communicate with police "in a couple of days," a hospital spokesman reported Sunday.

Miss Jones, from Encino, was found on a roadside 25 miles south of here along with her companion Peggy Coleman, 18, of Kenosha, Wis. Miss Coleman was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

"While she has regained consciousness," said the hospital spokesman, "she is still in a state of nervous shock and doctors don't think she'll be able to talk to police for at least another couple of days."

Agnew Sees Scant Hope of Peace Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice-President Spiro Agnew says there is little hope President Nixon's new ambassador to the Paris peace talks will be successful as long as Hanoi demands nothing short of "the flat abandonment of South Vietnam."

While pessimistic about Ambassador David K. E. Bruce's immediate chances when he takes over as chief United States negotiator at the talks next month, the vice-president, in an interview with a group of elected Press, forecast an eventual settlement from the conference.

That will come, Agnew said, when the North Vietnamese "find that there is no advantage to them in continuing the struggle," and accept reasonable terms at the peace table.

In an interview, Agnew talked of the "big Fulbright clique in the Senate."

Agnew used the designation for Senate Republicans as well as Democratic critics of Nixon policy, particularly the U.S. attack into Cambodia.

"They have been harmful because always they're a point of great comfort to the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong to find that there are people in high elective offices who question the efficacy of the American position in South east Asia," he said.

Here is a portion of the interview:

Q: Is it politically feasible, at this point, to reverse course if necessary and send more Americans into Vietnam.

A: Not only is it politically unfeasible, but it is directly contrary to the president's announced policy of withdrawing troops from Vietnam, a policy which he has successfully been carrying out and in which he has met every commitment that he has made to date thus far.

Q: If for some reason the president should decide it was necessary in order to re-escalate, given the current state of the country, can it be done?

A: You can't base that kind of contingency because the possibilities, the shades of crisis, are unlimited. You can run all the way from a nuclear attack by some enemy or some enemy supported troops down to a simple escalation of guerrilla activity on the part of the North Vietnamese.

Q: Do you envisage a situation whereby most if not all U.S. troops could eventually leave Vietnam yet the war itself would continue?

A: I don't think so, because if we are successful in getting U.S. troops out of Vietnam within a short time as we hope to be, the North Vietnamese will then find that there is no advantage to them in continuing the struggle, and I'm sure they will come to reasonable terms at the peace table. This is something they have been totally unwilling to do.

They have been totally intransigent. I hope Mr. Bruce will be successful where others have failed, but even then I can't be optimistic about the chances because we have made every conceivable move except the flat abandonment of South Vietnam and that seems to be the only thing they are interested in.

Airlines Oppose Satellites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's major airlines are battling a plan by United States and European space agencies to set up a costly satellite system for control of air traffic across the North Atlantic.

The airlines contend the proposed system, which the space agencies say would be a valuable aid in preventing collisions, in skies becoming more crowded by the month, is premature and too expensive.

In an effort to resolve the dispute, the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have invited the U.S. and foreign airlines and their trade organizations, the Air Transport Association and the International Air Transport Association, to a special briefing here Aug. 12.

NASA and the European Space Research Organization have proposed a test system of two satellites, and a number of ground stations, linked with the existing air traffic control system.

NASA has budgeted $3,000,000 for study of the system during the current fiscal year.

The airlines, through ATA and IATA, have said they don't need such a system for some years and don't want to be saddled with its cost.

Peace Alters Face of Nigeria

LAGOS (AP) — The youths in buckled shoes dance until dawn these days in the rollicking nightclubs of this Nigerian capital. Only six months ago the bars and establishments were blacked out each night in fear of sudden attack by Ibo aircraft.

The civil war, the war that shook Africa's conidence and the world's conscience, is over, and the wounds are beginning to heal.

If babies in pockets of what was once Biafra are still whimpering and crying, at least the threat of death by starvation no longer hangs over 3,000,000 refugees.

And if the instant brotherhood promised by the federal leaders in the first flush of victory has not come to pass, neither have the arrests and sweeping reprisals predicted by the Biafrans in despair of defeat.

A half-year after the 31-month war ended, 800 Ibos are back working for the federal government.

Little is known for sure of the circumstances of the author of Biafra's secession, Odumegwu Ojukwu, beyond the fact that he is abroad. He fled to the Ivory Coast shortly before the surrender, and is keeping quiet.

Helped by about 100 foreigners, the newly-named state government in former Biafra has taken over from the Red Cross the care and feeding of war refugees. Relief experts are openly concerned at what they call a lack of planning and resources. There have been reports of a recent relapse in severe malnutrition, and some figures suggest that serious cases and deaths are back to about 200 a week after dropping well below that figure months ago.

But a massive program is under way with the emphasis on agriculture, and the program director says he can wipe out general malnutrition in a year.

Already corn crops planted at war's end are offering some hope.

The massive job of repairing war damage goes on. In Onitsha alone it may take $168,000,000 to clean up the mess.

That's not the end of the problem. The country is maintaining an army of nearly 250,000 men who cannot quickly be demobilized.

On the political front, things seem stable under Gen. Yakubu Gowon. He has vowed his military government will carry on until elections can be held in a smooth return to civilian rule.

Mostly the mood in the country is optimistic, though it can be quickly upset, as in the recent case of a radio play telling of a mock coup. It set off a brought the arrest of top officials of the broadcasting unit involved.

Slowly the Ibo tribesmen are drifting back into the national fabric of Nigeria. Ibos are back in the hotels and nightclubs, and no longer pretend they come from some other tribe. They are also returning to live in the North, so few that Kano's military governor has publicly expressed his disappointment. There are also a few in Port Harcourt, a city they once dominated.

Back home in their short-lived independent state, new ones more a part of federal Nigeria, the war-shattered economy is understandably slow to revive.

Industry is making a hesitating new start. Electricity and water are still unreliable, even away for many centres. Enugu, re-captured by the federals in October, 1967, still lacks electricity.

The federal economy is booming as never before, with more than 1,000,000 barrels of oil pumping foreign exchange into the treasury every day.

Cocoa, peanuts, tin and secondary industry are all adding to revenue, and even palm oil production is resuming in the East.

Internationally, the federal government is apparently taking a generous view. It is said to be willing to settle its differences with France over the supply of arms to Biafra, as well as with the four African states that recognized the secessionists. Relations with the Vatican are also improving.

Lighthearted cynics take comfort from the fact that in Awa beer has started to flow again from the war-stilled brewery.

He Crossed Ocean Without Fanfare

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — An American yachtsman slipped into Plymouth Saturday after a lone voyage across the Atlantic and didn't bother to tell anyone here about it until Sunday.

Francis Stokes, 44, from Moorestown, N.J., brought his 35-foot sloop Jane into the harbor and telephoned the news to his wife Nancy back home.

Then he settled down for a quiet weekend aboard the yacht. He plans to report his arrival to the Royal Western Yacht Club.

Mrs. Stokes took the first available plane from the United States and reached Plymouth Sunday night for a reunion with her husband.

Stokes said in an interview that his solo voyage began June 14 from Barnegat Light, N.J.

"I averaged 120 miles a day throughout the voyage," he said.

"It was my first, long solo trip and I had excellent weather.

"I had following winds nearly all the time and a little boost from the Gulf Stream enabled me to make a much faster crossing than expected.

"The voyage really was uneventful, with no problems."

Stokes runs a fruit processing company and has five children.

Puerto Rican Girl Chosen Miss Universe

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Dark-haired Maricela Cabanillaret Contreras of Puerto Rico was named Miss Universe 1970 Saturday night, edging Debbie Shelton of the United States.

The audience, jammed with Latin Americans, cheered wildly as the 20-year-old secretary from Puerto Nuevo was selected to succeed Oriental beauty Gloria Diaz of the Philippines, who crowned the new international beauty queen.

Listed behind the first runner-up—Miss Shelton—were second runner-up Joan Zealand of Australia, third runnerup Jun Shimade of Japan and fourth runnerup Beatriz Gros of Argentina.

Miss Malaret measures a stately 35-23-35, stands five feet eight inches and weighs 125 pounds. She attended the University of Puerto Rico and enjoyd swimming and dancing.

Price Climb Slows

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices rose again last month, but the increase from a year ago was significantly less than the increase which prevailed last winter.

The increase for the 12-month period to June, 1970, was 3.3 per cent, compared with increases of 4.8 per cent prevailing last winter. This is a comfortably within the prices and incomes commission's immediate goal of getting price rises down to not more than 3.5 per cent a year.

But index-watchers say what happened in June this year can't be counted on for repetition in the months ahead.

One reason is that consumer price index rises usually are less in the summer months than in the winter when food prices normally are higher to cover storage and import costs.

Another is that food prices rose more than usual in June last year. While there were sharp increases in off-season vegetable prices this June, food prices generally rose less than usual for the month.

Dr. John Young's prices and incomes commission has avoided making comment on each month's price index figures when they are announced. His commission is more concerned with price trends over a longer period of time.

Trudeau to Make No Concessions To Separatists

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says extremism feeds on itself and the problem of separatism cannot be resolved by yielding concessions to those who want to split Canada.

"Some people are afraid of confrontation," Trudeau said in a BBC television interview. "I don't believe in giving in to extremists."

To those who seek to destroy federalism, his answer is "no."

Trudeau was featured by the BBC in a 30-minute Panamora program Monday.

David Lewis, deputy NDP leader who was also interviewed, said the prime minister has no patience with the democratic process.

Trudeau said he finds that the government process is made of heavy machinery, difficult to move around. He did not know of a process better than the parliamentary process, even with its frustrations, and was trying to improve on it, not abolish it.

Critic of Long Hair Won't Sit as Judge

TORONTO (CP) — A judge who criticized long-haired youths in a 1967 editorial disqualified himself Monday from hearing charges against two anti-war demonstrators.

Defence lawyer D. H. Newman asked Judge S. Tupper Bigelow to disqualify himself from hearing charges against Dennis Corcoran, 21, of Toronto and David R. Ritchie, 20, of Batawa, Ont., formerly of Vancouver.

The editorial appeared in the Magistrate's Quarterly which Judge Bigelow edits. Both youths have long hair.

Corcoran was remanded to Oct. 5 on a charge of obstructing police at a demonstration in front of the United States Consulate here May 9.

Freighter Founders After Hitting Rock

CORNWALL (CP) — A freighter sank in the St. Lawrence seaway after striking a rock early today, apparently carrying nine persons to death in a bow-first plunge and leaving 12 survivors clinging to wreckage.

The 349-foot, 4,000-ton Eastcliffe Hall, owned in Montreal and carrying pig iron from Sorel, Que., to Cleveland, sank within three minutes after striking a shoal about 4 a.m. 18 miles west of here.

The sky was mostly clear and the river calm.

Sgt.-Maj. J. E. Legate of the provincial police said there were 21 aboard and he was certain the missing, most of whom were below decks when the ship struck, were drowned.

His figures were confirmed by Roger Belanger, director of the eastern region of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, Montreal.

Police said they recovered the body of the captain and divers were searching for the others, believed trapped in the ship.

James Fraser, superintendent of engineering for Fali Shipping Ltd., owners of the ship, said the captain was Albert Groulx of Montreal.

He said the captain's son Allan, 16, was among the missing. Also believed drowned were a woman and child, members of the family of the chief engineer.

Two survivors were taken to hospital at Winchester, Ont., about 30 miles south of Ottawa, and released after treatment.

Survivor Patrick Tollins of St. Catharines, Ont., a wheelsman, said the vessel had grounded on mud half an hour before the sinking, but resumed its course 10 minutes later after freeing itself.

"About 15 minutes later we really hit hard. The people below decks didn't stand a chance. We went down bow first in a matter of minutes.

"The forepeak filled with water and the men on deck started running toward the lifeboats. We tried to clear the boats but couldn't because of the angle of the vessel.

"She started to slide forward again as though she had slipped off a shelf and the men started pushing off the stern."

Marcel Gendion, the second engineer, said he and third engineer John Dott were thrown 50 feet into the air. As the ship

Ulster's 'Glorious Twelfth' Passes Without New Rioting

BELFAST (CP) — The British Army eased its grip on Northern Ireland today, gratified that huge Protestant parades Monday passed off without the feared renewal of religious rioting.

An army spokesman said military authorities now will consider whether they can dispense with some of the 11,000 troops at present deployed in Northern Ireland.

A sense of relief followed the peaceful ending of the parades which had 100,000 members of the Protestant Orange Order on the march in 19 different parts of Northern Ireland.

It was predicted for weeks before that the marches would provoke major civil conflict with the Roman Catholic minority.

After the parades ended Monday night, Deputy Premier Brian Faulkner told a news conference: "It should be regarded as a significant victory for common sense that the occasion went off without incident."

Brig. Michael Bayley, assistant chief of staff in Northern Ireland, said: "From the security point of view it was a very satisfactory day."

The absence of violence was attributed to the massive turnout of police and British troops and a plea for restraint from Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic.

Milwaukee Policemen Fight Mob

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police moved in with tear gas, smoke canisters and riot sticks Monday night to disperse a noisy crowd of about 1,000 persons in Milwaukee, Wis.

Four policemen and a youth were slightly injured and 17 persons were arrested at Water Tower Park, scene of an earlier disturbance.

The police went into action after the crowd began tearing down signs which proclaimed a 10 p.m. curfew. Many of the youths pelted police cars with rocks and bottles, heavily damaging some of them.

Police and young people had clashed at the park July 1 and 2 after area residents and officials of a nearby hospital complained of all-night noise in the area.

Meanwhile, racially-tense New Bedford, Mass., and Highland Park, Mich., were relatively calm.

Quinte Divers Aid In Search

TRENTON — CFB Trenton is airlifting three local divers by helicopter to the scene of the sinking of the freighter Eastcliffes Hall near Cornwall.

Belleville ambulance operator Stu Meeks set out by car at noon, to offer his rescue boat and his diving experience in the search for eight missing persons. One body has already been recovered.

The Otter left CFB at 1.10 p.m. carrying an Ontario Provincial Police diver, J. E. McCormick from the Madoc detachment, and two members of the CFB Trenton Flying Frogmen Scuba Club.

After completing the 70-minute flight to the Upper Canada Village airstrip, one mile from th eEastcliffes Hall, they will join divers from the Long Sault detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

A helicopter from CFB Trenton arrived on the scene shortly after 11 a.m., this morning. Aboard was a Coast Guard rescue officer, who will conduct an on-the-scene investigation.

Family Shuffled Like Poker Deck

Queen 'A Little Bushed'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Royal Family took in part of a football game Monday night as they arrived in this Manitoba capital for the final two days of a centennial tour rapidly turning into an endurance test.

Royal tour officials said late Monday that while the Queen may be "a little bushed," she isn't fatigued. She has shown observers an amazing ability to rebound refreshed in a tour that began July 1 at Prudoker Bay, N.W.T.

Today's itinerary includes visits to eight communities, one 60 miles away, by helicopter, car, train and boat. The Royal Family will be shuffled like a poker deck to meet a schedule described as "the worst combination of worms of the tour" by co-ordinators here.

Monday's portion of the tour looked innocent enough on paper, but it began with a military show at Shilo in which the platform on which the Royal Family sat was nearly blown away by a helicopter.

Wearying humidity and thunderbowers left a wrung-out look by the time they arrived here after visits to Portage la Prairie, a city of 35,000 and Benard, a Hutterite commune where girls in middle-length dresses and identical polka-dot kerchiefs peeped over the fences of their traditions and admired Charles.

The amazing crowds lined the streets as the Queen and Philip, in one convertible, and Charles and Anne, in another, stood and waved to cheers and whistles.

They were taken from St. James station to Winnipeg Stadium for an exhibition Canadian Football League game between Blue Bombers and Saskatchewan Roughriders, giving 19,400 fans the best half-time show they'll have this season as they rode onto the field in the convertibles to take seats in the royal box.

About 1,000 members of the Royal Canadian legion were on the field for the arrival. The legion is establishing three scholarship funds, in honor of the visit.

The visitors watched the third quarter only and the Queen told Jack Willis, Winnipeg metropolitan chairman, she found the game exciting.

When defensive players smeared a ball carrier, she remarked, according to Mr. Willis: "They have killed him."

The big thrill of the day came, however, at Shilo, a military camp 190 miles west of here. A turbulent squal hit the camp an hour before the Queen's arrival, drenching everyone. Some 800 army cadets were tossed into trucks, given a shower and fed hot chocolate after being nearly drowned before shelter was found.

When the Royal Family arrived, it was raining and thunder boomed in the distance. But the show went on.

Eighteen parachutists, dropped from 10,000 feet, came gracefully through the clouds in colorful new clothes.

School Population Increase Is Expected in Picton Area

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Education director John McNeil expects a boost in Prince Edward County's school population this year following unrelated developments at the site of the former Camp Picton. Said recently by the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation to the Ontario government, a large area of the military base anchoring the acreage purchased by Precedent Alberich Ltd., supposedly will be converted into a hospital for the emotionally handicapped and mentally ill.

Since a large staff will be required to care for patients, Mr. McNeil says there is no reason why children could increase the present student population by about 400 pupils. He noted during last night's meeting of the Prince Edward County board of education that he does not foresee a reopening of the elementary school at Glen Heights within the next school year.

Becoming pupils, in his opinion, will "trickle" into the county at several different grade levels. Mr. McNeil observed it would seem best to send them to Queen Elizabeth School, Picton, and Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Bloomfield.

The expected arrival of these students prompted Mr. McNeil to ask the board to study its transportation and school allocation, for approximately 48 children residing at Glen Ree Road. It was recommended that those former Precedent pupils attend North Marysburg Centennial school next term. Mr. McNeil "foresees no difficulty in making this change," said the education director. He noted the student-teacher ratio at North Marysburg school is now 20 to 1 and would be increased to approximately 23 to 1 following the suggested change. Remarked Mr. McNeil, "The board allocates students within the county where accommodations best suit the situation."

The second reason for recommending that Glenora Rd. students attend North Marysburg school involves time and distance. Trustees feel it would be more practical to transport buses of pupils to North Marysburg School rather than to Prince Edward Heights Bloomfield because a much shorter bus ride is involved.

Last night, board members voted to invite the parents of the children to be affected to attend next month's board meeting when trustees will welcome their opinions and suggestions.

The Prince Edward County board of education has requested control of the 12-room elementary school at Picton Heights but their request is not yet confirmed.

City Hall Clock Back on the Beam

City Hall clock is again striking the hours in appointed time, after its fifth or sixth malfunction this year.

After it began sounding the hours erratically early last week, some citizens complained that the old tower timepiece might have been struck by lightning in the severe storm of July 3.

But human factors, with an assist from downtown's festered population, were solely responsible for the clock's behavior — this time, as on the four similar occasions since Jan. 1.

Richard Hatch, personnel and purchasing agent at city hall, said the clock occasionally runs down and "gets a little bit of the wrong treatment". This accounted for the trouble last week.

But Gerald O'Connor, who has the contract to repair and service the clock, says it works perfectly if wound regularly.

"If it runs down while the strike mechanism is still working, the count of its strikes doesn't agree with the time on the face," says Mr. O'Connor.

The clock has to be wound once a week to elevate the big weights that activate the mechanism. When it gets wound down, Mr. O'Connor and his horologist must start the clock again.

Mr. O'Connor, who got the old timepiece ticking perfectly again a few years ago after a period of neglect, is disturbed about its treatment.

"Windows in the tower are broken and the hatch covers between the floor levels left off, allowing the pigeon hall pigeons to roost in their old haunts — the room behind the four clock faces on the tower.

"This plays hob with the striking mechanism," says Mr. O'Connor, who was instrumental in seeking that the clock's works were sealed off from pigeons and locked tight against intruders after his restoration was completed.

He reports that hands have been broken off the "time dial" beside the mechanism. It tells repairmen in the tower room the time recorded on the dial faces above.

Now, in resetting the clock after it has wound down, the horologist must race down the tower steps and into the street to see what time is being recorded on the dials.

The human factor that has resulted in the clock's malfunction has been interpreted by the public as a defect in the mechanism itself.

But Mr. O'Connor says the tower clock, now lacking only a year or two of its 100th birthday, is a fine example of the last of the historic European tower clocks made until the 20th century and "is good for another three or four hundred years if it's properly cared for."

Fish Fewer, Taste Worse

Most fishermen can't, and are sinking their lines in district lakes instead of the bay. Fish from Moira, East, West and Consecon Lakes are more palatable to local fishermen.

The decrease in sports fishing in the Bay of Quinte has been a marked trend in recent years, according to marina and sports shop operators in the district.

A spokesman for Bob's Sport's Shop on South Front St. said today most fishermen buying bait there are heading north or to Prince Edward county lakes to do their fishing.

The same observation has been recorded in Napanee and Deseronto.

But there is nothing barmful about bay fish ,says a biologist for the department of lands and forests research station at Glenora.

Dr. Donald Hurley says there are no industries in the area that could produce the mercury pollution to affect the fish, as is the case in St. Clair River area.

"We have sent perch and smelt samples from these waters to Winnipeg for analysis, but we don't expect anything to come of it," he added.

Dr. Hurley says the decline in the fish population could not be entirely based on pollution.

"Twenty to twenty-five per cent is due to over-fishing. The remainder is due to pollution, or an elimination of the amount of phosphorus and nitrates in the water," he said.

The phosphorus and nitrate salts in the water nourish algae and throw both the amount of algae in the water and their types out of balance.

This results in an imbalance in the normal cycle of life in fresh waters. In a "normal" body of water, the algae are food for plankton. The plankton is eaten by small fish, which in turn are eaten by larger fish. The change in the amount and type of algae has choked out the plankton, upset the normal cycle and resulted in fewer big fish to swallow the fisherman's hook.

This morning J. R. Coleman of the Glenora station blamed three factors for the decline in the Bay of Quinte's importance as a sport's fishing area.

Increased nutrient pollution, built up over a period of years has increased the algae problem, he said.

But heated effluent pumped into the bay from industries and municipalities has raised the water temperature, controlled the algae growth and adversely affected the fish.

Insecticides, like the now-banned DDT, have also played a part, by affecting the reproductive cycle of the fish.

Fiscal Agents To Be Discussed

For the past ten years, the city of Belleville has sold debentures to cover expenditures on local improvements.

City council will vote Wednesday on the appointment of fiscal agents to handle the proposed $600,000 in debentures.

Before projects are undertaken by municipalities, the OMB must give approval to the estimated costs. Following the completion of the construction, debentures for the unpaid amount are presented for approval.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds explained that the amount involved for 1970 includes various city road improvements, phase one of the Dundas Street extension and overpass, and other local improvements.

"Although sold on the final costs, the debentures often amount to less than the estimates," he said.

"They are only sold after the work is completed."

Police Take Wings

OPP Constable Harold Johnston and pilot Bill Dickey check last minute details before flying out of Belleville airport for traffic patrol. More than 300 charges have been laid against errant drivers since mid-May when Quinte highways came under wing of aircraft surveillance.

Air Patrol Effective In Curbing Speeders

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Speeding has always been for the birds.

Now, in the Quinte district, that's where they've put its detection — up there among the birds.

The result is an expected decline in dirty driving habits — with a consequent reduction in the area's accident rate.

Since mid-May, provincial police have had traffic on Quinte highways under aircraft surveillance.

Flying seven days a week — weather permitting — officers from Belleville OPP district headquarters have been keeping an aerial eye on errant drivers.

To the end of June their observations had resulted in 345 charges being laid, 127 drivers being warned.

The results may be intangible, confesses Insp. James Allen of OPP traffic headquarters in Toronto, visiting Belleville airport yesterday before the daily patrol took off.

But studies show a marked decrease in total accident rates in areas covered by OPP aircraft.

Statistics don't reveal the total impact of the patrols, says the inspector.

Possible presence of a police aircraft overhead also has a psychological effect when drivers read roadside signs cautioning that a highway is under survey from the air. Drivers are never sure when they're being watched.

Territory under the wing of the Belleville air patrol ranges beyond the Quinte borders — from Gananoque to Lindsay.

The new four-seater Cessna 172 is under contract from the Prince Edward Flying Club.

Flown by PEFC instructor-pilot Bill Dickey, of Napanee, the patrol is manned by two Belleville OPP constables. They are one of six such air patrols flown in the populous regions of Ontario.

Surveillance methods are fairly simple.

Highways under aerial surveillance are painted with T-bars a quarter-mile apart.

Car speeds are clocked by stopwatch between the markers and information on errant drivers relayed to an interceptor provincial police cruiser.

The link between ground and air groups is made by small one - way transmitter. The air observer furnishes car descriptions to the ground interceptor, together with rates of speed and details of the traffic ticket to be written against the drivers.

The system has been upheld in the courts despite legal contests.

While provincial police readily admit margins of error, both mechanical and man-made, in clocking speeders from the air, their compound result have never yet proved fatal to a charge in court, says Insp. Allen.

Last year, some 18,000 charges were laid — 98 per cent either drawing pleas of guilty or being heard in absentia, he notes.

All highways in the Quinte area now are under air patrol — with the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway the single exception.

Reason is the accident rate.

The freeway has a rating of 1.6 accidents per million miles. This compares with 7.4 accidents per million miles for Highway 2.

However, the inspector says, police may have to begin air patrols on the freeway some time in the future. Representations to that end are coming in at headquarters from district OPP superintendents.

Like any police facility, the aircraft is not confined strictly to traffic enforcement.

Its potential for observation — whether involving missing persons or fugitives — is an invaluable addition to local police work.

But the patrol is still basically a new — and fleet — workhorse in the attempt to curb traffic speeds in a province that has more than 2,000,000 licensed drivers.

Each summer the volume is boosted by anywhere up to 8,000,000 automobiles driven by tourists, says the inspector.

While high speed may not necessarily cause a mishap, it can seriously compound its consequences.

"We do think with speeds controlled, we have a better chance of reducing the fatality rate," he says.

United Appeal Campaign Dates Are Approved

The Belleville Financial Appeals Review Board has approved the dates for the 1970 United Appeal Campaign. It will run from September 28 to October 16, inclusive.

Campaign objective for 1970's appeal is $138,600, an increase of 8 per cent over the total received in 1969.

The United Appeal took in more than $128,000 in the operation of the 14 participating agencies.

This year's objective amounts to a ten per cent increase over the total received in 1969.

The Financial Appeals Board, a co-operative venture of the Chamber of Commerce, City Council, Quinte District Labor Council and United Community Services, has also approved tag days for this fall in support of the 1970 Belleville Santa Claus Parade. The parade tag days will be November 13 and 14.

The Financial Appeals Board reviews all financial appeals affecting the citizens of Belleville except those conducted by religious organizations, lodges and clubs.

Odd Job Centre Open for Teens

Belleville's teenagers may have trouble getting continuous summer employment but there is one alternative, at least.

It is Opus Teens, a new service run by teenagers for teenagers, to try and provide as many young people as possible with odd jobs.

Opus Teens is based at the Belleville Family YMCA and volunteers are there daily to answer phone calls from those who want to hire a student for a few hours or days as well as calls from young people who want to register for possible employment.

Young people enrolled in the self - help service are at the Y building daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. to answer calls.

Opus Teens specializes in small jobs like lawn - mowing, gardening, and baby - sitting. All teenagers in the city may enroll.

All Chic at Unique Boutique

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A band of busy - fingered young people is breaking new business ground in Belleville.

Co-operation is a keystone the talents of about 100 high school girls, aided and encouraged by a variety of adult resources and individuals.

The colorful results are on display — and sale — in an idical Victoria Avenue location in the city's midtown area.

In its way, the venture is not without its social significance. For those involved, its timing is strategic.

It comes during a summer when jobs are hard to find, when traditional positions are waning in popularity and new directions for involvement are being sought by young people — in Belleville, as elsewhere.

The venture, perhaps the only one of his kind in Canada, first showed signs of becoming a reality before city schools closed for the summer, explains Mrs. Enid of a Belleville boutique.

It had been discussed among her own daughters and other interested adults.

"The kids were fascinated by a similar boutique which has been successfully operating in Mill Valley, California, for about three years," Mrs. Neale says.

Basically, the plan of operation calls for young people to create their own boutique-style products and place them on sale in a specific location.

It's a market that offers wide latitude for handicraft — from dresses to dolls to plastic and paper flowers.

The customer also benefits, since the creations are original and usually one of a kind. The products can be custom-designed on individual demand.

A boost to organizing the project came when Anne McCorquodale, who works summers at the Canada Manpower student employment centre, carried the scheme to high officials in economics teachers.

Around 100 girls signed up as participants and — with school out — began applying their skills in a corner of the Horse's Neck Boutique — to allot space to the student co-op. However, with Mrs. Neale moving outside Belleville, this became impossible.

Mrs. Vivian Jewell, operator of the Jewell Rosemary Salon and its adjacent La Boutique premises, came to the rescue. She made premises available to the students — and the project has proceeded on schedule.

The young co-operators are enthused about the venture, says Mrs. Neale.

It offers a sophisticated challenge to their creativity while bolding out prospects of acquiring ready cash.

"It's also a project that can carry on right through the school year," notes Mrs. Neale.

Little Change Seen in Thurlow

This is the first of a series of articles on the clerks of the five townships surrounding Belleville. With more industry and more people coming to are area, what is the effect on their jobs and their communities? How is the old system working under the new circumstances? What lies ahead? Clerks and township to be covered are Thurlow, Sidney, Tyendinaga, Murray and Ameliasburg.

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

For Claire Horton, new clerk-treasurer of Thurlow Township, there is nowhere to look when looking backward. There is only looking forward.

Mr. Horton is unique among most clerk-treasurer in the townships surrounding Belleville.

His is a new position in two ways. He has never been clerk of Thurlow and he has never been the clerk of any other municipality.

Mr. Horton took over the job of clerk-treasurer in Thurlow when E. M. DaCe, who had held the position for several years, left the township to become part of the administration in Belleville.

His only experience in any kind of municipal work came a number of years ago when he held a position of the school board. His inexperience and his takeover from competent Mr. Dafoe make his chore a tough one.

But Mr. Horton feels he can master any problems he might have with a little time. He will soon have six months' service under his belt but he feels he will be more secure in his responsibility when he has another six months' work completed.

"You have to take awhile to think about things before you can formulate any philosophy of municipal government," Mr. Horton said. "Probably six months from now I'll see some changes."

Mr. Horton, who has lived his entire life in Thurlow Township, is a believer in personal contact in municipal life, but can understand the modern trend toward impersonal government.

"There's a need for personal contact. I can see problems with the large assessment office for example," he said.

"The trend is to be more impersonal, but the majority don't accept the county school boards," he added.

He feels that once people become more educated in the affairs of government, they will more readily accept larger units of administration such as the county school boards.

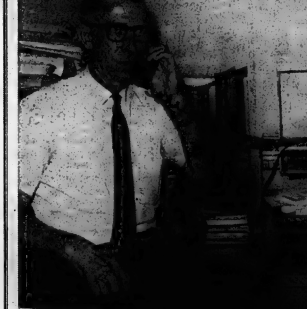
As an example he quoted the different tax payment deadline of June 30 this year and the taxpayers' complaints.

"They forget that they have obtained six months of services for which they haven't yet paid."

Looking ahead in the affairs of Thurlow Township, Mr. Horton doesn't see that much change.

"Other than regional government, I don't see a great increase in population." he said. "I wouldn't think there would be much more industrial expansion in the township. I can't see any big boom."

Mr. Horton believes that every municipality gets its share of an industrial boom even though the industrial expansion might not occur directly within its boundaries.



The changes in people have not been felt. "People are still the same in Thurlow as far as the municipality is concerned."

There's only on bee in Mr. Horton's bonnet as far as changes being necessary in Thurlow are concerned. He has been active in minor sports since his son, Duane became involved 12 years ago.

"The township lacks a recreation committee. We have all types of minor sports, but we have to travel all over to be in a league."

From this desire for more recreation, Mr. Horton has devised a personal philosophy of involvement where youth is concerned.

He is a believer in the family unit spending time together. "The majority of the general public doesn't support minor sports. Buy bonds and cube some into this. Parents don't seem to want to spend time with young people."

Bishop's Job Changes With Society He Serves

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

A Bishop today faces new problems not experienced by one holding the office in an earlier time and Bishop Jack Creegan of the Diocese of Ontario related some of them in an address to Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

The modern generation, he said, is faced with making choices and decisions unknown in his day. There were not the same temptations then as there are today and he cited drugs as an example. The church's responsibility was to help boys and girls to make the right choices and decisions.

Discipline among churchmen is another concern of the Bishop and he mentioned such things as a minister obtaining books and not paying for them immediately, not out of dishonesty but simply because of lack of funds and with the hope he would be able to pay later.

As chief liturgical officer, the Bishop is also overseer of the form of the service.

"We have some young men — and some not so young — who have ideas on what they should do and they go ahead and do it without consulting the Bishop, he said.

"They are trying all sorts of things: there are so many who say the church is not as revelant as it used to be and you have to sit down and talk with them."

Then there is the matter of personal appearance, and the Bishop told of meeting "one of our priests and he was sprouting this glorious beard." He had also seen a picture in a church magazine of one of his former curates, similarly bearded.

Had the curate still been with him, the Bishop said he would not have permitted it, adding: "I do not know whether one finds fault with this sort of thing . . . but one wonders."

And what about public integrity? Bishop Creegan, who was rector of Christ Church in Belleville for 12 years, asked, "How many people can we really believe today. How many people do we to tell us things that are not absolutely true?"

The Bancroft native said that once while curling — an unlikely spot for a serious discussion — he had been asked what was his attitude toward being a Bishop, and he replied that one did not "aspire" to the position but rather it was a matter of being called.

"One must be called in some way," he said.

Tourist Booklet To Be Reprinted

TWEED (Special) — The Tweed Chamber of Commerce will republish the annual folder describing the Tweed area, as well as the Land O'Lakes and the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Regions, the directors decided at their monthly meeting.

At one time it was not thought possible to publish the leaflet this season because of a lack of funds, the result of poor financial returns from the Tweed Winter Carnival (1969-70). The response to the membership campaign was quite good, however, so the directors decided to take a chance on finding sufficient funds to pay for 5,000 leaflets for free distribution. Already several requests for copies of the leaflet have been received from other information booths in Ontario. It was felt that these requests should be filled as quickly as possible.

The directors were told the number of visitors at the Provincial Parks in the district was quite encouraging. At noon, July 4, Outlet Provincial Park, was full. Black Lake Provincial Park, seven-eighths full and Bon Echo Provincial Park, three-quarters full.

The Department of Lands and Forests is providing the information booth with set angling report on Tuesday of each week. A summary of lists report is published in local newspapers, a few days later. Last week, fishing was reported "good", in most areas.

To date, weather conditions have not been as good as many had hoped for this time of year. Cyclonic, violent, brief thunderstorms, high variable winds and heavy rainfalls marked the month of June.

Five forest fires occurred, one each in Cashel, Ashby, Grimsthorpe, Elzevir and Abonsetton townships, along with numerous house and barn fires due to lightning. In the Tweed area alone there were five electrical storms of which two were very violent.

Rainfall for June 1970 at Tweed was 3.00 inches, from mal rainfall for June is 2.64 inches.

The directors discussed plans for the 1971 Winter Carnival which will be reviewed before definite plans are made for the program. The dates will definitely be February 13 and 14, 1971.

Man's Body Identified

The body of a man found on a disused road in Sidney township has been identified as a Trenton airman.

Provincial police at Belleville said Opl. Thomas was married and the father of seven children. He had served 21 years with the armed forces.

Opl. Joy's body was found by two men Sunday morning in his car on an old road off Sidney township's fourth concession.

Police say the body had been in the automobile several days and they did not suspect foul play.

The body was sent to Toronto yesterday for police laboratory tests.

Management Group Changes Approach

The 4,000 - member Canadian Management Association has taken a new tack for its future development.

Victor Frendergast, national president of the association explains in a CIMA press release that the organization has shed "the restrictive label of industry by renaming the organization and welcoming into its membership all Canadian management".

The management association will now be known as the Canadian Institute of Management. Decision on the name change and policy reorganization was made at the CIMA convention in Winnipeg at the end of June.

Quinte branch president, D. F. Crowe and regional vice-president A. R. Barichello attended the annual meeting.

The Quinte branch of the CIMA sponsors an upgrading course for management personnel leading to a certificate in industrial management.

The four - year course is in year three now but a new program will begin in September under the auspices of the local branch of the regional association. Accent of the course, taught at Belleville Collegiate, will be broadened to serve all those at the management level.

Fire Protection Plan Accepted

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Members of the Prince Edward County board of education have voted to accept an offer of fire protection for certain schools forwarded by the Bloomfield - Hallowell mutual aid fire committee. Terms of the fire protection agreement provide an annual stand - by fee of $180 per school and $12 for each fire-fighter working in the first four hours of any call. The men will receive $2 an hour for additional time.

One of the "certain schools" protected under this agreement is Sophiasburg Central School, Rth 2, Picton. Also eligible for protection, if necessary, is Athol Central School. School trustees recalled that Athol has completed negotiations with the Picton fire department for fire services but were unsure of the ratification date of their agreement.

It was agreed that business administrator E. A. Short should consult Athol reeve Keith Brimmond in regard to this date. If Athol school is now unprotected it will receive full benefit of the board's agreement with the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department until ratification of the Picton - Athol fire services plan.

Chairman of the Prince Edward board of education, Edward Rutter, commented that the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department reluctantly offered its services out of Bloomfield since it was not trying to sell fire protection. The suggested standby charge and firefighters fees were termed "very reasonable" by several trustees.

Trustees generally agreed that the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department's offer department's offer represented a generous gesture to safeguard county schools.

New Constable Joins OPP, Madoc

Constable Creelman came to Madoc as a new recruit after being employed in Ottawa at the LCBO. He was born in Nova Scotia and states that Madoc has already grown on him. Now the detachment has 21 officers on staff and two girls in the office.

Fire Hall Rental Is Negotiated

A representative from Lafferty - Smith Express Lines Ltd. visited Sidney Township Council last evening to clear up the rental situation involving the township's fire hall.

The hall, which has been completely finished since early spring, was built on Lafferty-Smith land by the company for rental to the township.

Last evening, a special fee back to July 1, 1970 of $1,500 was negotiated, with the regular monthly rental of $225 set down from that date.

The Sidney Township fire hall on the 3rd Concession Highway not only houses the equipment but is used for frequent training evenings.

REAL ESTATE

HOMES ARE FOR CHILDREN

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

In every discussion of the advantages of renting an apartment or owning your own home, the most important of all reasons has little to do with money.

That reason is children. There was never a child born since time began who was not better off in a house.

The reason is that while parents live in the house, the child lives in the whole community with its back yards, minimum traffic, greater open space and play facilities. And then the house, too, with its basement and usual recreation room is a haven for children on rainy days when an apartment feels the pressure of overcrowding.

But aside from that, how about the "economics" of the difference in the two modes of living? Before inflation changed the arithmetic, a convincing argument could be made for the point of view that putting the down payment out at interest over the years instead of buying will leave you slightly ahead financially.

But in our present mode of living with pensions and deferment bought, most people will not do that. Buying your own home then becomes a compulsory savings plan.

You can make a start today by talking to an experienced Realtor.

More on Inflation

What is the basic truth about inflation? Former Bank of Canada governor James Coyne answered the question long ago — more than a decade ago when he was at odds with the fiscal policies of the Diefenbaker government and specifically with then Finance Minister Fleming.

Canadians, he said, "are living grandly beyond their means." Prime Minister Trudeau is trying to say the same thing, only he does so in much more low-key fashion. It is as author Bruce Hutchison put it in a recent article, "the (Mr. Trudeau) tells the automobile workers, for instance, that if labor unions win a wage increase of 30 per cent while the economy grows by five per cent, then somebody is going to suffer and it is not going to be you."

"Exactly," continues Mr. Hutchison who is editorial director of The Vancouver Sun. "In his statement the whole level of future prosperity terrifying situation is contained. We can produce only so many goods in Canada. If one group gets more of them the rest get less and we call the process inflation without bothering to understand the complicated ins and outs of it."

Here is one of those "ins and outs," as a dietetic and home economics conference learned in Toronto recently. In a word it is called "debt." More than a million Canadians, the conference was told, have trouble paying back what they owe.

Mrs. Louise Heslop of the University of Guelph told delegates that each of 38 families interviewed in a survey on indebtedness knew what a credit card was, and what a finance company was for, but they were not sure of the meaning of garnisheeing and wage assignment.

Thus we have people getting into debt because they are taken in by the myth of easily available money with which to pay off bills.

There are other facets to the inflation thing. Today's columnist from Ottawa by Richard Jackson affords further insight into government's measures in this regard — and further proof, regretably, that government does not always deliver the goods.

As for the money supply, it may be asked if Ottawa has not overlooked one area — salaries? Supposing cabinet ministers and the Prime Minister too, were to have $1,000 chopped off their paycheck. Would they miss it . . . would they not still get along pretty nicely, and the money saved might go into hospital development and into establishing medical facilities in remote areas. But alas, with the MPs seeking more than their present level of $18,000, and with unions seeking more for their people, such a proposal is not likely to gain much favor.

So what remains? Inflation of course.

A Public Concern

Here are some startling facts about suicide — from Dr. Herbert C. Modlin, director of prevention psychiatry at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan. — which is a part of an era when almost no subject is taboo doctors and the public generally avoid talk about what in the United States is the tenth leading cause of death.

Health Service records, says Dr. Modlin, show there are 22,000 suicides a year annually in the U.S., but the figure "is probably closer to 50,000."

Noting that there are an estimated 400,000 suicide attempts a year, Dr. Modlin (he was speaking at a medical association convention in Chicago), made one study found that a third of the suicide victims visited a physician on the day they killed themselves, and it is estimated that three-quarters saw a doctor within four months of the day on which they killed themselves.

The psychiatrist, urging more utilization by general practitioners of community and family resources, said doctors are often uncomfortable in the presence of a suicidal patient and often fail to provide the help which could save his life. That — and a shortage of psychiatrists, he said, are contributory factors.

He drew attention to another phenomenon of the age, that "many maiming and lethal accidents, such as one-occupant, one-car crashes are not nearly so accidental as they may seem, and some should probably augment the known statistics on suicides and suicidal attempts."

The whole community of course could help people who are in such desperate straits. There is a lot more to the lives of everyone to have greater consideration for one another, man. Ordinary courtesy and display of interest can work wonders. It is because we are so often lacking in these elementary qualities that so many are burdened by unnecessary fear and anxiety.

In this context we commend the work of the Canadian Mental Health Association which has been circulating interesting literature on its work and reminding us that public contributions as ever are needed to maintain this vital work.

Remember PM's 'Axe for 25,000' Speech

Civil Service Complement Down by A Mere 301

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Remember just a year ago when Prime Minister Trudeau, presenting his austerity program, promised that his Government would lead the way?

Yes sir, after he and his management men were finished streamlining the federal Civil Service, nobody would be able to say the Government staff had run to fat.

Sure, former Prime Minister Pearson, always the big spender, had hired at a rate of 1,000 new civil servants each month, for more than a year during the Bureaucracy.

And yes, the federal payroll in recent years had been soaring — by an average annual $200,000,000.

But now, swore Mr. Trudeau, that would be the end of this kind of thing.

It was to be a whole new era.

And to set an example in economy and demonstrate for the whole nation to see how spending — or overspending — could be checked, the Prime Minister pledged a 25,000-job reduction in the Civil Service.

He would pull all the comfortable it costly stuffing out of the federal feather-bed. It shaped up as a mass layoff, and loud were the laments heard in the land.

Well, what do you know — at the end of the cut - staff - size - test "cost" year, 201 civil servants actually have been lopped from the payroll. And 22 of these already have been re-hired.

There's no other way to work out the arithmetic than that the Prime Minister's project-ed 25,000-job federal staff cut has been reduced to that 201 minus 22 for a total payroll shrinkage of 179.

Some saving!!

The Public Service Commission, which administers the Government staff, has revealed the matic of how 25,000 became 179.

. . . Some 10,000 of those 25,000 - to - be - wiped - out jobs were "vacant positions," open and waiting for would-be civil servants to fill. The Prime Minister "froze" those vacancies which remained unfilled — but who among the taxpayers missed the 10,000 who weren't hired, or detects any difference in the level of Government services? Nobody!

(Which raises the question as to whether those 10,000 who have not been hired to fill those vacant positions were actually needed in the first place.)

. . . The filling of another 9,000 new positions in the employ - building departments requested be created was turned down flatly. And again, what difference has it made — except to make people wonder what made the Civil Service mandarins think they needed all that extra staff?

. . . Most of the remaining cutback of 6,000 jobs was engineered by what the Civil Service calls "normal attrition" through resignation, retirements and deaths.

Dismissals, part of "normal attrition" from almost any staff except, of course, the Government's, were negligible, because civil servants so seldom are fired, no matter what.

It is always easier to channel unwanted and unnecessary civil servants into quiet backwaters than to go through the almost interminable appeals process.

When all the clever calculations of the cutbacks on the filled jobs were done, 961 civil servants were declared "surplus" to departmental staff requirements.

But of those 961 who were slated for the sack because even their own departments demanded they be weeded out, all but the 201 escaped.

Here is how:

Their departmental bosses and sectional supervisors transferred 226 to other jobs in the same department.

Another 342 were re-assigned by the Public Service Commission to newly-created departments.

Resignation and retirement accounted for 105.

Add them up, 226 plus 342 plus 105 plus 83 equals 645.

Subtract those 645 from that 961 surplus and you get the 201 who had to go. And, of course, the 22 who have been re-hired.

Again simple arithmetic — the way the Civil Service works it out.

Prime Minister's projected 25,000 to 179.

There was gone onto a one-year "preferred hiring list," giving them first crack at job openings.

Which seems to prove that if you are clever enough with figures and do a big brain-washing job of public relations, you can make some people believe, as did the Prime Minister, that 25,000 jobs are to be cut when in fact you actually temporarily laying off only 179.

It does something for federal Government credibility, does it not?

What makes it all the more ludicrous is that despite all the prime ministerial promises of cutting back on staff costs, the federal payroll this year is up about $700 million from last year's $7,500,000,000 — those are billions — to $2,700,000,000.

That's not all, though.

Civil Service staff "operational costs," as they are called — travel expenses, isolation pay, foreign service allowances, and such things as boot bonuses for your favorite postman — are up $52,000,000, from last year's $555 million to $577 million.

Add it all up, payroll plus various allowances, and the total bill is up $752 million, from $7,025,000,000 to $7,777,000,000.

Some cutback. Some economy.

Belleville's Scenic Charms

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A recent issue of your paper contained editorial regard-ing the lovely view of the County Court House and green lawns, and suggested that perhaps some people might like to write about their favorite spots in Belleville.

For the 'most spectacular view in the city I think the scene from top of the hill entering the Bay Bridge road and looking down on the harbor and the expanse of blue waters of our lovely Bay of Quinte is hard to beat.

For the most tranquil view I prefer sitting in Riverside Park and gazing at the sunshine on the waters of the Moira River and into the dark green of the woods across the river. When alone this is an ideal place to meditate.

Of course the Rose Garden in Corby Park is a dream and the Parks Committee deserves a great deal of praise for the work that they have done on our parks and for the flower beds just north of the College Street bridge. As the poet said "A thing of Beauty is a joy forever".

When talking to a lady in a nursing home I was told one that her husband retired in Ottawa and they came and looked at Belleville and decided to live here, not knowing a soul, and added "We love it here". I thought your readers would appreciate hearing this.

Thanking you for the space in your paper, which we couldn't do without.

A Newspaper's Rationale

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

For many years, The Globe and Mail — "Canada's National Newspaper" — appears to have been waging a subtle, clever campaign for a communist take-over of South East Asia.

A recent lead editorial, "Enemies by Tradition" (July 6) is an exploitation of the differences of the defenders designed to divide and conquer, and serve's psychological resistance to further brutal slaughter of the peoples of this region by the well-sponsored North Vietnam and Viet Cong invaders.

Obviously the Globe and Mail's hypocritically breathed slogan "The subject who is truly loyal to the Chief Magistrate of his country does not submit to arbitrary measures" is not meant to apply to the South Vietnamese, Indonesians, Cambodians, Thailanders and Filipinos on the road to India, who do not share the Globe and Mail's enthusiasm for the communists' juggernaut now bringing death and slavery to an ever-expanding area.

There can be no stronger confirmation of the Communist game now being played in South East Asia than The Globe and Mail's denial of its validity.

Troublemakers in Minority

Youth, Drugs and the Community

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Reading Mr. Hockley's letter concerning the decision to reject the cultural workers, the Mayor and Council could not do otherwise. They are intelligent, responsible people and could see the possible results that could happen in Belleville. It has been done in other cities, by violence and it has come too big a risk to take.

There is a relatively teenage minority group which would like to turn the city upside down. The police are able to keep control of local disturbances, but the magnitude of a festival presents many problems that could not be taken care of in a city this size.

If each individual became responsible to him or herself for their own conduct, festivals for peace would not be needed.

To the minority group who are causing drug trouble in Belleville, I say, get smart to your own foolishness and stupidity. It is you who buy drugs and keep the pushers in pocket money. If they were intelligent you would see what they are doing to you, and we couldn't care less for you and up...Are you proud in the role you are playing as a group of Canadian citizens? We older citizens want to pass our city on to responsible people when we are gone.

The Drop - in - Centre, was created by a group of people in good faith to give the teenagers who needed a place to gather for supposedly informative discussions and recreation. What happened? A group started taking in alcohol and drugs, until it reached such proportions it was finally closed down. No one seemed able to cope with it. Another try was made with a person who are interested in the welfare of youth and they did their best to clean up the situation by having the Second Stage supervised. All went well for a while until the supervisor left as he was opposed by the teenagers for his discipline.

Grade 12 Student Speaks Out

How to Be an Honors Student You Just Work—That's How!

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was rather amused by Mrs. Ryckman's letter to "Deterioration of School Standards" reprinted from The Hamilton Spectator.

She seems to have the impression that students are "lax," "inaccurate," and not subject to "pressure". I would like to attack her opinions in argument.

I am an honors student and I might say, I have not got that average by sitting and twiddling my thumbs. Everyone has it been since she attended school! If she went back, she would probably have a nervous breakdown. There is pressure in the class. If it isn't three term tests on one day, it is a 1,200 - word essay to be handed in. So doesn't have half the story, I would be even to brave as to say that parents think we are in their old school system.

Who makes failure a dirty word? Parents, and society, that is who. Get your education or you won't get a job! FAILURE is a dirty word. Teachers cannot be expected to be dedicated when they are faced with over 100 individuals a day. They want to see you pass, but can't be expected to watch you like a private tutor.

Commercial standards at the end of Grade 13 are higher than what is expected in some offices for stenographers. My marks alone are not indiced by drugs or rebellion, but I simply want to be the very best I can be."— Mrs. Ryckman. find out about the school situation before you write such a rash statement.

Nine Persons Drown When Freighter Sinks

went down increasing pressure blew off two hatches.

"As we hit the water everything and everyone was sucked under with the ship."

Mr. Gendon said the crew members in the water grabbed anything that was floating "and right of us got together and tied together a sort of raft." He estimated they floated three or four miles downstream in the hour before they were picked up.

Third engineer Scott said: "I thought I had had it. First I was sucked down, then the hatch blew and I shot up into the air.

"All I could see was the sky before I came down again and went under with the suction from the ship. When I saw the sky a second time I thought how lucky I was."

The ship sank about a mile off Crysler Park marina. Marina owner Leroy Hamilton said the vessel is outside the marked seaway channel.

Captain Jack Stowe, chief marine officer for the seaway authority in Cornwall, said the 1,500-foot-wide channel is well marked, but there are hazards. The shoal is marked on charts.

He said the sinking is the first in the restricted lanes and canals of the seaway's international section between Montreal and Lake Ontario.

Sgt.-Maj. Legate said the captain's body was recovered from the wheelhouse. Six divers were searching the wreck, with more being flown by helicopter from Belleville.

The divers could stay down only 28 minutes at a time because they were working more than 60 feet below the surface, Sgt.-Maj. Legate said.

The sinking was first reported to police by Mrs. Walter Wells, whose husband owns a motel near the marina.

"It was a great boom which woke me up," she said. "Then we began to hear people shouting 'Help, help.' "

Queen

and three Buffalo transports dropped 350 men of the Canadian Airborne Regiment on the wet field from 1,200 feet.

The royal visitors were seated on a low platform, with Supply Minister James Richardson and Col. R.G. Therriault, the regiment commander, when a powerful CH113 helicopter stationed itself about 30 feet in front of the platform and 50 feet in the air.

The helicopter then reared to allow 18 men to slide to the ground in a demonstration of rappelling, a technique to drop men in forest or jungle areas.

The draft from the helicopter hit the platform, and the blue canopy above it, full force, threatening to blow it over. As the Queen clutched her hat and Princess Anne ducked behind her umbrella, mounties and soldiers grabbed the four steel poles holding the canopy, now a sail, and braced themselves to keep the platform from flying away.

Col. Therriault signaled desperately to have the copter moved, but ground communications equipment had been waterlogged by the storm and the pilot couldn't see the dais.

Officials said later the Queen was "fairly startled" by the several minutes of buffeting but that the Royal Family was laughing about it as they left Shilo.

At Portage la Prairie, stores were closed for the afternoon and crowds filled the park for the Queen's arrival. She and Charles went down one side of a duck pound walk and Philip and Anne did the other in the "short walk" that is an intimate new feature of royal tours in Canada.

The Queen later presented 10 boys and six girls with the Duke of Edinburgh's awards as Prince Philip, the Duke, beamed and shook hands with the winners.

He started the commonwealth program as a means to involve young teen-age boys and girls in hobbies, service activity and ventures such as hiking.

"Do you think you'll live?" he asked one prostrate boy, the "victim" for youths taking St. John's ambulance brigade training.

"I guess so," replied the boy.

At Brandon, a one-elevator community about 30 miles west of Winnipeg, some 4,000 Hutterites from Manitoba and Dakotas gathered to see the Royal Family.

The Hutterites live in farm colonies, sharing the produce, and abjure tobacco, liquor, radios, television, cameras, even wrist watches.

The women wear the same dress that was current when the colonies formed in Austria, dedicating themselves in strict adherence to the New Testament. The men are distinguished by suspenders, beards and powerful limbs.

Wife Writes 'How-to-do-It Book'

TORONTO (CP) — Freda Bradley is 26, attractive, married and the author of one of the wildest manuals around on how to keep hubby home at night.

The unpretentious title of her little book is How to be Sensual and Drive Him Wild which Mrs. Bradley describes as a "how-to-do book" that gets right down to the "nitty gritty."

It's a collection of tips assembled by Mrs. Bradley after six months' work including the testing of her theories in gogo nightclubs and strip joints.

The result of the field work by the Saint John, N.B., native showed her that the Canadian male likes to indulge in fantasies, even if he won't admit it.

"For example," she said, "a man may lust for, and see himself raping, a 14-year-old virgin. He doesn't really want the fantasy to become a reality, but he does want the feeling associated with it.

"So on a sensual occasion, if the woman dresses up as a 14-year-old virgin, both can play the roles to their satisfaction."

Mrs. Bradley defines sensuality as "sexual stimulation that does not necessarily lead to intercourse and which is satisfying in itself."

She admits she is not an expert, but feels she is qualified because of her studies and background based on a psychology degree from Dalhousie University in Halifax.

For five months she gathered material, then began writing the book.

But then theory itself wasn't enough.

"I wanted to test the theories—and the only sensual entertainment today is gogo dancing and stripping," said Mrs. Bradley, who then went out and did both.

The number of entertainment places and strippers testifies to the fact that "men enjoy simply watching and looking, and this can be as satisfying as sex."

That conclusion produced the following tips on sensuality in her book:

Sensual occasions require playing roles from sleazy girls to harem dancers, but these roles "are not lacking in dignity."

—Men like to feel they own the woman's body and he likes his fantasies to be backed up by reality and his woman.

—As a slave girl if you offer your man a drink, offer it on your knees and offer yourself with it.

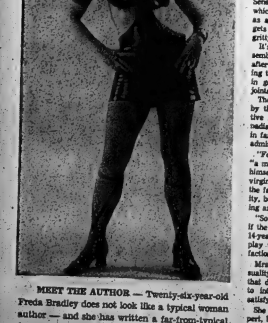
The man likes to feel he owns his woman, so include the ownership convincingly: Show vulnerability by lowering your eyes and looking at him through your eyelashes; display your vulnerable parts such as the throat and neck, but don't overdo it.

—Find out what your man wants in terms of sensuality.

—Sensuality can take the drudgery out of everyday life. People now may be ready for personal satisfaction—so do your own thing.

"For the last 200 years, except for an elite class" she says, "most people simply haven't had the time for sensuality. If people thought of sex they only thought of intercourse. Now that's changing. for men and women, the accessory of being a drudge is gone. We have time to be sensuous again."

But Mrs. Bradley makes it clear that she doesn't "confuse sensual and social occasions." Sensuality is only a part of a relationship. "It occupies five to 10 per cent of the role between two people, and the quality of any relationship depends on developing different facets of the relationship."



Mrs. Bradley, her husband Mike, a 26-year-old account executive in a public relations firm, and a friend, Michael LaPrairie, set up a partnership to publish and sell the book once it was written.

The book was sent to a printer and the first edition of 2,000 copies which came out this spring cost them $1,300 plus mailing costs.

Although they had trouble finding a distributor, the first printing of the $1.95 paperback has sold out, and a second edition is under way. "We've received over 4,000 orders" and encouraging response from distributors has been marvellous."

She has also received letter from readers who want to know how to make the costumes — "body adornments"—illustrated in the book and designed by her husband.

The Bradleys have plans for setting up a mail-order boutique, and Mrs. Bradley is thinking of writing another book.

MEET THE AUTHOR — Twenty-six-year-old Freda Bradley does not look like a typical woman author — and she has written a far-from-typical book. Her first book — How To Be Sensual and Drive Him Wild — is a collection of tips for women gathered during six months and published this spring. (CP Photo)

Ann Landers

Husband's Suggestion No Solution to Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading the letter in your column from a woman whose husband wanted her to have an affair with another man so she would have something to compare him with, I decided to write. My problem is along the same line.

N. and I have been married for seven years. I was 17 when we married and N. was 18. I was a virgin and he had been around some, but not much. Our sex life wasn't great but we both figured it would get better. Well, it hasn't gotten any better. It has gotten worse.

ANN LANDERS

N. works with a very attractive man. I'll refer to him as K.) K. is ten years older than I am. He has become a family friend and has dinner with us often. Last week N. had to go out of town. He asked K. to take me to dinner and a movie. The two of us had a nice time but I was uneasy. I sensed some high-voltage sexual electricity between us. When my husband returned, I told him in a half-kidding way that K. turned me on. Tonight he came up with a suggestion. He thinks I ought to have an affair with K. in order to learn if I am as frigid for our lousy sex life as he is. Between you and me, I am the one who needs professional help. If K. and I ring bells and hear a thousand violins, my husband needs counseling. He has promised to get it.

I prefer this letter is not put-on. He means it and so do I. We await your answer. — ON THE VERGE.

* * *

DEAR ON: Get off the verge and use your head. The problem exists between you and your husband and that's where it should be resolved. I recommend joint-counseling by a physician who is competent to deal with the problem. (Not all physicians are.) Your gynecologist would be your best bet. A husband who could harsh such a sick scheme needs help either way. I think he has a little trouble back above and below the Mason-Dixie line.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I didn't like your answer to the reader in Kitchener, Ontario worth a darn. The lady wrote to say she hated to have her woman friend's head on her during conversation. It made her nervous and she said so. Instead of giving that nice lady a sensible answer, you turned the whole thing around and made it look like she was the nutty one because she didn't like to be nudged, pawed, petted and stroked.

I'm a person who doesn't care to be touched by people during conversation and I am not crazy. When folks who talk to me start to get tactile, I take their hands off me in such a way that they know I don't like it. This cures them fast. I suppose you think I'm loony, too. — TOUCH ME NOT.

* * *

DEAR TOUCH: No, I don't think you are kooky. I think your solution is a good one. In fact, if you re-read my column you will see that this is the solution I suggested. The woman who wrote to me said she became so upset when her friend touched her that she had to leave the luncheon and go home. And I call that loony.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you prided a letter from an office worker who wanted to know what to do about a very good friend who kept borrowing cigarettes.

I have a fine solution for her. Stop smoking. Do two people a favor. — ONE WHO DID AND REJOICES DAILY.

* * *

DEAR DAILY: Great idea! Too bad it isn't as easy to do as it sounds.

Brazilian Cousin Likes Show of Affection

By DORIS CLARK

When vivacious 21-year-old Hilda came from Brazil to visit her Canadian cousins, she thinks disturbed Hilda's confided in three of her female cousins.

"I'm so fond of all of you, even after such a short time. But there's something that really bothers me. I haven't kissed any of you since I got here."

The cousins looked at each other in surprise. One of them said, "I suppose Brazilian Americans aren't kissing people."

"At home," Hilda explained, "we always kiss and embrace family members by close female friends whenever we meet and again when we part. Even if I've only been gone an hour, I always kiss my mother and sisters when I return. Here, I don't feel that I'm expressing my affection for you."

The cousins agreed that Canadians could do with a good deal more kissing and display of affection within families. When they left Hilda that day, they all hugged and kissed her.

"Oh, thank you," beamed the happy Brazilian miss. "I feel so much better now!"

And so did the Canadian girls. — Doc Turcotte.

Dear Doris: My son who is 17 is in grade 12, a good student and is taking a very big share of responsibility in our home. The only problem is that he thinks he should be in on week ends and this is a very sore problem with my husband who is a worrier by nature.

Joe never goes out during the week except to attend a drama group. On week ends he likes to go out with the gang, usually starting out for a coke. Then they watch somebody's TV. My husband is furious when he stays out until 2 a.m. because he feels he should know where he is.

Now we have laid down a rule that he can stay out until midnight if he is not after that he has to phone home. Joe says no other boy does this; he would rather not go out at all.

He expects to work this summer. He doesn't drink or smoke. What rules do you consider necessary? — Not So Happy Home.

Dear Home: At 17 some boys can ship run their own show. Others, without some chores or built-in discipline, are still babes in the woods when it comes to handling social routines like going home. They go along with the gang.

If my Jon can carry his weight and do what is right. Ask him what he thinks would be a reasonable curfew and give him a chance to prove he can abide by it. And here's a thought. — how about inviting him to bring all the boys home for a bash and hamburgers? I'll wager you have just as good a TV as the rest of them.

Dear Doris: I am in need of poetry, and do wish you would print at least one piece of poetry in your columns each week. — Mrs. R. S.

Dear Mrs. R.: Judging by my mail, there are heaps of poetry lovers in Canada. One poem a week is something to aim for, but most of them come from you, dear readers and I always need the permission of the poet too, if he still lives.

Winter Season Brings In Brand-New Look

PARIS (Reuters) — Handbags for the coming season bring in a brand-new look with giant shapes, Wild West trends, exotic suede leathers and cascades of fringe.

Super-supple pouches and satchels emphasize length and vertical lines intended to balance long hemlines.

All the bags presented at the recent Marroquinerie salon here endorse larger shapes, including the desirable bowling bag and the ever-present shoulder strap.

Colors are generally evolve from the same palette as last winter, every shade of brown from tobacco, coffee and date to deep violet and eggplant tones; plum, fuchsia, prune and red currant.

The lower-priced manufacturers are doing a tremendous volume of business this season to the detriment of the de luxe firms, proof that professional buyers acknowledge the demand for novelty and a wardrobe of handbags rather than one investment piece destined to last for years.

Belts likewise show sport styling, with two- to four-inch-wide cowboy belts studded with nailheads, eyelets and giant oval buckles in antique metal.

On a theory that rainy winter days need a bit of brightening, the classic umbrella takes a back seat in favor of new shapes angled into handkerchief points and a riot of novel patterns.

There is even a special umbrella for the journalist, with black-and-white newspaper copy printed in a patchwork effect.

Tasty Hot Rolls Fresh from the Ocean

By MARY MOORE

One of our guests said, with his mouth full, "I could make my whole supper of these rolls."

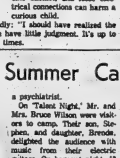
We were having a steak cookout and you would imagine the steak would take the center stage but these rolls fresh from the oven stole the show.

When you make them you will notice that the dough is soft. That is as it should be or it gives a lovely tender finish.

HOT DINNER ROLLS (18)
1 pkg. granular yeast
1 tsp. sugar (first amount)
¼ cup lukewarm water

¾ cup very hot tap water
5 tbsps. margarine
¼ cup sugar (second amount)
½ tsp. salt
3 cups (plus) unsifted all-purpose flour

In beaker bowl soak yeast and the one tsp. sugar in lukewarm water ten minutes.



Measure the hot tap water into a bowl (or use two-cup measuring cup) and add margarine, sugar (second amount) and salt in it and let cool down to lukewarm. Add to risen yeast liquid along with TWO cups of the flour and the egg and beat on low speed for five minutes, scrape down sides of bowl, cover and let rise about 2½ hours at room temperature. Beat down dough and beat in ¼ cup of the remaining flour until mixed in. Turn dough out on board floured with remaining ¼ cup flour and knead it in 10 times, adding a little more flour if needed to prevent stickiness. Shape dough into 18 2-inch balls and cut into 16 pieces. Shape into balls with well floured fingers and place on two buttered cookie sheets at least three inches apart. Let rise until at least three inches in diameter and well puffed — about two hours. Bake in moderate oeg. Fahr. about 12 to 15 minutes or until pale gold. Serve in napkin lined bun set, with butter.

These hot rolls cannot be topped. Modesty has no space in today's column.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Ninety per cent of the children injured or killed in accidents last year had these accidents in the home, according to the National Safety Council. In most cases, the potential danger should have been obvious to an alert adult.

Too many parents say sadly: "I should have realized the danger . . ." Small children have little judgment. It's up to adults to protect them at all times.

Check your house carefully and often if there are small children in it. Such items as furniture polish under the sink, sleeping pills, pain or aspirin in an unlocked medicine cabinet and loose electrical connections can harm a curious child.

Consecon Children's Summer Camp Opens

The 47th session for Consecon Children's Camp, sponsored by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington Counties, opened July 11 with attendance of 65 campers and 13 leaders and junior counselors.

The Bible study was based on the theme "Growing and Doing for Jesus." Miss Edna Grant, of Toronto, was director; Mrs. C. Mossow, Belleville, Bible study leader and treasurer; Mrs. Robert Goldie, Belleville, nurse; Miss Margaret Mitchell, Newburgh, crafts; counsellors Ginny Werden, Belleville; Loretta Mucklow, Belleville; Brenda Wilson, Hillier; Sandy Allen, Foxboro; Donna Brown, Toronto; Swim instructress Marilyn Sandford, Belleville cook, Mrs. Harold King and assistant Lois Yeomans, of Newburgh.

At the Sunday morning service, Edna Grant, who has worked in prison because of dislikes, spoke on the life of Fanny Crosby, writer of over 8,000 beloved hymns. She lived victoriously for Christ despite her blindness.

Two little Afro-Canadian campers added much to the color and harmony of the camp with their gift of song and infectious humor. Robert Goldie retired Brethren African missionary sang some choruses in the African dialect. At noon, a turkey dinner with all the trimmings, was enjoyed by the campers.

Mrs. H. Langford spoke on the life of Miss Frances Willard, originator of the WCTU. She did so much to curb the evils created by alcohol in the United States that hers was the first woman's statue to be placed in the Hall of Fame in Washington, D.C. She told of the tragic downfall of a doctor of alcoholics in Bellevue Hospital, New York City, who was picked up on skid-row by the Salvation Army in Toronto and later restored to his useful place in society as a psychiatrist.

On "Talent Night," Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wilson were visitors to camp. That night, Stephen, and daughter, Brenda, delighted the audience with music from their electric guitars. On banquet night, 13 women on the county executive, from Belleville, Picton, South Marysburgh and Napanee attended camp and heard a report given by Mrs. Edna Craig, of Napanee, on the Provincial WCTU convention held last month in London.

The weather was ideal except for a terrific thunderstorm late one evening. As a result great excitement swept through the camp when some "early birds" discovered the caretaker's car floating in the lake. A couple of swimmers towed it to shore and a quick call to a local garage soon had the little car back in running order again. This time it was parked with the brakes on.

Mrs. Langford expressed appreciation and thanks to the leaders and campers for creating such a harmonious experience for what may be final camp. The property has been sold and will be known in future as "Deseret Camp" but it will continue to be used as a place of instruction for Christian youth and families.

Reid Shoves Juniors to First With Two-Hit Win Over City

Ellis Juniors moved back into sole possession of first place in the Commercial Softball League as Scott Reid fired a two-hit shutout to stop City Hotel 3-0. In the other game played at the Alcomite, last night, Point Anne edged Stinsons 5-4.

Reid allowed only five baserunners in the game with singles by Ken Genereaux and Larry Potter the only safeties against the Ellis hurler, who appears to be hitting top form after a sub-par start.

Bob Ethier was the victim of Reid's strong pitching effort, as he lost a four - hitter, when the Juniors counted two runs in the second inning.

Each hurler struck out eight batters, while Reid issued two bases on balls and Ethier none.

The Ellis runs came when Dale Duvall reached first on an error and Reid and Paul Goodfellow followed with back - to - back doubles. Ethier was in control for the rest of the way, allowing only singles to Steve Ling and Wayne McTaggart.

The Juniors face their stiffest test of the Commercial League season, tonight, when they meet the second - place Rollins Construction team.

Point Anne came up with a lone run in the bottom of the seventh to give them their win. Jamie Hunter, who went the route for the winners, reached first on an error and scored on Jim Horwood's long blast to give the Cementmen the 5-4 decision.

Stinsons had tied the game in the sixth inning as singles by Ricky Locke, Lyle Thompson, Wayne Woods and Martin Walsh accounted for three runs.

Hunter threw six - hit ball for Point Anne, walking one and getting three strikeouts. Bob Swan allowed seven hits in absorbing the loss. He walked two batters and fanned an equal number.

Rick Rosebush blasted a solo homer and a double for the winners, while Dennis Maher added a two-run shot in the fourth inning. Larry Fraser and Jim Horwood collected two hits apiece.

Swan was the top Stinson hitter with a pair of singles, with all their other safeties coming in the sixth - inning explosion.

Belleville goalie Danny Tosky thwarts a Campbellford forward's scoring attempt as defenceman Pete Fleming takes his check out of the play. The Campbellford team scored on eight other opportunities as they recorded a 9-3 victory.

Intell Dashes Pennant Hopes of Union Carbide

The Intelligencer all but dashed the hopes of a pennant winning season for Union Carbide Monday night as they whipped the Carbide team 9-4.

In other Industrial Softball League action the CN Combines moved into a fourth place tie with their Turbo cousins - parts by trimming the Firemen 7-1.

Ron Culloden started for the Printers allowing all eight Carbide runs on only five hits while fanning one and walking four before being pulled in the fifth. John Edwards pitched no-hit ball the rest of the way for the Intell.

Eight-run outbursts in the third and fourth innings broke the Carbide backs as the pitchers were jumped on for 11 hits. Ethel Emerson had a big night for the Intell punching a double and three singles. First baseman Harold Redquest contributed a double and two singles and Bill Heard a double and single for the first place Intelligencer.

Lou Sarkie and John McConnell were tagged with the loss for the Carbide team. They combined for only one strike out and seven walks but nothing could stop the Printers in their race for the pennant.

Bill Barberstock with a triple and a single and C. Hughes with a triple were the best for the Carbide.

Junior Day pitched the Combines' victory fanning six and walking three. Fahey had three singles and Marshall two in pacing the Combines into fourth place.

Gary Reid and Bob Davenport took the loss for the Firemen giving up nine hits and fanning five. Two singles apiece from Ralph Boonhower and Roscoe Davis plus a double from Soule were the big hits for the Hook - and - Ladder team.

Lacrosse Juniors Can't Click

Three good periods might have given the Belleville entry in the Quinte District Lacrosse league a victory but as it was one poor frame cost them a 8-5 loss to Campbellford.

Behind 6-2 after the opening 20 minutes the Bellville team played even par with the strong Campbellford team the rest of the game.

"The boys played a great game for two periods but that first one costs us the game. Danny Tosky played excellent in net for the last two periods keeping us in the game," said coach Gerry Vincent.

Bud Bannon with two and Fred Tanner, Wayne Tanner, Rex Allan, Don McMillan, Mike Scriver and Brian Ball all with one apiece were the Campbellford marksmen.

On a sour note, Belleville captain Steve Casselman was lost for the season after receiving a broken neck when checked heavily into the boards.

"If we had two more guys that could handle the stick up front and one more defenceman this team could really do well in this league. Now that Casselman is gone we need them more than ever. He's a big loss for he really made this team go," exclaims Vincent.

Texaco Gassed By Sunco Tadpoles

In the battle of the garage Monday night Mulroney's Sunoco Tadpoles proved to get the most mileage as they whipped Eric Wattkin's Texaco 9-5.

In other Belleville Minor Baseball action League 99 preserves its undisputed Cable view 19-14 and Barriages defeated Farrell's Motors 8-4.

Shawn Hall and Wayne Deighton combined for a one-hitter while fanning 16 and walking only four Wattkin batters. Deighton was also the slugger of the game cranking a homer, triple, and double. Mulroney completed the pitchers domination for the Sunoco squad punching a triple and a single.

John Dent and Terry McEachern took the loss for the Texaco boys giving up ten hits while striking out 14 and walking five. Steve Bohan with a single was the only hitting support the two pitchers received.

Bill Whalen and Brian Turner fanned 14 batters in picking up the Legion victory, Turner continued as the clubs top hitter connecting for a homer, double and two singles. Roger Lapp added a home run and a triple in his teams 19-14 win.

Mike McClelland and John Milne were touched for the loss giving up five walks and fanning ten, McClelland was the big gun of the night for Cablevue hitting a home run and four singles.

A six-hitter by hurlers Allan along with eight strike outs provided the win for Barriages Paul Weir with two singles and a double and Ricky Hutchinson with three singles paced the Landscapers.

In another Belleville Minor Baseball game the Dairy Queen whipped Bob's Sports 9-3.

Robbie Richardson and John Geen each had three goals in the Y's Men victory. Danny Flesch and Bob Bruce added singles.

Kent Manning and Sandy Waterson fired two goals apiece for Atlas. Hugh Graham scored the odd goal.

Brent Walmsley led the Dairy Queen with a hat-trick followed by Steve Wilson and Marty Seniark with two goals each. Jeff Runciman tallied the other goal.

Laurie Wilson and Mike Mulcahy worked were the scorers for Bob's.

Lion Midgets Sharp At Expos Try-out Camp

Four members of the Belleville Lions Club midgets came up with an impressive showing at the Montreal Expo tryout camp in Kingston yesterday, as Barry Culkin, Stan Brooks, Brian Cameron and Doug Dernoah all made the final cut.

Only 24 of the 60 boys, who took part in the workouts at the Cricket Field, survived the cuts, after being tested on running, hitting, fielding and throwing.

Culkin and Dernoah were trying out as first basemen, with Cousins working at second and Brooks pitching.

All four Belleville players saw action in the inter-squad game held in the afternoon, with Culkin and Brooks acquitting themselves particularly well. The smooth - fielding first baseman rapped a triple and Brooks worked two strong innings on the mound.

Expo scouts were highly pleased with the performances, advising the boys to, "keep up the good work, and we'll be keeping our eyes on you for the next three or four years."

Dairy Queen Hurler Fires Four-Hitter

Four - hit pitching and excellent control by hurler Barb Brandner led the Dairy Queen to a 4-0 victory over Artistic Ladies Wear in Ladies Softball League game Monday night.

Barb fanned seven batters and didn't walk a batter in her seven - inning stint. Beth Palmer's third inning triple and back-to-back doubles in the sixth by Sharon Hannah and Brandner provided the Queen's with all the scoring power they needed.

Sue Morkin allowed just six hits in defeat for Artistic while fanning five and walking one.

Kinsmen Edge Bowmanville In 12-Inning Marathon

The Belleville Kinsmen Juniors came up with their closest win of the season Monday as they came from behind twice to edge the Bowmanville Intermediates 8-5 in 12 innings.

Behind 4-1 after five innings the Kinsmen exploded for three runs in the sixth to tend the game into extra innings fanning six and walking only one.

Steve Moore had a triple and double, Duvall a triple, Bill Kirkham a double and Warren Hay, Kevin Allen and Barry Culkin two singles apiece to lead the Belleville attack.

Alex, Moorcroft, and Kennedy worked the mound duties for the losers fanning 11 and walking three. D. Bagnell with a double and single and L. Kelly with two singles were the big hitters for Bowmanville.

Lacrosse Juniors Can't Click

Three good periods might have given the Belleville entry in the Quinte District Lacrosse league a victory but as it was one poor frame cost them a 8-5 loss to Campbellford.

Behind 6-2 after the opening 20 minutes the Bellville team played even par with the strong Campbellford team the rest of the game.

"The boys played a great game for two periods but that first one costs us the game. Danny Tosky played excellent in net for the last two periods keeping us in the game," said coach Gerry Vincent.

Bud Bannon with two and Fred Tanner, Wayne Tanner, Rex Allan, Don McMillan, Mike Scriver and Brian Ball all with one apiece were the Campbellford marksmen.

On a sour note, Belleville captain Steve Casselman was lost for the season after receiving a broken neck when checked heavily into the boards.

"If we had two more guys that could handle the stick up front and one more defenceman this team could really do well in this league. Now that Casselman is gone we need them more than ever. He's a big loss for he really made this team go," exclaims Vincent.

Palmer Hopes to Have NL Sluggers 'On Carpet'

CINCINNATI (AP) — Everybody wonders what kind of bounces the baseballs will take tonight in the first all-star game ever played on a wall-to-wall carpet. Everybody except Jim Palmer.

Palmer, whose strong right arm is expected to provide the impetus for an American League challenge to the National's seven-year all-star reign, is more concerned about balls that don't bounce. And he has 148 good reasons to worry.

"How am I going to relax tonight with that lineup walking for me?" the Baltimore Orioles' pitching ace asked Monday after he was given the starting assignment against Tom Seaver of New York Mets in the 41st all-star game.

Lined up against Palmer on the astroturf of Riverfront Stadium, new home of Cincinnati Reds, will be six of the game's most prolific longball hitters— San Francisco Giants' Willie Mays, St. Louis Cardinals' Richie Allen, Atlanta Braves' Hank Aaron, Tony Perez of Cincinnati Reds, Rico Carty of the Braves and Johnny Bench of the Reds.

They have belted a total of 180 home runs this season while batting an aggregate .313.

"When I heard Seaver was pitching, I thought he might be an odd man for me," Palmer said. "Then found out he hit one too last week."

Seaver, the National League's 1969 Cy Young Award winner, hit his first major league homer last Thursday night while beating Montreal Expos for his 16th victory of the year. He has pitched three consecutive innings in two previous all-star appearances.

Palmer, 13-4, will be making his all-star debut. He got the starting nod from manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles because of the National's predominantly right-handed lineup. All of the National League starters swing from the right side except shortstop Don Kessinger, a switcher.

Power also abounds in the American League lineup with Harmon Killebrew, 36 homers, Frank Howard, 34, Boog Powell, 23, and Carl Yastrzemski, 21.

The National won't take a 22-17-1 series lead into tonight's game scheduled to start at 9:15 p.m. EDT. The game will be televised by the CBC national network.

The National League has won 21 of the last 13 games, the last seven in succession.

'Golden Bear' Lauds Sanders

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — British Open champion Jack Nicklaus was cooing all "the incredible guts of Doug Sanders," despite a Sunday playoff victory over the man known as the Georgia Peacock.

"There's great golf ahead for Sanders," predicted Nicklaus. "He's worked hard to get rid of a two-year hex."

Nicklaus returned to the United States late Monday...the ancient British Open trophy under his burly arm.

"Look here," said Jack, pointing to the trophy. "This thing is some kind of old. It says Tom Morris won the British Open in 1871. Look at the other names— Hogan, Hagen, Player, Palmer, . . .

He skipped a name, that of Jack Nicklaus. He had won before, but it was different this time.

"When you ride up to St. Andrews Golf Club, it's like going through the gates of Augusta National here in America," he said. "It turns a golfer on. You suddenly want to play..."

Nicklaus figures, any great golfer must play the British Open to achieve lasting recognition.

"It has special meaning to me. I have won 16 major titles—but it's the first since 1967."

The colorful Sanders had been a non-contender for two seasons, not only in major tournaments but also at tour stops such as Phoenix, Jacksonville and Pensacola.

"Doug had the courage to go to Europe and qualify," said Nicklaus.

"He fought hard all week and finally emerged as the man to beat by Saturday."

Sanders blew a three-footer that would have won the title, forcing a Sunday playoff with Jack. Nicklaus took the 18-hole showdown by one shot with an even-par 72.

Player Strike In NFL?

CHICAGO (AP) — With the possibility of a player strike looming, the 26 teams in the National Football League announced Monday their training camps will be closed to veteran players.

The statement was made jointly by George Halas, owner of Chicago Bears and president of the National Conference, and Lamar Hunt, owner of Kansas City Chiefs and president of the American Conference.

The move, agreed upon unanimously at a secret meeting in Chicago Sunday, followed a directive by the Players' Association of the NFL instructing veteran players not to report as scheduled.

Halas and Hunt also announced that the camps would open at midnight for rookie players. A rookie player was defined as one who has yet to be on any team's active roster for a regular season game in any prior year.

Three reasons were given for the move. Each club will have the same amount of time in training camp and no competitive character of the game will be violated with no one having an advantage.

A policy of permitting veterans to report would be disruptive to squad morale, but any delay in giving rookies an opportunity to make a squad would penalize them.

The action is similar to a move made two years ago when the players threatened to strike.

Rookie QB Leads Stamps to Win

OTTAWA (CP) — Rookie quarterback Larry Lawrence engineered two scoring plays in the third quarter to lead Calgary Stampeders to a 26-17 win over Ottawa Rough Riders Monday night in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

A crowd of 15,987 watched the western club win its second-straight pre-season game. Ottawa, the defending Grey Cup champions, lost previous starts to Toronto Argonauts and the CFL All-Stars.

Lawrence, a 21-year-old graduate of University of Iowa, handed off to halfback Hugh McKinnis for one touchdown and combined with Jim Sillye for a 64-yard pass-and-run score.

Jerry Keeling, Calgary's first-string quarterback who played most of the game, passed 34 yards to Herman Harrison for the third Calgary touchdown.

Larry Robinson kicked two 15-yard field goals and also converted two of the Calgary touchdown.

Gary Wood, being groomed as Ottawa's starting quarterback, scored the only Rider touchdown on a six-yard run.

Ivan MacMillan, an 18-year-old from nearby Alexandria, Ont., kicked three field goals, converted the Ottawa touchdown and added a single.

Wood played the first half in which Ottawa held a 17-10 lead. He then gave way to Tom DiMuzio and Jim Ousley who failed to put together a steady offensive threat.

Calgary had a total offence of 409 yards compared to Ottawa's 349. Keeling completed 17 of 36 pass attempts for 213 yards, and Lawrence was good on four of six attempts for 85 yards.

Harrison accounted for 136 yards with six catches.

McKinnis was Calgary's big threat on the ground, carrying the ball three for 96 yards.

Wood completed two out of four pass attempts for 47 yards; Ousley hit four of nine for 181; and DiMuzio three of 11 for 21 yards.

Wood rushed six times for 73 yards, including his six-yard touchdown.

Roughriders Edge Winnipeg 22-21

WINNIPEG (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders held off a last-minute drive in Western Football Conference exhibition play Monday to eke out a 22-21 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers before 19,406 fans.

Both clubs experimented in the pre-season game, whose third quarter was played before the touring Royal Family.

Saskatchewan head coach Eagle Keys used all three of his quarterbacks and two of them came up with touchdown passes.

Winnipeg, too, used all three of its quarterbacks, with Ron Johnson pitching the only touchdown toss, a seven-yard strcsmer to newcomer Roger Grimes.

Ron Lancaster threw a seven-yard touchdown pass to Gord Harwell in the third quarter, then John Forzaria came in in the fourth quarter to hit Barwell on an 81-yard touchdown throw.

Saskatchewan led 6-3 at the end of the first quarter, Winnipeg took a 13-9 lead at the half, and Saskatchewan moved ahead 16-13 at three-quarter time.

George Reed scored the other Saskatchewan touchdown, a one-yard drive in the first quarter. Place-kicking guard Jack Abendschan booted a 29-yard field goal and connected on one of three convert attempts.

Sophomore halfback Amos Van Pelt scotted across from two yards out for Winnipeg's second touchdown, with Gene LAtusiak hitting on field goals from 17 and 20 yards out and converting one touchdown.

Rombers' other point came in the last minute of play on a missed field goal. Fewer Roughriders conceded the wide attempt.

Bombers intercepted three of Saskatchewan passes, one on each of the Roughrider quarterbacks. A second interception on Lancaster was called back for a holding infraction.

On the statistical chart, Saskatchewan picked up 17 first downs to Winnipeg's 20 and rolled up 343 yards in total offence compared with 337 for the Bombers.

Reed led the Saskatchewan ground-gainers with 46 yards on seven carries and Silas Mc-Klonie had 43 yards on five carries.

Van Pelt was the leading rusher for Winnipeg, picking up 45 yards on 16 tries and also catching three passes for 47 more yards.

DURBAN (Reuters) — Five Canadian hockey players jailed for two days during the weekend for alleged breach of contract, say they will sue the South African Ice Hockey Association for wrongful arrest. And they have signed a new contract to play 15 weekly matches here starting Thursday. The five are Douglas Scott of Midland, Ont., William MacLeod of Leduc, Alta., James Whittaker of Nobel, Ont., Floyd Thompson of Capreol, Ont., and Rene Labonte of Quebec. A spokesman for a Durban legal firm said Monday that the players will lodge counter-claims against the South African Ice Hockey Association for wrongful arrest and damages. The five Canadians were arrested at their hotel here Friday after the association made an urgent application to a judge in chambers. The association alleged they broke a contract to play a series of matches in Johannesburg from May 1 to Sept. 15 causing a financial loss of 12,507 rand ($18,178.)

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — Venues for the Commonwealth Games should in future be selected six years in advance instead of four, the executive committee of the Commonwealth Games Federation recommended Monday. Their proposal will be put before the meeting of the general assembly Sunday for ratification. The assembly will select the site for the 1974 Games Sunday — probably either New Zealand or Australia. If the executive committee's recommendation is ratified, the venue for 1978 will be announced at Munich during the 1972 Olympic Games. Edmonton has already indicated their intention of bidding for the 1978 Games are Canada, Wales and — if it does not get the 1978 Games — Edmonton. The change is being recommended because some countries believe a longer time is needed to prepare for the Games.

York Makes Bid

TORONTO (CP) — The council of the adjoining Borough of North York voted Monday to seek the 1973 Canada Summer Games.

Mayor Basil Hall said in an interview that Ald. Robert F. Yuill will lead a three-man delegation to Montreal today with the borough's bid.

Filly Favoured

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fourteen horses from five provinces were entered Monday for Wednesday's $76,000 Manitoba Derby at Assiniboia Downs, to be attended by the Royal Family.

Favored by the oddsmaker at 7-2 was the Jean-Louis Levesque entry from Quebec of Fanfreluche, the only filly, and Coquemallaise. The choice was on the basis of the filly's second-place showing in the Queen's Plate June 30. She was beaten by three-quarters of a length by Almtzer, who wasn't kept eligible for the Derby.

Detroit Joins Junior Loop

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Detroit has joined five communities in southwestern Ontario to form a six-team league in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A tier two class.

St. Thomas, Chatham, Brantford, Guelph, Welland and Detroit were formed into the league, yet to be named, following a meeting in London Monday night.

Entry deadline is Wednesday at midnight and the Ontario Hockey Association will be holding a sub-committee meeting Thursday at Toronto to consider any new applications to the league.

The league will then hold another meeting at London July 28. Over 30 persons from the six centres were on hand for Monday night's meeting plus Jack Oakes and Hugh McLean, representing the OHA.

The league will open with at least two games Oct. 2.

to disappoint those of you who called about the 12-unit apartment houses you saw under construction to find they were all sold. We have all the figures to show you how to really put your money to work.

WANT TO BUILD ON THE BAY ?

We have a lovely lot on Rednerville Road not far from Belleville. There's 150' frontage on the bay. Let us build the house of your choice the way you want it built. Such lots as these are truly a premium.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: This coming year is marked with changes in direction, some in response to new opportunity, some because of your own inner spiritual growth. Sentimental ventures come alive in incidents that will be long remembered. If you are young you may permanently relocate at a distance. Older people tend more to shift to a different specialty in their work. Today's natives are each of a kind, no two alike, sharing only a talent for anticipating future events.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work for long - range goals and personal security. Resolve to do something about the needs of your family. The evening should be semi-social, lending to other interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practicality and Imagination combine to make your day interesting. Associates offer you a chance to put advance your ideas. Be energetic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Unusual combinations can work well today. Have the courage to try the new. More good ideas are popping than you can apply at once, so take notes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Personal projects intrude. It may be better to indulge in a day off than to upset your regular work. The affairs of young people come to your attention.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Quiet, persuasive efforts work out well today. Your creative ideas have great potential value if you will pursue them. Find a good show this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Expect the people you meet now to have diverse ideas. Your reaction may be of considerable stimulation to your discussions. Fresh vocational arrangements are in order.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Leaving untried schemes aside, today's promises to be successful in both business and social action. Work on projects requiring, aesthetic and intellectual sensitivity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Something intervenes to change the scene. People with special talents or interests are involved although you may not have realized their presence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Your personal welfare is more readily sustained. Find out what you can do with short resources. More cooperation is available than you realize. Ask for it.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was centered in cases of long standing, and I was important of all, results were so thorough that the improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Another Passenger Is Added To Toll in Toronto Jet Crash

TORONTO (CP) — The presence of a 79th passenger on the Super DC-8 that crashed near here July 5 was announced today by medical examiners for Canada investigators, raising the toll of passengers and crew to 122.

The additional victim is Gilles Raymond, 18, of Boucherville, Que. His name was not on the regular passenger list for Flight 811 apparently because he boarded the Montreal-Los Angeles flight on a youth standby ticket.

Ontario Supervising Coroner Dr. H. R. Cottam, directing the effort to identify the victims' remains, said in an interview Monday: "We are working on the assumption now that there are 109 persons to identify, and 36."

Dr. Cottam, who signed 13 death certificates Monday identifying that 13 victims have been positively identified and legally pronounced dead, said the investigation team has learned of the additional victim since early last week. Names of the 13 identified have not been released.

The certification signed Monday listed cause of death in each case as "multiple fractures and injuries from an air crash" Dr. Cottam said.

He said names will be released after victims' families have been notified of identification. The first 13 will probably be released today.

Oil Firms Oppose Alaska Lease Auction Giving Natives Royalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to require competitive bidding for oil exploration leases on all federal lands in Alaska is expected to spark a fight in the United States Senate over $500,000,000 proposed mineral royalty payments to Alaska natives.

Senator Henry M. Jackson, (Dem. Wash.) chairman of the Senate Interior committee, offered the amendment Monday to the native land claims bill.

Opponents of competitive oil lease bidding for areas with no proven oil reserves made under a 1920 mineral-leasing law requiring only nominal annual payments, have threatened to fight the amendment by attempting to talk it to death.

Oil companies paid nearly $1,000,000,000 to Alaska last year when North Slope drilling rights were auctioned.

The interior committee, by a close vote, had struck from the land claims bill a provision to permit competitive bidding for leases on tracts on which the government would reserve mineral rights.

Jackson contends millions of dollars may be lost if applicants are permitted to obtain leases under the 1920 mineral-leasing law.

Opposition also exists to a provision of the bill which would give Alaska natives $500,000,000 in royalties from oil and other mineral production in public lands of the state by imposing severable as controversy mounted over whether the Soviets have stopped building new missiles recently, perhaps to enhance their position for agreement on nuclear arms limitation.

Jonathan Bingham (Dem. N.Y.) said in the House of Representatives Monday he has information that the Russians resumed flight-testing new SS-9 missile sites for the nine months before June.

Jury Is Nearly Ready in Tate Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After questioning 81 persons in four weeks, defense and prosecution lawyers pronounced ready today to accept seven men and five women as the jury to try the Manson family murder case.

The only reservations about the proposed jury came from Irving Kanarek, lawyer for defendant Charles Manson, the 32-year-old shaggy-haired leader of a hippie-type "family."

Kanarek said not one on the jury represented Manson's "way of life."

Lawyers for Manson and three girl followers on trial with him already have exhausted their permissible peremptory challenges of prospective jurors.

So Kanarek tried another tactic—a motion to quash the indictments on ground of discrimination in the selection both of prospective trial jurors and the grand jurors who indicted the four defendants.

Superior Court Judge Charles Older dismissed the motion, saying he was satisfied there had been no denial of the defendants' rights.

The trial is expected to last three to six months.

Anxiety Can Be Big Cross to Bear

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P., Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Here she a woman who says she is always tired. And here she is a man who complains of extreme fatigue from day to day. There isn't a day in the life of the family doctor when he doesn't hear men and women who live their lives in daily misery ask for "something for my nervousness and exhaustion."

In some cases investigation reveals organic disease as the cause. But in most, you can charge it up to that of doubtful "anxiety state."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm always so tired and nervous. I'm barely getting sick of myself. My husband gets sick, too, I am sure, consider my nothing but a "crank."

I am only in my early 30s and the mother of three youngsters. For several years now I have been plagued by physical symptoms as well as nervousness. Every part of my body has been affected.

I can hardly look at the bright side of life. I am always resting. I get, but I have the darkest blue with the following: I suffer from fierce pains in the front of my head, and have headaches that worry my husband. I can't touch. Also a feeling of falling off balance. Then the sensations frighten me. Those feelings go on for months.

I try to keep my house running on schedule and also try to be busy outside. Community and Church work. My friends never know how awful I feel. Most of the time.

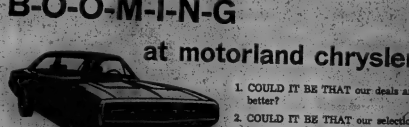
Doctors have found nothing wrong except nerves. Last year I had three away every tranquilizer I had in the house. I want to fight it out alone my own way, but I do get very low. It's tough, isn't it? — Mrs. B.

Comment: Tough it is; especially if the fear becomes a anxiety state which may last for months or years. All I can advise is be firm and positive: "keep fighting it." I have seen so many overcome these fears, fatigue and discomforts. (Even though they thought they had "nervous breakdowns.")

Routinely, I also suggest that nervous and tired people have their thyroid gland and blood sugar investigated. More often than we realize, a low blood sugar (hypoglycemia as the uncomplicated cause of much nervousness and fatigue).

For Mrs. G.: Arachnitism is the result of spider bite. The most publicized of the "dangerous" spiders are the black widow and the brown recluse. Most spiders, large and small, should be "respected."

According to a recent article in the JAMA by Richard Gorham Ph. D. and Theodore B. Rhoney, MD there are at least six known dangerous spider species in the U.S.A. They wrote (in part) "People commonly assert that they have been bitten by a 'spider,' but no one can say at this time just how common arachnitism really is. Practically all spiders are venomous by nature, but only a few kinds are dangerous to man."



I believe that my person who "knows" he has been the victim of a spider bite, should seek medical attention whenever the site of the bite becomes intensely inflamed. Sometimes a severe reaction can occur within an hour.

* * *

For Mr. H.: I agree. It would be useless to administer medicine if the blood which is being used to transfuse a patient. It would be more purposeful to give it again later (or earlier) for another intravenous treatment.

However, intravenous medications are usually given through the same intravenous needle used for transfusion. Reason: Some medications may cause unnatural clotting of blood or actual damage to blood cells.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Pollution as Popular as Sex

There has been an unusual crop of "anti-pollution" books pouring out this spring and summer, and most of them have blended and muddled the issue. Pollution seems to be allowed to provide a subject, as sex does, days.

One of the aspects of the problem that worries me is whether people will continue to back the pollution fight when it begins to cost them significant money and substantial effort.

It will not be hard to bring industry to heel for its offenses, or to see that the various governments themselves cease from pollution; but what is going to happen to the noble voters when it comes down to the individual?

As Melvin Rorabaugh points out in his new book, "Our Precarious Habitat," the problems of waste disposal don't engage the creative and inquisitive minds. Waste-disposal research and development is low in status, and doesn't attract the best people it so desperately needs.

"The past fifty years," Rorabaugh remarks, "have witnessed a remarkable change in waste-disposal practices. Only a few months went to spend little, if anything, on the waste, particularly with so many other problems that demand, in the name of the tax dollar."

How many families, he asks, encourage sons or daughters to pursue careers in sanitation, public health, or other environmental sciences? "Yet these," he points out, "are far more immediately concerns than such luxuries as a billion-volt electron generator."

Who has ever heard of a public - spirited citizen, a philanthropist, or a private foundation setting up a chair for cleaner water? As Roger Starr asked, not long ago: "Who wants a sewage treatment plant named for him?"

Meanwhile, libraries and museums proliferate, but only add to the pollution problem. Concluding his book, Rorabaugh poses the pessimistic question: "When in the history of man has the general community ever been in favor of anything to upgrade the condition of life? Adran-one have usually come through the efforts of a few bold men who had to struggle against organized opposition and the inertia of masses of people.

It looks as if the public is willing to do anything for a better environment, except pay for it.

Russians Improve Accuracy Of Intercontinental Rockets

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States defence sources say Soviet tests this year indicate the Russians have improved the accuracy of their SS-9 intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Officials stopped short of saying the SS-11 has become a serious threat to the United States' own ICBM—the Minuteman—but they strongly suggested it has progressed in that direction.

The information became available as Defence Secretary Melvin Laird disclosed in prepared testimony that the Russians resumed flight-testing new SS-9 missile sites for the nine months before June.

Defence officials believe the Soviets, gleaned from observations of their manned satellites, known the Russians began new silos for the SS-9 missiles, as well as new SS-11 and SS-13 intercontinental missiles, in the last seven months.

Officials contend these reports support Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird's statement last week that Soviet missile development has not slowed do

Import Quotas Backed In U.S.

'You hate policemen!'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives ways and means committee approved Tuesday mandatory quotas on imports of textiles, apparel and shoes, marking a sharp departure from the 37-year U.S. policy toward free trade.

Also agreed on for inclusion in a comprehensive trade bill is standby authority for the president to clamp restrictions on imports of any other commodities found in the future to be threatening U.S. business.

President Nixon's administration, with professed reluctance, had dropped its opposition to the principle of textile quotas, but had not endorsed limitations on other imports. However, a general drive for quotas developed in Congress with more than a majority of the House sponsoring textile and shoe limitation bills.

The committee's decisions are subject to later reviews as the specific language of the bill is drafted, but the indications are that a solid majority favors them.

Students May Work In Europe

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen suggested Tuesday that Canada might ship students abroad to better deal with the problem of student summer unemployment.

Interviewed on a local CBC public affairs program called New Just Listen, Mr. MacEachen said he had discussed the possibility of increasing "very significantly" the number of students who work in Europe each summer with European government officials on a recent trip.

"Their economy is very strong," he said.

Canada could increase the number of students working in Europe by from 3,000 to 5,000 students next summer in such countries as Germany, Belgium and perhaps France.

The minister estimated the number of students on the Canadian labor market this summer is about 640,000.

Sunken 'Laker' 70 Feet Down

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Provincial Police divers resumed today the grim task of finding the remaining three bodies of the nine persons drowned when the 4,000-ton laker Eastcliffe Hall sank off Crysler Shoal in the St. Lawrence Seaway 18 miles west of here Tuesday.

The divers are picking their way through the wreck, plagued by swift currents. The vessel settled at the bottom of the river, about 70 feet from the surface.

Among the divers on the scene are four Hastings County men — Belleville ambulance operator Stu Meeks, J. E. McCormick of the Madoc detachment of the OPP and two unidentified members of CFB Trenton's Flying Frogmen Scuba Club.

Three were flown to the site yesterday in a CFB helicopter and an Otter aircraft. Mr. Meeks went to the scene by car, taking his rescue boat with him to aid in the search.

A U.S. coast guard helicopter went to the area yesterday, but later returned to Detroit because it was not needed.

The body of Captain Richard Groulx, 52, of Montreal was found in the wheelhouse at 7:40 a.m., Tuesday almost four hours after the sinking.

Later, the bodies of his son Alain, 16, and of Jacqueline and Nellie Demers, wife and six-year-old daughter of chief engineer Wilbur Demers of Charlesbourg, Que., were recovered.

Still missing were bodies of Mr. Demers, 48, Lawrence MacDougall, 23, of Kentville, N.S., Freeman Baxter, 29, of Kansas, N.Mex., Leonard Harris, 43, New Chelsea, N.Y., and Louis Boucher, 28, of Montreal.

Later two more bodies were recovered but identification was not immediately available.

There are 12 survivors.

A transport department spokesman in Ottawa said Tuesday night that a public inquiry is likely but no final decision has yet been reached. Transport Minister Don Jamieson may make an announcement today.

OPP Inspector J. M. Hillmer of Toronto, who is carrying out investigation for coroner Dr. W. M. Byers of Winchester, said no inquest has been ordered.

Replacement value of the 14-year-old Eastcliffe Hall was set at $2,000,000 Tuesday by Norman Hall, executive vice-president of Hall Shipping Ltd. of Montreal, owners of the vessel.

It was the sixth inland sinking for Hall shipping vessels in the last eight years.

The Eastcliffe Hall ran aground at Lake St. Clair after colliding with a U.S.-ore carrier in October, 1962; the Lawrencecliffe Hall sank in the St. Lawrence after colliding with a German freighter in November, 1965; the Lecliffe Hall went down after a collision with a Greek freighter in 1966; and the

Dockers On Strike

LONDON (CP) — Representatives of Britain's 47,000 longshoremen rejected today a pay offer from their employers, escalating the start of the first national port strike since 1926.

The vote against the management offer was 46 to 32.

More than half of Britain's dockers went on strike before the vote was taken.

A spokesman for the Port of London Authority said the decision would mean "total stoppage at the docks.

The walkout was scheduled to start Tuesday, but was postponed while delegates considered a new offer. Militant stevedores in the thousands stayed off the job anyway.

Royalty Whips Mud

On the lawn outside the Manitoba legislature the Queen will make an address, timed to last exactly six minutes and 20 seconds.

The minimum crowd expected is 100,000 people.

The Queen and Prince Philip, Princess Anne and Prince Charles, will arrive in horse-drawn landaus escorted by Mounties from the RCMP musical ride. For noise, there will be a 21-gun salute.

Rain was the tour problem Tuesday, but sunny skies and a high of 80 degrees were forecast for today, and a spokesman said the royal address would be held outdoors as scheduled whatever the weather.

In the predominantly French-speaking community of St. Pierre, Philip strolled over to one group huddled under umbrellas in a soggy park.

"If you just stay close enough together you won't even notice it," he told them. "It's always like this in England."

Also in a formal speech at St. Pierre, in French and one of three addresses she is making during the entire tour, the Queen spoke of natural and linguistic diversity in Canada and said a spirit of humanism shared by English and French "will no doubt build the bridge between the great geographical regions of Canada."

Red Bases Are Hunted In Jungle

SAIGON (AP) — Nearly 3,000 South Vietnamese troops launched a major new sweep today, seeking to destroy North Vietnamese base camps in rugged jungle country west of Da Nang.

Kicking off one of the biggest operations in months in the northern provinces, waves of United States marine helicopters landed the assault troops and their American advisers shortly after daylight in an area 25 to 40 miles east of the Laotian frontier. No major operations have taken place there in years.

Only light contact was reported in the early hours of the operation.

The attack force included three battalions of South Vietnamese marines recently withdrawn from Cambodia and two battalions of South Vietnamese special forces troops, mercenaries paid by the United States and trained and led by U.S. Green Berets.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Thundershowers overnight dumped more than an inch of rain on many localities in southern Ontario. The warm humid air mass in which the thundershowers have been developing covers all but the northwestern portions of Ontario. This air mass is moving eastward but will persist over the southern half of the province all of today and most of tonight. As a consequence more thundershowers are expected over the southern region tonight. Drier and slightly cooler air will move into the district behind the shower activity and Thursday should be a fine, sunny and pleasantly warm day across Ontario.

Police said Jordan, 69, apparently was shot as he walked to his car after closing a tavern he owns and operates.

Police said a pickup order has been issued for three Negro men in a late-model auto, one of them armed with a shotgun.

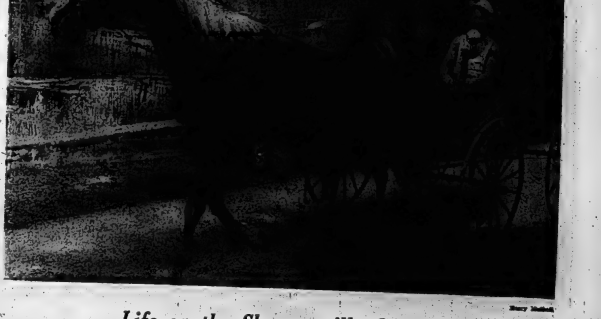
Improper Braking Led To Toronto Jet Crash

OTTAWA (CP) — The flight recorder on the Air Canada jetliner that crashed at Toronto July 5 showed that premature deployment of a braking device to the damage-inflicting extreme landing minutes before the tragedy, Transport Minister Jamieson disclosed Tuesday.

In a statement reporting on the preliminary investigation into the crash of the stretched DC-8, Mr. Jamieson also said the flight recorder indicated improper procedures for operation of the braking device during the land approach.

The statement gave no indication whether the, improperly-used braking device or the procedural malfunction arose from pilot or mechanical error.



During the approach, the minister said, the approved procedure for arming the braking device—called ground spoilers—for automatic deployment following touchdown was not followed.

Ground spoilers are aerodynamic devices which deflect the air flowing over the wings to cut down wing lift action and slow the plane down on the runway.

"Subsequently, the ground spoilers were prematurely deployed, momentarily, at an altitude of from 40 to 60 feet above ground level, resulting in a rapid descent and heavy impact with the runway which caused critical structural damage to the aircraft," he said.

After the heavy impact, an engine dropped off as the plane took off again for another landing attempt. However, another engine fell off and the crash occurred in a field north of the airport. All 109 aboard were killed.

Mr. Jamieson said the investigation into the tragedy of Flight 621 has not yet been completed. It may yet reveal other contributory factors to the crash, "but there is no evidence which would justify restriction" of the operation of the stretched DC-8s, which carry the designation DC-8-61.

It's Not Really That Wet, It Only Seems That Way

The rain keeps falling, and falling, and falling.

And according to CFB Trenton's duty forecaster, the Quinte area could be in for more yet.

Showers were predicted for most of today with Thursday being partly cloudy with the cloud giving way to sunshine by tomorrow afternoon.

"Likely there'll be showers in the morning with sunny skies in the afternoon," he said.

Friday will begin a three-day weekend trend of sunlight and warm temperatures — but rain is predicted for early Friday.

However, if Quinte area vacationers are becoming fed up with what they feel is a surplus of rain this year, the duty forecaster has some statistics to cheer them up.

He blames the excess of cloud this month and the heaviness of the rainfalls on the fact that it seems wetter than other years, but this July is actually no different than other Julys.

The normal rainfall for this month is approximately two inches. July's precipitation as of yesterday morning had been tallied at 1.49 inches.

Rainfall in the past two days — although the heaviness of showers implies otherwise — has only amounted to .39 inches.

In 1969, rainfall as of July 15 amounted to 1.35 inches, not much less than this year. Last year, July contributed 4.08 inches to the year's rainfall statistics.

Comforting to note, according to the forecaster, is the fact that in July of 1951 7.1 inches fell in the Quinte area.

But on the other hand, .76 inches fell in 1954 during the same month.

What this all means is that rainfall so far in July is normal, even though spirits are being dampened for area vacationers.

Temperatures in the past two weeks have exemplified mediocrity as well, with "normal" being the word to describe the Quinte area's weather.

Normal temperatures for July register at 70 degrees and that has been the general situation this year.

"We're running fairly close," the duty forecaster said. "If the sun comes out we'll be a little warmer than normal. If it remains cloudy we'll be slightly below normal."

In the more northern regions of Hastings County, the situation is almost the same.

Tweed received .33 inch of rain yesterday and up until eight this morning had received .60 inch.

James Harder, Clerk of Sidney

Clerk's Job Growing

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

James Byron Harder is serving his 11th year as the clerk of Sidney Township.

Previous to his becoming clerk he was Reeve from 1956 to 1958, Deputy-Reeve from 1953 to 1955 and several four years as a councillor. At the same time, he served for six years as a county councillor.

In total, he has been involved with the township council since January 1, 1940, making his 32nd year. When he was not on council during this time, he served for 1½ years on various affiliated committees.

This experience provides him with the invaluable background with which to fulfill his duties as clerk.

Records of all business transactions, land projects, committee meetings, and plans for township expansion are carefully kept and referred to. It is Mr. Harder's job to maintain these records.

He explained that his wife gave him lots of help with township work, typing a large amount of correspondence, which forms a major part of his job.

"Two years ago, the job required about 27 hours a week. Now it sometimes takes as much as 40 to 60 hours," he explained.

"Of course, that's a peak week."

On top of this, Mr. Harder is the manager of Trenton's Stokley Van Camp canning factory. With both duties, he travels back and forth between his office and the township offices on Wallbridge - Loyalist Road, keeping in touch with both jobs.

He explained that the weeks entailing the heaviest work are those during the time when the tax roll and the voters list are made up.

The regular duties of any clerk involve keeping all minutes and answering all correspondence concerning the municipality, attendance at all council and committee meetings, keeping up-to-date vital statistics as the Deputy Registrar of Vital Statistics and, although not in his case, the clerk could be called upon to fulfill the position of deputy treasurer.

He explained that he found basically no difference between the job now and in 1960.

As a municipality grows, so does the job of clerk and assistants are often needed.

Clerks in smaller municipalities can also undertake the job of plumbing inspector, building inspector, council secretary, and a variety of other positions.

In the case of Sidney Township, the building and plumbing inspector is George Caves and the treasurer-tax collector is Huth Lyons.

"It depends on the size of the municipality," he explained, describing the duties of the clerk.

"One increase which we have felt in the past few years is the large amount of correspondence; much more than in 1960."

He explained that from the 7,000 people and the 2,400 housing units, excluding CFB Trenton, the 1970 tax roll is $764,410.

To fulfill the job completely, the clerk must keep up to date on all township business; all public hearings, as well as the intermittent council meetings.

To enable him to answer questions at any time, he often takes records to work with him.

"With the population of the township growing by more than two per cent annually, it's important to keep up in date with every event."

For the position of clerk, for which Mr. Harder receives $2,100 for the year as well as a certain amount for expense allowance, applications are received just like any other executive business position.

Even though a great deal of his time, on the average 40 hours per week, is taken up with the business of the township, Mr. Harder still finds time for his family, with two sons and a daughter.

"My wife sometimes puts in as much time as I do," he said.

"It's a busy life."

Sand Shower

Counsellor Danny Nemirovsky suffered rough treatment yesterday at the hands of his charges — youngsters enrolled in the Belleville Y's summer day camp program. Their weekly excursion took them to Outlet beach, where the counsellor was "buried alive" and showered with sand to cap it off. One day each week the day campers are taken to a different place as a change from the regular camping routine.

Outlet Beach Outing Delights Day-campers

A boisterous group of 54 youngsters led by their own "Mary Poppins" yesterday romped at Outlet beach during a weekly outing of the Belleville Y's camp.

Vivacious Maureen Kelly, a staff member of the Y, led the children, ranging in age from eight to 13 years, in swimming, games and sand sculpture. She was assisted by co-director of the program, Donald Carr; and seven teen-aged counsellors.

Although the day was damp and chilly, most of the children capitalized on their beach trip by taking a dip under cloudy skies. A spirited game of Red Rover quickly warmed the swimmers when they finally returned to the beach.

Miss Kelly explained that twice weekly, youngsters attending city camp enjoy outof - town excursions. A special outing to Prince Edward County's favorite beach will be followed next week by a trip to one of Ontario's tourist attractions.

Chaperoning 84 children during a day at the beach can be hectic but Miss Kelly and her co-director seem to have the situation well in hand. The boys and girls are divided into several groups, each with its own counsellor.

As they play on the sand beach at Outlet Park familiar sounds interrupt their games. Cries of "I've got a sore foot, I think. "It's my turn now," and "When can we play Rover again!" punctuate their play.

With Mary Poppins magic Miss Kelly keeps order and sunny dispositions among her youthful charges, taking time to listen to each one. Perhaps this explains why the children from the Belleville Y day camp seemed to be the happiest kids on the beach yesterday despite the weather.

Exhibition Space Greatly Expanded

TRENTON (Staff) — An ambitious project to promote Trenton and area at this region's annual showcase — the Quinte Exhibition — is rapidly taking shape.

The project — 8,600 square feet of displays — will occupy the entire curling rink building in Belleville's Exhibition Park, making the Trenton Chamber of Commerce the largest exhibitor of any organization participating in the 1970 Quinte Exhibition.

Chamber of Commerce manager Jack Wilson told The Intelligencer that 20 of the 56 booths have already been spoken for, with many in blocks of two or three.

The booths, which measure 10 feet by 10 feet, are designed for commercial or industrial displays and will be open to the public from 1 to 11 p.m. during the exhibition's five-day stand from August 18 to 22 inclusive.

Jack Wilson described the project as a way of saying "this is Trenton and area." \

He termed it an experiment to see if one municipality could fill that much space and noted that the Quinte Exhibition's directors were hopeful other communities would follow the chamber's lead. Meanwhile chamber members face the task of selling the 56 booths — eight times the number organized by the chamber last year.

"We assume that 5,000 people go through the building each day," Mr. Wilson said, "so a display booth is an ideal way to let people know who you are and what products you have to offer."

Total cost for one booth, including a five-day vehicle pass, is $25.

"There is no doubt we will fill the space because this is best opportunity all year for business to display products before the public," concluded Mr. Wilson.

Playground Open House Thursday

But the program, running from 6.30 to 7.45 p.m. is not a wedge to widen the generation gap.

It is designed to bring parents and children together for an hour or so of fun; and show the parents what goes on at the playgrounds during the day.

This is the second year for parents versus children night, and last year's event drew crowds of people to city playgrounds to learn about the activities their children enjoy during the summer.

Prime function of the night is to give parents a chance to meet the leaders, and the leaders a chance to become acquainted with the mothers and fathers of the children in their care.

Playground neighbors without children in the programs are also welcomed and invited to see what the recreation department's project has to offer city youngsters.

"Fun games," involving both parents and children in non-competitive activity are scheduled for Thursday night and craft work done by the children will be on display.

Belleville Students on Tour

Belleville high school students, part of a group of 21 'Young Voyageurs' from Eastern Ontario on an exchange visit to New Brunswick, see potatoes being trimmed before processing at McCain Foods of Florenceville, N.B., Canada's largest packer of frozen French fried potatoes. (L-R) Anne Walsh of R. R. 1, Marysville, Lucy Terry of R. R. 1, Consecon, Lanaa LaChappelle of 195 North Street, and Eric Benn of 104 Frank Street. The Young Voyageur program provides young Canadians with an opportunity to meet, to know and to develop a closer understanding of Canadians living and working in regions other than their own.

His Carriage Not Horseless

SHANNONVILLE (Staff) — There's one man near here who's solved some of the problems Urban-area motorists participants of the automotive age, entirely might profitably take stock of his solution.

It's a day and age when automobiles may be dandy on long hauls, but on short local trips — snooping for instance — they can burn extra gas shotting around in search of convenient parking. They can accumulate parking tickets.

But Ron Kerr has no such problems when he goes shopping.

His answer to automotive problems is simple: He got a horse and buggy.

Ron, who lives at Blessington Corners north of here on the Shannonville Gravel Road, has been using the horse-drawn vehicle for "quite a while."

The Corbyville distillery worker uses it on "local jaunts and trips to the general store — three miles away at Read. His car sits in the driveway — unless his wife wants it for trips to Belleville.

Travelling by buggy, he says, is an enjoyable, relaxing means of getting around - and enjoying - the countryside.

He also is his own mechanic. Among Ron's talents is the ability — now a rarity — to shoe horses.

In the Shadows

Perhaps there is no greater concern in life than that of parents for the welfare of sons and daughters — particularly the latter — making their way alone in the big city or travelling alone.

CBC television recently showed film of some of Canada's restless new breed of transients. This year it is estimated about a million of them will be on the road. Two young women interviewed seemed happy about their experience, one saying they had had no difficulty obtaining rides — mainly with truck drivers — and they had encountered no trouble.

But it is not always like this, as we learn from time to time. Remember for example the young university couple from Montreal who hitchhiked to Mexico a year or two ago, later went missing and were subsequently found dead in a Missouri field — victims of some psychopathic gunman.

The United States affords many other similar tales of people waylaid and done to death, or instances where the victims have courted trouble by seeking rides in vehicles with strangers.

It happens in Canada too, if less frequently. An example only last week was the death of an 18-year-old girl from California, and severe injuries to a girl friend from the same area of California, after they fell or were pushed from a moving vehicle on a lonely country road near Montreal. The girls had been touring Canada, had visited Man and His World and had been in daily telephone communication with their parents — then this tragedy, far from home.

Another case was that of Yvonne Dorion, 25, of Shediac, New Brunswick, who in March last year was stabbed in the back by an unknown assailant as she walked to her lodging apartment. Miss Dorion, in Toronto recently for a hearing of her appeal for compensation by the Law Enforcement Compensation Board, is still partially crippled and mentally distressed.

Such happenings are a product of our day, with its floating, mobile population, and of such factors as the increasing incidence of mental illness and the breakdown of family life. They are a concern not only of sociologists and the medical profession, but more immediately of those families who are trying to maintain family cohesiveness, integrity and the protection of life and limb.

Diplomatic Plums

There has been a bit of a flap of late among external affairs personnel that Canadian diplomacy and the security of a job in this sphere were being downgraded and threatened by the closing of a number of missions.

Canadian representation was ended for example in one or two of the remoter parts of Africa; at the same time there remain many diplomatic plums, as revealed in a list of contemporary postings. They illustrate a cameo of Canada's extensive representation abroad.

Here are a few examples: Alfred P. Bissonnet, 55, Ambassador to Indonesia, to become Ambassador to Argentina; he is a former trade commissioner to Venezuela (1947-51), deputy director of the External Affairs Department's European division, to become Ambassador to Cuba (a thought: why was he not given a European posting?); John A. Dougan, 49, High Commissioner to Guyana, to become High Commissioner to New Zealand.

Many of the appointments are of men in their forties and there are a few in the fifties. An exception is Ronald M. Macdonnell, 61, High Commissioner to New Zealand who is taking up a similar position in Guyana.

The youngest is Donald Campbell who at 39 moves from the position of head of the External Affairs commercial policy division, to become Ambassador to Venezuela.

Some of the appointments raise questions. One can understand Sidney A. Freifeld, 59, who doubtless is fluent in Spanish, being transferred from Uruguay (as charge d'affaires) to Bolivia as Ambassador, but why send a predominantly French-speaking Pierre Charpentier, 44, a department representative at Laval University, to become ambassador to Spanish-speaking Peru and Bolivia? Or does he speak Spanish also?

Then there is Francois-Xavier Houde, 47, Ambassador to Peru and Bolivia, being recalled from those exotic lands to languish as consul-general amid the concrete and big city tension of Boston.

But then he would not have to worry about earthquakes in Boston. Who knows, maybe Ottawa knows best!

The Anatomy of Insurrection

Winnipeg Free Press

Stories of British troops looting and smashing homes in Belfast's Falls Road district have a familiar ring in these times. When the Toronto rock festival was being challenged because of its prices, a group went upon trouble announcing that they would get in without paying — no matter what they had to do, and that if the police try to stop us, they'll have cause for a riot." It is the argument for the case that all men but us are repressive because they will not allow us to do whatever we want to do however we want to do it.

In Belfast's Falls Road district, arms were cached and protected and the purpose of the arms was in growing degree, insurrection. A group bent upon armed violence — after ample evidence has been unearthed that they intend armed violence — complains that the soldiers, under fire while in search of caches of arms meant to kill them, "looted and smashed."

The looting can be dismissed. The homes in question have nothing in them that anyone else would need. The smashing is a different matter. It is not unlike our times that professors' windows are shown as sign that smashing took place — in streets where there is no fighting has taken place. In such streets a lot of things get smashed when a house fighting takes place. It is almost inevitable that witnesses who have aspired at soldiers from their houses should later accuse the soldiers of having damaged their property.

There is a well-established revolutionary art of word here. It is very simple: Start violence from which the people cannot escape, and their bitterness and fear which they have helped to create and they are always levelled against the people who have been forced to set to defend society in general. The instruments they use to make themselves heard are politicians who fear them and fear for themselves if they denounce them. It is a trap by which the innocent suffer more than the guilty.

The Beauty of Wales

Happily, this world still offers places and regions that are far from the madding crowd. Such a spot is the village of Beddgelert in Caernarvonshire. The little Welsh community is located at the confluence of two clear mountain streams, the Colwyn and the Glaslyn, in a basin amid rocky heights and windswept fells. Summer of course brings the tourists, yet Beddgelert retains its unspoiled atmosphere and the mountain region all around still has its aura of remoteness and mysticism.

'Jesus Freaks'—Genuine Converts

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In the July 4 issue of The Intelligencer an article appeared titled "Jesus Freaks making Scene at Hippie-haven at Berkeley." I am certain the whole narrative must have sounded puzzling if not bizarre to most readers. But before making any further comment let me quote a few passages:

"They are called 'Jesus Freaks,' a term originally applied in derision, but which they gladly accept." . . .

"Normally they are known as the Christian World Liberation Front. They began appearing around Berkeley about a year ago, adding a new element to a campus of 28,000 students."

. . . Displaying their signs JESUS SAVES and speaking on sidewalks."

"I have been through 'grass, LSD and speed and it just freaked me out and down" said one of them, but Jesus is very true." Others tell stories of having been through oriental mysticism before finding greater satisfaction in Jesus. The, "straight church," they say "is stuffy and dull, has lost its sense of spirit and the mysteries of joy."

All these may sound very strange to the average churchgoer. But I believe these young people are genuine converts to Christ. What makes them so different is the fact that they have lived a radically different life prior to their conversion. The transformation they have experienced does not change any character completely overnight.

It takes time to get adjusted and to grow in the new life. There are not on the street telling others about their joyful experience. They are witnessing to the best of their ability.

Personal experiences with God is not new; it has been with the church from the beginning. millions have experienced it. "If you walk with all your heart, you shall find me" says it in the Bible. Finding God is to the individual, it is not limited to any one denomination, in this respect it is truly ecumenical.

Their open - air preaching is not out of line either. America has grossly prostituted through the many open - air services in former years.

It is generally believed that open air revival meetings such as those led by John Wesley and others have saved England from the horrors of the revolution such as some years later ravaged France.

I hope these "hippies" with the Bible in their hands will get a real break and assistance to continue their unusual kind of evangelistic work.

Swimming Pools and Phosphates

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am concerned about the necessity of building bigger and better swimming pools on the shores of our "Great Lakes"! Why should our money be spent to enable us to have these "sterile" tourist attractions?

Why not put this same money into the improving of our bays?

Often having tried with great success one of the new no-phosphate detergents, I tried to get some more from one of the large department stores, only to find it had all been sent back to the warehouse because it wasn't selling!

I find it difficult to understand the apathy of the women shoppers. Is it necessary for our government to have to print the labels of these demanding phosphate detergents? Why don't seemingly intelligent adults understand the danger to our very existance these high phosphate detergents cause?

What kind of a heritage to our children is a man-made polluted pond?

How about a few more truck loads of sand for the public removing public bay shoreline.

How about all of us acting a little more like responsible adults and not being brainwashed by the commercials — thinking only of our polluted waterways before you buy your next box of washing detergent.

CONCERNED.

Editor's Note: If the writer is referring to The Intelligencer article on the growing popularity of swimming pools in the city, these pools are privately-owned pools on private property.

Pop Buffs Puff 'Pot' As Police Look the Other Way

Hamilton Spectator

At the Pop music festival at the CNE Stadium the other day, the air was said to be pervaded with the sweet smell of marijuana. Obviously some of the devotees reasoned that there was safety in numbers and the police would hesitate to enforce the law.

Had the police moved into such a crowd searching for smokers they might have caused a riot, with possibly serious violence and injuries.

By not taking such action, the police showed discretion. Yet there is the disturbing thought that the law can be broken with impunity if part of a crowd does so. Those who are convicted of "possession" are usually fined $200 or $300, and get themselves a criminal record.

The prevalence of marijuana smoking is but one of the malfy symptoms of our sick society. When a society suffers from deep - centred moral sickness, arguments for and against the legalization of marijuana smoking are pure sophistry.

In the meantime, it would be futile for us to recommend that a law that cannot be enforced is worse than no law at all.

Provincial Centres Needed

Women's Prison in Kingston Should Be Closed: Sen. Croll

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Newspaper readers who make a habit of looking at the court reports are familiar with the phrase, "two years less one day." It is the sentence handed out by judges when they want to strike a compromise between being severe and sending the prisoner to a penitentiary.

If the sentence is less than two years it can be served in a provincial reformatory instead of a federal prison.

Women who are sentenced to two years or more must do their time in the women's prison at Kingston. The exception, a recent one, is that if they are alcoholics or drug addicts they may be put in the new federal correction centre for women at Matsqui, B.C.

Normally any woman with a long term to serve, whether she lives in Prince Edward Island or in British Columbia, goes to Kingston. At latest report there are 74 inmates in the women's prison there now.

This is a bad arrangement. Most of the 74 must be so far removed that any relative or friend who might take an interest in visiting and trying to help, cannot do so.

Senator David Croll is one who believes that the women's prison in Kingston should be closed, and that arrangements should be made to have the inmates serve their terms in their own provinces. As backing for his belief he cited, speaking, in the Senate, the finding of a royal commission that the Kingston women's prison, "... is unjustified, particularly if arrangements can be made with the provincial authorities to provide custody and maintenance for such prisoners in their respective provinces. Inquiries in the various provinces lead us to believe that there would be no great difficulty in making such arrangements."

The shocking fact is the date of the document he cited. He was reading from the report of the Fauteux Committee which tabled its recommendations in 1938.

It made good sense 32 years ago. It makes good sense now. The catch is that nothing has happened.

It is fortunate that Senator Croll, at age 70, is still capable of youthful anger when he sees stalling and bumbling in government. If he and others like him keep prodding we might finally see an end to the concentration camp at Kingston.

Population Problem As U.S. Cities Pursue Big Renovation Plans

Regina Leader Post

By the year 2000, it is predicted, something like 86 per cent of the population will live on one per cent of the land in the United States and Canada.

The phenomenon of this century is a reversal of what took place in the 19th century, when pioneers left the cities to seek new opportunities on the free or cheap lands in the West. Today, growing numbers of the underprivileged are leaving rural communities and heading for the industrial centres, there to create what Lloyd Rodwin calls "a fighting has taken place. In such streets a lot of things get smashed when a house fighting takes place. It is almost inevitable that witness who have aspired at soldiers from their houses should later accuse the soldiers of having damaged their property.

There is a well-established revolutionary art of word here. It is very simple: Start violence from which the people cannot escape, and their bitterness and fear which they have helped to create and they are always levelled against the people who have been forced to set to defend society in general. The instruments they use to make themselves heard are politicians who fear them and fear for themselves if they denounce them. It is a trap by which the innocent suffer more than the guilty.

Today, growing numbers of the underprivileged are leaving rural communities and heading for the industrial centres, there to create what Lloyd Rodwin calls "a challenge and opportunity for progress or a cultural time bomb.

At the same time there is a counter - movement, according to a recent report from the U.S. on the movement of people. The middle classes are abandoning the urban centres in droves, mainly because the opportunities for decent housing are increasingly being purchased from the Illinois Central Railroad, one of three companies participating in the venture.

Illinois Centre will have the ingredients to make it a self-sufficient community, from residential units to offices to shops to schools to parks. It will be larger than most cities, with a permanent population of between 40 000 and 50.000 and a daytime working population of about 80.000.

Not since the reconstruction period following the Great Fire of 1871 has any development of such magnitude been attempted in the private sector. Total cost an estimated $1 billion and take about 20 years to complete.

James Muir of Republican City, Neb., is visiting his brother, William Muir and Mrs. John Muir in this city. He is an old Belleville boy and says he has successfully private enterprise can contribute to the solution is one of the most important issues facing the U.S. and Canada in the 1970s.

Fortunately, there are numerous examples of what private enterprise, in co-operation with local government, can do. Pittsburgh's renovation of its Golden Triangle is probably the most well-known. Others include the Golden Gateway in San Francisco, model cities programs in Gary, Ind., and Seattle and the revitalization of the area around Waterfront.

One of the most ambitious of all, however, is "Illinois Centre," now being built within walking distance of Chicago's famed business district. "The Loop." along the south bank of the Chicago River and overlooking Lake Michigan. What makes this project unusual is that it will be located on 99 acres purchased from the Illinois Central Railroad, one of three companies participating in the venture.

Illinois Centre will have the ingredients to make it a self-sufficient community, from residential units to offices to shops to schools to parks. It will be larger than most cities, with a permanent population of between 40 000 and 50.000 and a daytime working population of about 80.000.

Non-White Immigration

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Race relations played an important part in the British election last month. The Conservative government now in power is slow down the rate of immigration.

In Canada, we do not need to look across the Atlantic to see some of the problems that arise when people from the non-white Commonwealth, countries try to better themselves by moving away from poverty to more affluent countries.

In the past six years there has been a remarkable increase in migration to Canada from the Commonwealth Caribbean.

Six years ago we received 2,773 people: three years ago the figure was un to 8,916; last year it was 16,416.

The figures are for annual immigration from British Honduras, Jamaica, Guyana and the Caribbean islands.

We might put ourselves on the back, as Canadians, for helping more each year to relieve overcrowding on islands like Barbados, which has one of the highest population densities in the world and one where nearly enough jobs for its people.

It should be a small pat, though, because what we have been doing hurt us as well as helped. For the past several years, has been to assess immigrants on their skills and educational level, and those that are officially ignored, we ask and usually get, enough cash to serve a useful purpose in Canadian society.

We take the cream. We do exactly the people a poor country can least afford to lose.

This problem emerged clearly from he evidence taken by the Senate committee on foreign affairs, when it made a special study of Canada - Caribbean relations. The committee was headed by the chairman, Senator John B. Aird, finds that the brain drain to Canada "... is a loss the Caribbean countries can ill afford."

It is a problem with no perfect solution. One idea which would go a long way toward a solution is suggested in the report.

Aid given at Canadian taxpayers expense to educate Caribbean students for professions and skilled jobs might best be given, it is proposed by personnel of the Senate study at the University of the West Indies.

This money needed to bring one West Indian student of Canada for study at a university would be enough to maintain several at university in the Caribbean. Not only does such a method make the dollar stretch farther in practical aid, it removes the temptation for the student to stay in Canada in preference to going back to help his own people.

Cheques for some $20,000,000 started going into the mail as the Canadian government made its first... family allowance payments to mothers across the country 25 years ago today—in 1945.

The payments were registered called for a payment of $252,560,000 annually to be spent towards the maintenance, care, training, education and advancement of children. All, families with dependent children up to 18 years of age were entitled to receive the "baby bonus" irrespective of the income of the family.

Prince Edward Parks Are Busy This Year

PICTON (Staff) — This summer an increasing number of tourists and local residents are strolling through Prince Edward's four provincial parks.

Superintendent of Outlet Beach Park, Robert Davison, reported an attendance of 110,805 persons at the beach since early May.

He revealed that this figure represents an increase over Outlet Park attendance last summer at this time. An increasing number of campers also are pitching their tents at Outlet Beach this season.

At North Beach 28,872 swimmers and sun bathers so far have enjoyed park facilities while 32,743 persons have visited Sandbanks Park.

An estimated 10,825 visitors have picnicked at Lake on the Mountain Park since opening this season. The county park season began in early May this year.

Attendance in the county's four provincial parks exceeds last year's attendance to date by an over-all count of 10,000 persons.

Employed in the four parks, 56 staff members, including permanent and casual employees, strive to keep beaches and camping and picnic areas ship - shape for tourists.

Outlet Beach is raked daily for blood.

"We've managed to keep ahead of this problem so far," commented Mr. Davison.

These maldorous dead fish, which wash ashore also are raked away in Sandbanks Park when necessary.

Employees patrol the beaches, sweeping out change houses and emptying trash containers which discourage vacationing litterbugs.

Mr. Davison observed that this daily paper pickup prompts most park visitors to put their trash in one of the many cans provided on the beach.

Despite the cool and rainy weather that has prevailed in Prince Edward during June and July, tourists continue to throng to the county's parks during their holidays.

Trenton Runway To Be Extended

TRENTON (Staff) — A CFB Trenton spokesman announced this morning that the east - west runway at the base will be extended by 2,000 feet.

He said that the extension — 1,000 feet to each end of the main runway — has been approved by the federal government.

The extension is part of the Canadian Force's modernization program and was anticipated before the purchase of the four Boeing 707 long range jets," the spokesman stressed.

Total cost of the extension is not yet kpown, but construction plans are now under study and Defense Construction Ltd. will conduct subsoil tests in the near future before actual construction begins.

Then Defense Construction Ltd. will draw up the plans for the extension and call for tenders from contractors.

"It is expected that the extension to one end of the runway should commence this year," the spokesman added.

The construction program may boost the local employment situation.

The 2,000 foot addition will increase the length of the runway to 10,000 feet, making it one 5 of the longest among Canadian Forces installations.

The project will not affect the GRD road, the planned hall of Canadian aviation history to the west of the road or the railway line to the north east of the base.

Accompanying the extension will be minor alteration to the existing runway lighting system.

Frankcliffe Hall ran aground in the same in 1966 and hit a shoal in Lake Superior in the summer of 1967.

Tuesday, the Eastcliffe Hall, bound from Sorel, Que., to Saginaw, Mich., with a load of pig-iron, struck the shoal and sank in three minutes shortly after 4 a.m.

It rested outside the channel towards the American side of the seaway but still in Canadian waters.

A U.S. coastguard spokesman said the ship was out of the channel and "apparently went to the wrong side of the buoy."

One of the survivors, Patrick Tollins, 31, of St. Catherines, Ont., a wheelsman, said the ship hit a mud bank before the disaster and spent 10 minutes getting free.

The vessel had run aground again about 13 mhutes later as the watch was changing. "We really hit hard. I felt the ship gon forward as if we hit rocks."

The collision, which ripped the right side of the ship, sent crewmm scurrying inside to rouse those still asleep, Mr. Tollins said.

An attempt to lower the lift boats was abandoned as the Eastcliffe Hall was listing sharply.

Mr. Tollins and eight others on the after deck had jumped for their lives.

Third engineer John Scott of Montreal said he was down below in the engine room chatting with second engineer Marcel Gendron, 41, of Batiscan, Que., when he felt the ship tipsure.

"Then water came pouring throuh the skylight. We couldn't open the door. We were sucked under the water and then a vortex blew us right throuh the skylight."

Other survivers included Mr. Gendron; wheelsman Samuel Youngs, 38, deckhands Gordon Crewe, 30, Edwin Fudge, 32, Donald MacDonald, 27, and Gil Gordon Ball, 29, all of Ramea, Nfld.; third mate Joseph Dupuis, 43, of Midland, Ont.; porter Walter Durmuller, 25, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont.; and daymman Melvin Harris, 26, of Burnt Island, Nfld.

Walter Wells, 64, owner of a nearby motel, said he and his wife were awakened by a "kind of muffled explosion."

They had heard people shouting: "Help! Help! For God s sake somebody send help."

Police, summonded by Mrs. Wells, rushed to the scene in launches and pulled the survivors from the water.

Constable Harold Theriault said:

"It was dark and we couldn't see them. We followed the shouts and hollers. We couldn't see them until we were on top of them."

The seaway was closed Tuesday forcing 29 ships to wait as divers worked around the wreck.

But it was reopened Tuesday night and one of the first vessels to pass the scene was the Beavercliffe Hall, another lake freighter owned by Hall Corporation.

Crewmen of the Beavercliffe Hall stood on the wheelhouse looking down at the four masts of the Eastcliffe Hall rising only 10 feet above the water surface.

Captives Flown From Tiger-cage Prison Island

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Air Force transport planes have flown about 500 prisoners from Con Son Island, site of the tiger-cage security cells, to Saigon for release, South Vietnamese officials said Tuesday.

The airlift that started Sunday "had nothing to do with the criticism of the so-called tiger-cages," one South Vietnamese official said. He added that the prisoners had served their sentences and were flown to Saigon's Chi Hoa prison to complete processing before their release.

The Experts Say

Place in Home Should Be Designed for Children

EDMONTON (CP) — Children should have a special place designed for them in the home, says Donna Bagdan, a home design consultant with the Alberta government.

"Most rooms in the house are designed for adult living habits. Children deserve a spot of their own, even if it is only a shared bedroom or playroom."

Mrs. Bagdan, who studied interior design at the University of Manitoba, said the children's area need not be large or expensively decorated.

"In fact, a room can grow with a child from nursery to about age 12."

For example, a desk made a good change table in a nursery, a fort for toddlers and a work area for school-age children.

"Or a desk can be built for small children and the surface moved up on adjustable brackets as the child grows."

If a family is building a home, the bedroom should be small for the children and the space saved should go to making a room just off the kitchen that could be used as a playroom.

And if the room was going to have windows, they should be low ones so that a child could see outside.

In building a room a family should work from a plan that they can add to. The basic plan should last for eight to 10 years.

In the beginning a room may only be painted and a light fixture installed. A rug could be added as children get older.

Mrs. Bagdan said nurseries should provide a sense of cleanliness and freshness. She suggested keeping colors light, but not white.

"A touch of aqua or blue or green into white paint gives the unrestful glare of a pure-white room. You might want to use light colours on walls instead, but the blue-greens are more restful and easier to work with for other room colors."

She said toddlers and young children like bright colors. "Think of the colors in a toy store—that's what is appealing to a child."

The mother of a four-year-old son, Mrs. Bagdan says children's furniture designs are generally poor.

"If you are capable of making units yourself, I would suggest you look through European design magazines. They have some excellent ideas, such as a crib that converts to a two-seat sofa later."

Furniture should be versatile and easy to maintain. And you should look for rounded corners which help prevent bumps and cuts if a child falls on them.

"You ought to think of the furniture as the kind the child can play with, play on, store in and store on."

E. Germany Divorce Rate Increases

EAST BERLIN (Reuters)— East German courts have been called on to help save marriages in a country believed to have one of the five highest divorce rates in the world.

In 1968, a total of 28,661 marriages were dissolved here while 19,554 couples married.

The number of marriages has been steadily decreasing since 1961, but the divorce rate is growing.

At a recent plenary meeting of the country's supreme court, a draft bill was approved on the "educational activity of courts to save marriages," the official news agency ADN reported.

Werner Strassdeit, chairman of the supreme court committee for civil, family and workers rights, said that stronger and more purposeful influences on marriage should be taken by the state and society "to accomplish our socialist family policy."

Many Ideas for Hospital Efficiency Applauded

TORONTO (CP) — For years the hospital administration career of Gordon Friesen, a native of Saskatchewan, seemed the complete proof that "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country."

Mr. Friesen, 61 and now a resident of Washington, D.C., has finally seen his ideas for hospital efficiency utilized and applauded. Once he was called "a crackpot and a quack."

His main idea for efficiency has always been that a hospital should be centred around the patient's needs rather than having the patient fit into the hospital's routine.

Mr. Friesen has developed a food monorail system that has brought this idea into practice. "Why do we wake a patient at 6 a.m. to give him his breakfast?" he asks.

The monorail brings the food to the patient when he wants it. This results in hospital expenses being cut because the food is prepared and frozen in the building instead of being brought in from outside. Its added advantage is that the patient gets a hot meal.

The monorail is planned into Toronto's Etobicoke and Scarborough hospitals. Mr. Friesen recalls that 20 or 30 years ago similar suggestions made him highly unpopular.

While working as administrator of Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital, he had the hospital taking in laundry from other hospitals and making its own drugs and pills. Such tactics, he says, caused shock and consternation among his more conservative colleagues.

After Kitchener, Mr. Friesen was employed by a group of dissatisfied miners in the Appalachian hills of Kentucky. After setting up 19 hospitals for them, he suddenly found his ideas had caught on.

He began an international consultant firm in 1954 that now sends 35 people all over the world to help set up hospitals.

Mr. Friesen is a lecturer at five universities, including Columbia, and two medical schools. He has a plethora of awards, serves as consultant to the surgeon-general of the United States Navy and writes articles for medical publications.

His age does not deter him from implementing his ideas. His ideas—and he still has many—of future hospitals are a long way from his memories of the treatment his impoverished mother received in an early Saskatchewan hospital.

Hospitals of the future, he believes, will stress preventive medicine. There will no longer be a mixture of public wards and private rooms, but only private rooms. All doctors will have their offices in the hospital which would incorporate university medicine, now in an "ivory tower," he said.

He predicts that in the future each patient will be monitored by an electronic computer.

Part of Mr. Friesen's dave to improve the mechanics of a hospital came from the memories of his mother. She was "poor but spotless, and she was appalled to be in a ward."

"Never assume that the poor aren't as sensitive as the rich."

"I don't agree with employing special nurses at all, unless the man is rich and wants the attention. Everybody's entitled to the best we can give them."

Some Physical Reason For Temper Outbursts

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was very much interested in the letter from "Wife of a Maniac," because my husband behaved very much like hers. He used to break dishes and furniture, kick holes in the wall and scream obscenities at everyone. I was unable to figure out why his personality was changing. He had always been so easy-going.

One evening he lost his temper when a well known political figure was making a speech on TV. He began to scream at the set and carry on like a lunatic. Our pediatrician happened to be in the house checking the baby at the time. He took me aside and suggested that when my husband calmed down I should insist that he get a complete physical checkup including an encephalogram. It was the smartest thing I ever did.

Our family physician sent my husband to a neurologist who discovered a brain abnormality which he said might be causing his violent temper outbursts. My husband is now taking a drug called Dilantin and it has changed his life — and mine. I bless that pediatrician every day of my life, Ann. I hope you will print this letter. It might help someone else. — DENVER MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR DEN MOTHER: I received several letters describing similar incidents. The drug Dilantin has proved very successful in the treatment of epilepsy and other forms of brain abnormality. Dilantin, of course, must be obtained through prescription and taken under a doctor's observation.

Thank you for your letter. It once again points up the necessity for a physical checkup in cases of extreme personality changes. People should not be written off as stubborn, punitive or rock-headed without first exploring the possibility that there is an organic reason for unusual behavior.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My daughter and her baby are living with us until her husband comes back from Vietnam. Her in-laws come over every Sunday, rain or shine. They are nice folks and we like them, but my husband and I don't feel that we should have to spend every Sunday of our lives entertaining these people. We don't want to hurt their feelings, Ann. How about some advice on how to handle this hot potato? — TRAPPED IN TENNESSEE.

DEAR TRAPPED: If your daughter has no transportation of her own, offer to drive her to their house on alternate Sundays. This move cuts the problem in half immediately.

And if you and your husband want to go somewhere — go. You are not obligated to stay at home every Sunday to entertain uninvited guests.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Mom says I am crazy to write to you about turtles because your column is for people, but I have something important to say.

I have found that the people who sell turtles in dime stores and pet stores don't know much about them. Turtles are fish and meat eaters. Just put a piece of raw hamburger or fish in front of a turtle and watch him snap at it. That food they sell in stores is junk. A turtle can stave to death on it. — JUST ME.

DEAR JUST: In behalf of every turtle in the U.S.A., plus Canada, Mexico and Puerto Rico, I thank you.

Unwed Mothers Really Do Care

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am just writing on behalf of all the unwed mothers in the world. I am referring to the recent letter about a foster mother who took in an eight - month - old Indian baby.

She stated that these babies were "unwanted and unloved". How could anyone who loves children write such a cruel and untrue statement? I just had a beautiful baby boy who would have delighted any mother's heart. He's all I could ever dream of, and I love him more than you'll ever know. I would have kept him, but I'm still in school and have no way of supporting him.

So please, Foster Mother, think again. Think of the agony we go through when we are forced to give up our precious little ones for their sake and happiness. "Miss" Mother.

P. S. And for the adopting mother who has my son, thank you for loving him as I do.

* * *

Dear "Miss" Mother: You are right. Our unwed mothers are in danger of being deeply hurt, whichever way the decision goes. Parting with a little lively bundle of one's own flesh and blood takes courage.

And by far the larger proportion of children born out of wedlock are indeed wanted by those mothers who simply can't offer them a happy normal home with two parents.

* * *

Dear Doris: A reader was plagued by the worship/all attention of a much younger little girl. This was brought into sharp focus when a cousin 10 years younger than I came to see me.

We were indulging in reminiscences. She said that after she grew up she realized what a pest she must have been.

"I used to think it was simply wonderful to go to your house," she said. "I must have been an awful nuisance following you around — but you were so impatient and you never told me to 'get lost' (or its equivalent). I've never forgotten the fun you made for me. I thought you were wonderful."

It may take the bread a long time to come back on the waters of time — but it is sweet when it does, isn't it? — Old Mushy.

Dear Mushy: When we give unexpected good humor to our so-called little pests, we know not what we do.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am writing your column because so many read it and perhaps they will have the answer to my questions.

I would like to know if there were any doll houses and furniture made in Canada in the early years (1930s). I have tried to obtain one to no avail.

I would also like to know if anyone has a set of the Thorne Quadruplet dolls she would part with. — Doll Lover.

Dear Doll Lover: For the past 200 years lovers of children have been fashioning toys for them to play with — so say the Canadiana books. I would hazard a guess that doll houses and furniture have been around at least since then.

Perhaps readers can unearth more for us — or a set of the Quints? — Doris.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Betty: "Are we going to spend our whole vacation just driving around?"

Mikey: "I'm tired of looking at trees."

Father: "Stop whining and be quiet. We have to get to the motel by 7 o'clock."

Father: "This red line on the road map shows where we're going. You can help me by checking the town as we go past them to be sure we're on the right road. After we get to this town, we'll start looking for a park so we can stop and have a picnic."

Long stretches of road and scenery can be monotonous for children on a vacation trip. Let them be navigators so the road will seem to lead somewhere definite.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallie Akey of Point Anne recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with an "Open House".

The Akeys were married June 28, 1920 in Tweed, with the Rev. Johnson officiating. Mrs. Akey was formerly Nellie Gertrude Cox. Mr. and Mrs. Akey moved from Solsgirth, Ontario to Point Anne in 1922 where Mr. Akey was employed by Canada Cement Company until 19 years ago when he retired.

The Akeys have four sons, Morley of Belleville; Maxwell of Trenton; Llewellie and Ross of Point Anne. They also have nine grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Akey left July 4 for a month's holiday in Edinburgh, Scotland.

South American Fashion Items Popular for Fall

NEW YORK (CP) — Two of last season's top fashion items are holdovers for fall, 1970. The South American gaucho look has returned with accessories impact and the Mexican-inspired poncho is back, though with slightly lessened emphasis.

The gaucho look was everywhere at the recent New York showings—possibly because it bridges the skirt-length problem. The straight, wide pants, well below the knee, provide a psychological transition from mini to midi. Also, the effect is avant garde.

Women will have to be somewhat extroverted to wear the total gaucho look of pants, crop jacket, shirt and wide, authentic gaucho belt as shown by Davidow's new Argentinian designer.

Anne Klein really went all out for the gauchos. Her outfits were mostly intended for casual wear, like her leather gaucho pants with a cheetah print blouse and a leather vest. But she did include several that could be worn as street suits, such as grey tweed gaucho pants with a brown leather battle jacket.

Other casual gaucho looks included Robert Hall's flecked tweed pants and soft crepe shirt, with a slender and centre-fringed leather belt, and his purple plaid pants with a mauve sweater.

The gaucho is also for city wear. Modifications have turned the look into smart pant-suits or pant-dresses that convey extra-feminine women could wear. One of the best was by Kasper for Joan Leslie. The jacket of the black-and-white donegal tweed gaucho suit was bordered with black re-use braid. Modella combines grey flannel pants with a banana-color safari jacket over a printed crepe de chine blouse. Suzy Perette's tweed gaucho dress with wide leather belt and patch pockets was matched with its own fringed shawl.

Big unlined capes teamed up with gaucho pants in the collections of both Anne Klein and Junior Sophisticates. And many of the new jump-suits used gaucho-length pants. A western influence also appeared in fringed gaucho costumes. Several were laced up the front of their high-riding gaucho pants.

Gauchos even popped up in late-day moods, such as Calvin Klein's high-waisted gaucho pants and nailhead-studded vest, worn with a stocklike crepe shirt. Perette teamed up brown velvet gaucho pants with a cream satin top and red-and-silver ribboned belt. Junior Sophisticates showed jewelled gaucho jump-suits for evening.

All of which shows that the gaucho is versatile, popular and likely to find its way, in one of its varied forms, into a lot of wardrobes.

"The fringed poncho now is moving into high fashion," fashion expert Eleanor Lambert reported at the American Design Showings. Last season it was mostly a casual wardrobe item and worn more by the young.

The full poncho isn't a dominant factor, but when it appeared it was effective. Some ponchos were dropped from the shoulders to the waistline, making a skirt, but most designers used them in the usual cape style.

But it was in the evening collections that the poncho shone, especially in Malcolm Starr's huge chiffon ponchos, ostrich-bordered and worn with matching floor-length gown.

Array of Salad Filled Tomatoes

By MARY MOORE

Canadian tomatoes, luscious, sun-ripened and red are ready for you to serve to your families. Mary Moore gives you a hearty lunch or supper salad that has eye and flavor appeal with a big tomato for a foundation.

Luscious sun - ripened Canadian field tomatoes are coming into their season.

They fill so many needs. Their flavor is their major virtue. Their low - calorie content is a comfort to reducers. Their Vitamin C content is high and durable. The various ways in which they can be prepared and served is well - nigh unlimited.

I have used them as a basis for a lunch or supper salad plate to make the most of them for a starter.

SALAD FILLED TOMATOES
(serves 3)

¼ cup uncooked elbow macaroni (see below)
2 cups water
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup diced, cooked ham or chicken or turkey or broken up canned salmon or tuna.
1 tbsp. finely chopped chives or green onion
2 tbsps. finely chopped cucumber
2 tbsps. mayonnaise or miracle whip
3 medium - large tomatoes, washed but not peeled
20 serrated slices cucumber

Cook elbow macaroni in water and salt 9 minutes until tender. Drain and chill. Cool water and drain and dry. In a bowl add to diced ham or chicken or turkey or salmon or tuna along with the chives or green onion and chopped cucumber. Add sufficient mayonnaise or miracle whip to moisten well, remembering that this is the dressing too to flavor the tomatoes.

Wash and dry tomatoes and with sharp paring knife carefully remove the core. Now cut through to within ¼ inch of bottom to make eight sections, place in individual salad bowls and gently open up to look like flower petals. Fill opened up tomatoes with filling and garnish sides with cucumber slices. Chill. Now served ours with hot rolls fresh from the oven (see yesterday).

Long Term Association

Downtown Business Community Has Always Been Civic Leader

The downtown merchants of Belleville were originally organized into the Merchants' Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

From this early beginning, the merchants formed an association separate from the C of C. The Belleville Downtown Association is the most recent of many names chosen by the merchants and 1970 marks their second year of operation.

So far this year there are 75 members of the BDA, whose major aim is to improve conditions, and update methods of business in the downtown shopping district.

J. B. Corke, past-president of the DBA, explained that the association "was interested in promoting all aspects of downtown, not only the stores, but the problems facing the downtown area, such as traffic."

BRYSON LESLIE

Continuing, he explained that through various studies and recommendations to city council, the BDA is trying to have through-traffic eliminated for the most part so that just the shoppers would travel downtown.

In a comment a few weeks ago, Alderman Art Keegan explained that the Front Street district experienced traffic of more than 13,000 cars per day.

"The pedestrians should be given a fighting chance," said Mr. Corke.

"With all that traffic, that's just what they have to do . . . fight."

Merchants are constantly improving the appearances of Front Street and an ex-Toronto advertising specialist, Carl Kidd is given the credit for many of the new logos (specially designed lettering of store names and symbols) which have appeared on store fronts.

"A merchant can't just sit back with the attitude that he's doing well enough. He has to improve his merchandise, service, his outlook and try to attract more customers."

"The association can help members by kicking them in the right place," Mr. Corke said with a chuckle.

"As businessmen, we try to do as well as we can, but without improvements, without keeping up with the present, we won't be able to combat this new plaza."

"That's just one of the reasons for keeping up to date not only with merchandise, but in civic mindedness," he continued.

As well as the traffic situation, Mr. Corke said that the association was studying the water level problems facing merchants whose establishments look out over the Moira River. Corke pointed out that more than 200 parking spaces could be used if that area were cleared.

"It's what we like to call 'housekeeping' . . . improvement of our city."

"If more parking space is not found, or if the traffic isn't diverted, the bottlenecks along North Front Street will still exist when the plaza is opened."

"We'll have to have helicopters to bring the people from the plaza to the downtown area because of the traffic problem," he quipped.

In a more serious vein, Mr. Corke said, "since the earliest days of our city, the downtown merchants have been the mainstays of the community, interested in its progress. We're a progressive city; why do you think Cambridge Leaseholders are going to put up the new plaza? There's great business potential in Belleville."

The BDA recognizes its oldest businesses by membership in the 'Over 50' club.

The oldest members are Ed Thomas' Cigar Store, operating for 126 years, Geen's Drug Store, 124 years, John years and Walker's Hardware Store, 102 years. There are eight other businesses which have been in operation for more than 50 years.

BEN CORKE

Executive members of the BDA for 1970 are R. G. Porter, president; Mrs. Anna Parsons, vice-president; H. W. Bristol, secretary; J. B. Lesley, treasurer; J. B. Corke, past -president; James Walker, Ronald Fee, Douglas Burr, Ross Booth, George Wasmacott, Murray McIntosh, Irving Shulman, Stan Albert, and T. D. Mavety. Executive secretary for the association is A. Leslie Gnaedinger.

Regular membership is open to all stores in the downtown area. Associate membership is open to such businesses as banks, insurance companies, and finance companies. A special membership is offered to doctors, lawyers, and other members of service professions.

Fees for regular membership are based on store frontage.

Iran Changing After Countless Years

TEHRAN (AP) — Things are looking up in Iran, the land of the ancient Persians — big things after thousands of years of feudal neglect.

The ordinary Persian has had to scrape for a living since time began, however, and he isn't convinced the good life is here to stay. It started, after all, barely six years ago.

"It's all too new," says a well-educated, middle-aged Iranian, "but one thing I know, Ten years ago I had no hope. I thought only of escaping to the United States, Europe, anywhere. Today nothing would make me leave. My future is here."

Westerners point to a new feeling of hope and pride in Iran. It is most evident in this capital with its new office buildings, supermarkets, freeways and gleaming, modern factories.

Much of it is due to the White Revolution, a sweeping reform program aimed at turning a primitive, peasant society into an industrialized 20th century power. The reforms were launched in 1963, in the teeth of violent opposition, by Iran's energetic, Western-oriented shah, Mohammed Reza Pahlevi.

Financed by booming oil revenues—$1,200,000,000 last year—the reforms brought internal stability and independence to a country that had long been a pawn of the big powers, rocked by riots and dissension.

The gross national product has risen 10.5 per cent a year the last five years. Per capita income is $323, more than double that of eight years ago. The number of cars has doubled in five years. Television is reaching out and farmers gather around remote village tea houses every evening to watch Peyton Place or Bonanza, dubbed in impeccable Persian.

Progress has brought headaches. People in this traffic-choked capital complain about the taxes the government is levying for forcing them to pay. They say telephones cost as much as $3.00 on the black market.

In the sun-baked mud-brick villages where two-thirds of Iran's 28,000,000 people live, the problems and complaints are earthier.

The land reform program has reached three-quarters of Iran's 16,000,000 farm population but in some outlying villages the blessings have been mixed.

"We have had no rain, our well has run dry and we have not grown anything for two years," said Ziodo Shidrach, a 22-year-old farmer in the mud-hut village of Hakimabad, south of Tehran.

He sat on a small rug in a bare white-washed room furnished only with a battered chest, a kerosene lamp, a cracked mirror and the ever-present portrait of the ruler.

Land reform came to Hakimabad five years ago. Each farmer was given 15 acres of land formerly owned by a landlord who owned several villages.

Shidrach bicycles 12 miles a day to work as a laborer. He earns the equivalent of $1.50 a day and needs it all to feed his wife and himself.

The village, several miles from thenearest road, is on the edge of Iran's vast central Great Salt Desert, remote from the nearest road, is on jects started so far.

Six giant dams have been built in 10 years and six more are in the works. But thousands of villages like Hakimapaddies lie deep in water.

One farmer said: "We have of the Caspian Sea north of Tehran the land is so lush and green the telephone poles sprout leaves and the rice paddies lie asleep in water.

once a farmer said: "We have lots of water from the big dam but the old water was much better, it came thick and muddy and full of natural fertilizer. Now I have to spend extra money to buy chemical fertilizer to add to this so-called pure water."

His seasoned, leathery face broke in a grin as he conceded that his yield was 30 per cent higher.

"The price of rice is too low," another farmer complained.

The farmers sell their rice to a government co-operative, at set prices. They could sell it on the open market at a higher price, but that would mean walking.

Kathoda Javadi, young, clean-shaven head man of the village, said: "Ten years ago I wore ragged dirty shirt and no shoes. Now I wear a clean white shirt which costs me 300 rials ($4) and shoes that cost me 750 rials ($10), but I have no money in the bank."

He also owns a shiny motorcycle, a watch and two radios, one of which he has given to his son.

The rice crop at the Caspian, rice bowl of Iran, has nearly quadrupled, to 750,000 tons annually, since the $120,000,000 Sarfi Rud dam was completed in 1962.

Despite the trappings of a constitutional monarchy, there is no real democracy in Iran. The press is controlled criticism of the shah is forbidden and his power is absolute.

But his personal popularity has soared with the White Revolution.

In the last five years 2,000,000 children in remote villages beyond the reach of Iran's rudimentary public school system have been trained to read and write by a Literacy Corps of young graduate students drafted to teach for 18 months of their two-year compulsory military service.

Mobile clinics manned by graduate student doctors corscripted under a Health Corps reach some 6,000,000 villagers who had never seen a doctor before.

In a neat but crowded little clinic on the edge of the desert, a young doctor handles 50 patients a day and covers 22 villages within a radius of 15 miles. His wife, also a conscripted graduate student doctor, is in charge of family planning, a revolutionary new concept.

During the past year 239 of our women patients have started taking birth control pills," she said. "Ten years ago we would have been thrown out of the villages if we had even suggested birth control but now they come in and ask for the pill themselves."

The national literacy rate is barely 30 per cent but that's double what it was 10 years ago.

There is a drug problem among the older generation. Under a new law anyone found carrying more than a few ounces of heroin or four pounds of opium is subject to execution, and 34 convicted offenders have been shot in the last few months.

"We stopped communism in its tracks by shooting 30 people and we'll stop drug addiction the same way," a government official said.

The shah puts it somewhat differently.

"Signing the execution orders for drug offenders is the most difficult thing I have to do," he said recently. "But I'm pitiless when it's something-involving the security of the state."

The number of drug addicts was estimated at 1,000,000 in 1955. It's down to about 250,000 today.

Prince and Princess Leave Winnipeg For Washington Tomorrow Afternoon

WASHINGTON (CP) — The White House staff today is putting the finishing touches on plans for the three-day visit here by Prince Charles and Princess Anne, whose hectic itinerary will include a 75-minute picnic, a baseball game and a lavish supper dance for 700 guests.

Some of those invoved with White House invitations are flying in from distant parts—including two sisters making the trip half way round the world from Taiwan.

The young Royals will be escorted here from Winnipeg Thursday afternoon by Walker Annenberg, U.S. ambassador in London, and his wife who will fly to Winnipeg in a presidential plane to pick them up.

The informal Washington visit is strictly for the younger set and the Royal visitors will return directly to Britain without any U.S. side trips.

Officially, they are the guests of David and Julie Eisenhower and President and Mrs. Nixon's other daughter, Tricia.

The approaching visit has kept the protocol section working overtime and Connie Stuart, staff director to Mrs. Nixon, has happily supplied tips for guests meeting the Royal pair.

Handshaking is permissible by Americans, she says, but guests from the British embassy and other embassies should curtsey or bow when presented. But, Mrs. Stuart warned: "Don't extend your hand until the Prince offers his first."

After being officially received by the Nixon family, there will be refreshments in the Blue Room and then the visitors will be shown to their White House quarters. Prince Charles will sleep in the Lincoln bedroom and Princess Anne in the Queen's bedroom.

Then a party of about 30 persons will fly off by helicopter to the presidential retreat in Maryland for entertainment including swimming, bicycling, tennis, bowling, hiking and an outdoor barbecue.

It's billed as a picnic. But the party is due back at the White House 75 minutes later to start a 45-minute night auto tour of Washington monuments.

Asked how so many activities could be crammed into so little time, Mrs. Stuart said the visitors may stay longer if they wish at Camp David, the retreat named by the late president Dwight Eisenhower for his grandson.

On Friday there is a luncheon aboard the presidential yacht Sequoia for another 30 guests and a visit to the Smithsonian Institution in the afternoon where they will be guided around the space exhibits by astronauts Frank Borman and Neil Armstrong.

The main event, however, is the supper dance Friday at which guests will dance on the executive mansion's south lawn to the music of several groups, including The Guess Who, a Canadian group.

Earlier there was broad speculation that Tricia, 24, would be accompanied by Charles at the big dinner-dance, leaving open the question of who would be selected to escort Princess Anne.

But the White House denied reports it was on a search to find a suitable escort from among the sons of cabinet ministers, embassy officials and congressional leaders.

"This will not be an escort situation," Mrs. Stuart said. "There will not be an escort for the Princess."

Saturday's events—the full, detailed letinerary has yet to be announced—will include 40 minutes at a baseball game at the Robert F Kennedy Stadium and a stop at the Phillips Gallery.

The Millips was chosen over the National Gallery of Art because of its collection of French impressionists, which Charles is said to admire greatly.

Geneticist Fears Man Can Be Carbon-copied

He Is Frightened

Dr. David Suzuki is a Vancouver-born scientist who is "frightened" by the implications of his own research. Dr. Suzuki is one of North America's most brilliant genetic researchers. (CP Photo)

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. David T. Suzuki's peculiar feeling for the science he loves so deeply but fears so much arises from 20 years of battling racism and a foreboding distrust of society's ability to cope with the explosion of knowledge in his field.

A rebel with a cause of such personal import that it almost overwhelmed him two years ago, Dr. Suzuki is one of North America's most brilliant and widely known genetic researchers.

The 34-year-old geneticist's life has been blighted by racism—first as a childhood internee in a wartime detention camp for Japanese-Canadian civilians, and later during his years in the U.S. civil rights movement.

Dr. Suzuki says he is "frightened" by the implications of his own pioneering research in genetic mutations: the very real possibilities of carbon-copying thousands of men from a single cellular model.

He talks of fantastic things like 10,000 copies of Adolf Hitler, genetic warfare, incubated armies of identical men who have had fear and compassion bred out of them, unquestioning obedience and the urge to kill bred in.

Scientists, he says, have already produced tadpoles from the intestinal cells of frogs by utilizing the genetic blueprint inherent in every living cell, and the progeny is identical to the donor.

"The next step is mice—I wouldn't be surprised if it's already been done—and the jump to man isn't really that difficult."

Dr. Suzuki arrived at his cluttered University of British Columbia office clad in faded blue denim jeans and jacket and puffing on a wine-dipped cigarillo.

Shucking back a frazzle of bull-upright black hair, the Vancouver-born scientist spelled out his cause and dilemma in troubled, introspective phrases:

"Every time we make a discovery it has a potential for being used in bad ways, and that really bugs me. It's a double-edged sword of potential for good and bad, and we have absolutely no machinery to deal with the ethical implications of science."

What Aldous Huxley predicted in Brave New World "is upon us now, but there's no real sense of this in my profession or in society as a whole. This is really suicidal."

Dr. Suzuki said the technology of genetic control is exploding. What are needed, he said, are safeguards to keep that technology out of the hands of madmen, racists or dictators.

"We are all of the generation that remembers the horror of pseudo-genetic arguments that resulted in Belsen, Dachau and Nazi Germany," he said. "We can hear today the racist dogma of George Wallace and witness the horror of apartheid in South Africa."

Dr. Suzuki also remembers clearly and vengefully an internment camp for Japanese-Canadians at Slocan City, B.C., following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941.

David Suzuki, then 5, his parents and three sisters were among several thousand persons of Japanese ancestry rounded up and shipped from the West Coast to the interior early in the war.

"I'm still very bitter about it," he said. "Myself, my mother and sisters spent three years in a room no bigger than my office, even though both my parents were born in Canada and none of us had ever been to Japan.

"Conditions were terrible—overcrowded, dirty, bedbugs and cockroaches. My father couldn't help us because he was sent to a different camp."

After the war, the Suzuki family moved to London, Ont., where he finished high school and won a scholarship to Amherst College in Massachusetts.

During his years at Amherts and later while studying for his PhD at the University of Chicago, which he obtained in 1961, Dr. Suzuki plunged into the civil rights movement.

"Travelling south, he was involved in many of the major sit-ins, demonstrations and marches. He continued active in the movement after accepting a post with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission at Oakridge, Tenn.

"I found I was becoming so depressed by the racial situation there that I was getting mentally sick and had to get out," he said. "I left the U.S. in 1963 and took the first job I could get, at the University of Alberta, and four months later came to UBC."

In late 1967 and 1968, Dr. Suzuki came to the conclusion that "I was contributing to a body of knowledge that has a great potential for evil."

He nearly quit science completely. "Two years ago I was saying we've got to have a complete moratorium on science. But that's a copout, and I came to realize it as such.

"A moratorium on science denies all progress, denies one of the few activities that is uniquely human—the search for knowledge. That's a very idealist, airy-fairy statement, but I really believe it."

All this took place while Dr. Suzuki and his team of UBC researchers were on the threshold of a major breakthrough, which has wide implications for such diverse fields as cancer treatment and pest control.

"My concern is with the regulation of how cells divide and, ultimately, why some cells are defective and divide like mad. We call these latter cells cancer."

Dr. Suzuki explained that a dividing cell goes through literally thousands of minute chemical processes, and cancer occurs when one or more of these chemical switches has gone haywire.

The geneticist has discovered a method of making the switches go haywire, by changing the temperature of the cell during the chemical processes leading up to division.

And he can do it under controlled conditions. "A defective switch is what we call a mutation. We discovered how to change the genetic constitution of an organism, and we use temperature to do it."

In changing the temperature of the cell during division, the resulting different chemical reactions alter the construction of the genetic blueprint in the cell.

Theoretically, the method could be used to program out faulty switches leading to cancer by knocking them out of the blueprint, or to program in a defect such as mongolism —the double-edged sword.

Tamper with the genetic blueprint of a fertilized human egg cell and all the cells that evolve from it will carry exactly the same altered blueprint—three trillion of them in a human adult.

The next step could be to evolve thousands or hundreds of thousands of humans from the altered progeny by utilizing the same methods of growth from single cells as we are being used on frogs and mice.

These are the implications that worry Dr. Suzuki, who has confined his work to date to fruit flies, the basic unit of all genetic experimentation for the last 60 years.

Dr. Suzuki said geneticists "are bloody sure" that what they find out from the fruit fly will eventually be applicable to humans, because "the genetic language is universal."

"I'm still not sure that I'll stay completely in science," said Dr. Suzuki. "The great overwhelming majority of scientists think that people like me are nuts.

"The reason I'm reluctant to give it up is that it's the one thing that allows me to retain my sanity. I can get all fired up in hatred about the world and my society, but when I go up into the lab, I achieve a calm, an excitement and enjoyment I can't get anywhere else."

Slump in Britain

Canada's Wheat Sales Decline

LONDON (CP) — Canada's share of the British wheat market has dropped while the slice picked up by Australia and France has increased.

This switch shows up in the latest survey of food imports published Tuesday by the British agriculture department.

Canada also seems to have dropped a bit in her share of the British market for oilseeds and cheese but her canned fish share has increased.

Generally, Britain's imports about one-half of her food, including meat, grains, dairy products and fruit.

Last year imports of wheat and flour increased to almost 60 per cent of total needs, but imports from Canada dropped to 49,900,000 bushels from 88,900,000 in 1968 and the annual average of 82,300,000 in the 1964-68 period.

At the same time purchases from Australia rose to 21,600,000 last year from 13,500,000 in 1968 and the 1964-68 average of 23,000,000.

Australia and Canada are traditional competitors for the British wheat and flour market.

But last year imports from France doubled to 29,600,000 bushels from 14,300,000 in 1968 and more than doubled from the 12,300,000 1964-68 average.

As a result of various shifts, Canada's share of the British market dropped to 11 per cent in 1969 from 21 per cent in the previous year and the 27 per cent during 1964-68.

Australia's share increased to 19 per cent from five in 1968 and seven in 1964-68 while that of France also doubled to 10 per cent from five in 1968 and from four during 1964-68.

Canadian cheese-carriers supplied five per cent of the British market last year compared with six per cent in 1968. This percentage share hasn't shown much change but in terms of volume, imports from Canada declined to 13,000 tons last year from 18,000 in 1968 and from 14,000 during 1964-68.

Sanctions Against Rhodesia Not Effective, Says Report

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A UN report says that UN economic sanctions imposed against Rhodesia have not had the desired effect and that mineral exports from the breakaway British colony now are on the increase.

An American statement in the report says that Communist China is one of the violators of the sanctions, partly by importing Rhodesian chrome.

The statement came out during a dispute with the Soviet Union in which the U.S. said the sources attempted to cover up the Chinese violations.

Sanctions were applied against Rhodesia in an attempt to bring down the white-minority government of Ian Smith and point the now independent country toward majority rule for the about 4,000,000 blacks.

The UN's seven-member sanctions committee said in the report, released this week, that sanctions "have not been fully effective and have not led to the desired results."

It said that agriculture exports have fallen but mineral exports are on the increase. South Africa and Portugal were mentioned specifically as sanctions violators but it added that there are other countries.

The Soviet Union sought to condemn the United States, Britain, West Germany, Japan and "certain other countries" for nullifying the sanctions by trading with South Africa. It said it has been established that large amounts of merchandise are reaching Rhodesia through South Africa.

But the United States noted that the Soviet newspaper Pravda had said on June 10 that "mainland China bought a considerable amount of chrome from Rhodesia and that in 1969, its trade with Rhodesia had been three times that of the previous year."

The chrome was shipped through Portuguese Mozambique to the Portuguese enclave of Macao on the China mainland.

U.S. House Group Charges Massacres Were Covered Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The alleged massacre of South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai was deliberately covered up under an agreement by military and state department officers in the field, a special subcommittee of the United States House of Representatives has charged.

Reports of atrocities by U.S. soldiers promptly spread through 13 different command levels in the American Division, support units and U.S. adviser groups, the subcommittee said in a report released Tuesday. But there is no evidence they ever reached headquarters in Saigon, the report added.

The subcommittee believes the explanation lies in a concerted action among military and state department officers to suppress all evidence of the allegation and its investigation," the report said.

"... The subcommittee," the report said, "was unable to determine when, and by whom, that decision was made, and consequently is unable to describe the scope of the agreement."

The report, based on still-secret testimony by 152 witnesses, was released by a special fourman House armed services investigating subcommittee headed by Representative F. Edward Hebert (Dem., La.).

Other principal findings of the investigation into the Task Force Barker sweep against the suspected Viet Cong stronghold at My Lai March 16, 1968:

—Helicopter Pilot Hugh C. Thompson testified that when he landed to rescue South Vietnamese civilians from a bunker, a lieutenant in charge of U.S. soldiers standing over bodies in a ditch told him "the only way I could get them out is with a hand grenade' or something of that order." But Thompson denied having helicopter guns trained on U.S. soldiers during the rescue.

—Acts by individual soldiers were so wrong and uncharacteristic "as to immediately raise a question as to the legal sanity at the time of those men involved."

—The uniform Code of Military Justice should be revised to prohibit courts-martial for such acts in combat until the accused man's mental responsibility at the time has been determined.

—The sole written record of a field investigation—concluding only 28 Vietnamese civilians were killed in artillery, helicopter gunship and ground crossfire and that none was rounded up by soldiers and killed—was found hidden in a sergeant's desk drawer. If other documents ever existed, they have disappeared from the files.

—An order by Capt. Ernest L. Medina, commander of the My Lai sweep, to return to count civilian dead was countermanded by Maj.-Gen. Samuel W. Koster, then America Division commander, from a helicopter flying overhead. Koster said Medina's estimate of 28 dead sounded about right.

—U.S. intelligence dismissed allegations of up to 570 civilian deaths in My Lai and nearby areas as "Communist propaganda" even though most of the allegations were coming from South Vietnamese officials and without time, place and U.S. units involved.

Hebert's subcommittee drew no conclusions on what actually happened at My Lai and made no reference to criminal charges against 12 soldiers, including Medina and platoon leader Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. The charges range from officer responsibility for the deaths to murder, rape and maiming.

The committee said the "cover up" of the My Lai allegations cannot be solely blamed on Koster's America Division. The staff of the senior U.S. province adviser, James May, and senior advisers to the South Vietnamese division also were received reports that should have gone to Saigon, the subcommittee said.

May told the subcommittee he never heard the allegations, while Koster testified he did not report to headquarters in Saigon because he believed the field investigation showed "his troops were not at fault."

Ontario Plans $30 Million Program to Clean Lower Lakes

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will proceed with a $30,000,000 program of sewage treatment that will restore Lake Erie to its 1950 condition within 10 years, Energy and Resources Management Minister George Kerr said Tuesday.

Immediate action will be taken to install sewage treatment facilities in all major municipalities in the lakes Erie-St. Clair basin, including those on tributary rivers, by 1972.

Major municipalities and industries on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River will have the same equipment in operation by 1976.

If the American states meet the same deadlines, as they have promised to do, dramatic improvement in Lake Erie should be immediately evident and will be completed in 10 years, he said.

The program will require the installation of lime precipitation equipment at all sewage treatment plants with a flow of 1,000,000 gallons a day, and all industry whose effluent contains a significant level of phosphates.

The operating costs will be an additional $17 for each million gallons a day of sewage treated. But the resulting sludge, rich in nutrients and minerals, will be salable at a good price from secondary-treatment plants.

Although the program still requires cabinet approval, Mr. Kerr said the recommendation by the Ontario Water Resources Commission has been enthusiastically welcomed by the treasury board.

While the first of the new plant facilities in the Erie-St. Clair basin are being planned, two new plants will be built at provincial expense to test the effectiveness of the process, determine its side-effects and give the OWRC operating experience.

One of the new plants will be at Newmarket. The second site remains to be chosen, but Barrie is being considered.

OWRC spokesmen Lloyd Marshall said in an interview that the bulk of the problem now is getting American states to work on the problem.

"We all wish they would get off the pot and get moving," he said.

Robert J. Courchaine, an engineer with the Michigan Resources Commission, took exception to the statement.

"We had anti-phosphorus pollution programs developed long before Ontario indicated it would combat phosphorus," he said Tuesday in an interview in Lansing, Mich.

"In 1967 the Michigan resources commission developed a program that would establish methods to control phosphorus pollution in the Great Lakes by 1977. We have been working on this right along."

He said that starting this November, Detroit's sewage system will remove 80 per cent of phosphorus from effluent, using a "pickle-liquor" method which depends on an acidic substance of dissolved iron.

By 1972, he said, all communities on Lake Michigan are to have the same removal facilities. The program is to be extended to Lake Superior communities by 1977.

He said there appears to be a communications problem between Ontario and Michigan.

Lake Erie Water Main Could Save $3 Million

KITCHENER (CP) — At least $3,000,000 will be saved if local municipalities decide within three months to construct a 55-mile water pipeline to Lake Erie, a consulting engineer's report said Tuesday.

The Kitchener company was commissioned this spring by the Ontario Water Resources Commission to study alternate water supplies needed by local municipalities including Kitchener-Waterloo, Guelph and Brantford after 1975.

The underground pipeline will be hooked into a water intake facility to be constructed at Nanticoke on the shore of Lake Erie, 30 miles south of Hamilton, and site of a giant industrial development including the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. and Ontario Hydro.

The report said that if the communities want a pipeline, they will have to decide within three months as the water intake facility to be constructed will be large enough to handle it.

The OWRC meeting was told that if the municipalities decide on the pipeline to Lake Erie, the water intake valve can be enlarged now to handle the additional water for about $1,000,000.

Georgs Kerr, Ontario energy and resources minister, told the meeting an alternate route would be a pipeline to Lake Huron, a distance of 65 miles at the closest.

He said the OWRC will study the costs involved and submit figures to local municipalities.

D. S. Caverley, OWRC general manager, told the meeting it was not true that Lake Erie water is so badly polluted that it is not fit for domestic use.

Continuous studies and tests have been conducted and the only serious problem area is in the west end near Detroit, he said.

"There is nothing to bring us to believe that we can't obtain good water from Lake Erie."

The municipalities currently are getting their water supplies from wells, already producing at capacity, and prospects of locating more wells are dim.

Ottawa Boy, 8, Visits Hull – as Car Driver

HULL Que. (CP) — Constable Georges Lacombe stopped a slow-moving car on Reboul Expressway early Tuesday and took its driver to the police station.

The constable's patrol had been routine until he saw the apparently driverless 1953 car coming along at about 15 miles an hour.

The car had picked up speed and then up popped a head that peered at the road and a pair of hands that steered the car toward St. Raymond Boulevard.

When Constable Lacombe flagged down the car he found an Ottawa resident out for a morning drive.

Police would not release the identity of the eight-year-old driver who was about four miles from home.

There had been no accidents and police said no charges would be lodged.

In his official report, Constable Lacombe noted that the boy "drives very well for his age."

June Shows Deficit

Slump in Britain's Trade Believed Temporary

LONDON (CP) — Britain's foreign trade once again has shown an erratic, depressing performance but officials figure this is only a temporary situation caused in part by an unusual shift in trade with Canada.

After a period of strong surplus, with exports sharply ahead of imports, Britain displayed a trade deficit of £51,800,000 in June, the third and largest of three consecutive monthly adverse balances.

The official report, issued Tuesday, weakened the pound —worth about $2.80 Canadian— as well as London stock prices and raised fresh questions about the future of Britain's foreign currency reserves which protect the pound against foreign attack.

But board of trade officials quickly assured reporters the situation is not all that critical and that special factors were involved in the May—June period which are unlikely to be repeated.

In any case Britain has big earnings in invisible trade—tourism, shipping, insurance and banking—and these monthly surpluses more than offset April —June deficits. The invisible surpluses run about £60,000,000 a month. On balance, Britain therefore was still sharply in over-all surplus for the first half of 1959, though the size of that vital favorable balance declined.

During May—June, Britain imported from the United States three jumbo jets at a total cost of about £20,000,000. There also was a substantial rise of about £30,000,000 a month in imports from Canada, following the end of Canadian mining and dock strikes.

Some Doctors May Prescribe Marijuana

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a number of Canadian doctors are considering prescriptions for marijuana as a means of forcing government action on the Le Dain commission's interim report.

The Globe quotes Dr. Lionel Solursh of Toronto Western Hospital as saying he would consider prescribing cannabis for a young person who already uses it—as protection from prosecution under present possession laws.

Dr. Solursh said he was not a member of any definite group of doctors willing to do so. The Globe and Mail says the doctors "form a loosely-knit group according to one medical source."

The Le Dain commission on the non-medical use of drugs recommended liberalization of the penalties for smokers of marijuana and hashish, the cannabis drugs.

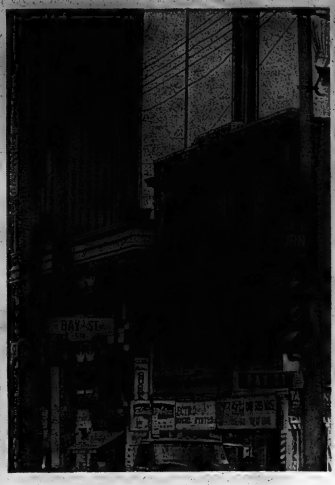
Dr. Solursh said if he "prescribed cannabis, he would prescribe it in the plant form, marijuana.

"The prescription might read cannabis t.i.d.s.c. (three times daily before meals) or cannabis q.h.c. (to be taken at bedtime) in botanical form to be crushed and rolled into cigarette form and inhaled deeply."

However, although a doctor can legally prescribe the drug, the prescription has to be filled from a legal source. A food and drug directorate official said there are no supplies in any pharmacy in Canada.

The Globe says the doctors are concerned less with the problems of supply used with making public their view that the marijuana laws should be changed immediately.

Indian Named



THEDFORD, Ont. (CP) — Lambton County board of education having defeated a motion 11 to 5 to eliminate the seat of the Indian representative on the board, voted approval of Ernest George who resigned.

term of office of Graham George who resined.

Dr. William McLean who supported the motion said the Indian representatives haven't contributed to the workings of the board and their attendances is poor. He feels an advisory committe would represent the Indians in the area.

Mr. Plain, the third representative since the board made a seat available a year ago for the Indians, has also been approved by both the Sarnia and Kettle Point reserve bands.

Thedford is 28 miles northeast of Sarnia.

Strangled by High-rises

Toronto's Chinatown is slowly being strangled by high-rise buildings. Land in the area now is worth about $100 a foot and most of it is already owned by developers. Today only a few hundred Chinese live in the three-square-block area. (CP Photo)

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Patients Ofttimes Deceive Doctor

Wouldn't you think the sick patient would realize the need to tell the doctor everything? But for many reasons (some unaccountable) the patient often deliberately throws the doctor off the diagnostic trail.

And the poor fellow (meaning me and other colleagues) goes off on a long series of laboratory tests, physical examinations, X rays, electrocardiograms, electroencephalograms and other sophisticated series.

Often we come up with nothing but a bunch of false clues and the criminal escapes. The patient continues to feel bad. (All the while, relief was there for the asking, if he'd only confide in you.)

I recall one woman who sat in my office, apparently happy (the constant smile should have warned me she was concealing her real feelings). Her only complaint, and bad enough, was a severe dermatitis.

Her skin was inflamed on her hands and forearms, and actually bled where she scratched. "I can't sleep or eat because of this itching," she said.

Examination was completely negative otherwise. I sent her to dermatologists, to allergists — but they found no reason for her skin problem. Through it all she smiled.

Did she have any family problems? "No, everything's fine." And she smiled some more.

Well, after many visits over a period of about a year, at last one day, came the solution. Here smile came off, she burst into a crying paroxysm that lasted for many minutes. She admitted that her recent marriage was a failure on all fronts: physical, emotional, etc. Their home was a mess of incompatibility.

Within a few months her skin didn't have a blemish on it. She had decided to sue for divorce. This decision cured her. It was the magic salve.

If she had got it off her mind earlier, she might have prevented a year's unnecessary suffering. Telling me the truth, for the first time she realized there was only one solution.

A doctor can be a useful sounding - board. Be sure you let him hear all the notes.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What type of specialist would you recommend for a person having a loss of coordination? Lately, when I reach for a glass I knock it over most of the time. And I haven't been able to walk straight. I veer to the right and at times I must look like an intoxicated man. — Mr. A.

Comment: First, I would see your family physician or internist. Better leave it to him to refer you to a neurologist you should consult. Whenever one sends to be treated by a specialist, it's much better to be referred by one's own physician — rather than "walk in cold" off the street.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am a government employee on a large army post. Recently we've had an outbreak of hepatitis and I've been exposed. Do you think gamma globulin gives any protection? Shall I consent to it shot? — Miss T.

Comment: Although you work at an army post this kind of "shot" will not in any way endanger you. Of course, there's no guarantee. But it often helps. Gamma globulin either prevents or lessens the severity of an attack of hepatitis. I've taken it, and haven't been sorry. (The earlier you take it after exposure, the better.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've discovered a lump in my breast. Can it just be a lump or cancerous? — Miss G.

Comment: It's possible that it is benign (non-cancerous). But you will never know early enough, unless you see your doctor. And what a relief to go early — and discover early — that what one is concerned about, turns out to be an unimportant lump.

Dogs Have Bad Trips With LSD

TORONTO (CP) — Dogs suffering from bad LSD trips are turning up in Toronto animal clinics, and the city may already have its first canine speed freak.

A Toronto veterinarian, who asked that his name be withheld for ethical reasons, said in an interview Tuesday he sees about six dogs a month on bad trips and the number is slowly rising.

"Nowadays when we see a dog behaving very strangely with no apparent medical symptoms—barking at walls, chasing imaginary flies, things like that—and the owner looks like a hippie, we check a bit further," he said.

The most serious case He's seen and the only one suspected of involving amphetamines, or sped, was a German shepherd.

"He was down, really down," the veterinarian said. "I've seen dying animals respond to their environment more than this one did."

After consultation with the Queen Street Mental Health Centre, the clinic administered massive doses of vitamins and the dog responded well.

BAD MANNERS

It is bad manners, in Laos, when seated on the floor, to let your feet point in the direction of anyone's head.

Pollution Alarms Wildlife Parley

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Effects of chemical pollution on animals and birds set a pessimistic tone at the opening Tuesday of the 34th federal-provincial wildlife conference.

Pesticides, petroleum spills and industrial wastes were cited as threats to Canada's wilderness.

Delegates were told oil spills in northern Alberta are inevitable because of the amount of petroleum development in the region.

"We need to do research," said Dr. S. B. Smith, Alberta wildlife director. "Spill some oil on water and learn how to fight it."

He said hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent by provinces developing techniques to handle forest fires but none on how to handle oil spills.

It was recommended the federal and provincial governments and the oil industry share the cost of seeking ways to clean up oil spills.

J. A. Keith of the Canadian Wildlife Service in Ottawa, in a paper presented by CWS biologist Richard Fyfe, said some chemicals used to make plastics could be as damaging to wildlife as DDT.

He said there is conflicting evidence about the effects of these chemicals, known as Poly-Chlorinated Biphenyls, but there is a possibility they interfere with egg hatching.

Another paper said pesticides are a prime reason for a decline in the population of birds of prey in North America.

"We believe unless efforts are made to curb use of pesticides, many populations of raptors—birds of prey—will be further exploited, even from seemingly remote breeding areas," said D. B. Halladay, a British Columbia government biologist.

Mr. Halladay said illegal capture of falcons in B.C. has grown to serious proportions and Mr. Fyfe said falconers will pay $1,000 for a bird.

North American falconers were described by Dr. Smith as a "bunch of crooks." He recommended legislation that would force them to give up the birds.

Dr. Andrew Macpherson of Edmonton, regional CWS director, told delegates that Canada has rejected a Russian appeal that polar bear hunting be prohibited.

Russia had said polar bears were in danger of extinction. About 400 were killed in Canada in 1969.

Dr. Macpherson said that proper management of the bears rather than a prohibition of hunting is considered by Canada to be a more acceptable way of handling them.

Pulp Plant Will Test Procedures

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian International Paper Co.'s pilot pulping plant at Gatineau, Que., one of three in the world able to test laboratory-proven successes under semi-commercial conditions, was put on display for the first time Tuesday.

The $1,800,000 plant, opened last summer, is designed to bridge the gap between the laboratory stage of development and the commercial use of research findings, the company says.

Operational problems that might arise in introducing a new process frequently can be identified and solutions found without costly loss of mill production.

DOWNTOWN BELLEVILLE BEAT DOWN

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1970

DOWNTOWN BELLEVILLE BEAT DOWN

Belleville Downtown Association vice-president Mrs. Anna Parsons and executive secretary Leslie Gnaedinger attach a special 'Beat-Down' sale sign to the front window of a downtown store. The Downtown Belleville 'Beat-Down' Sale which begins tomorrow and ends on Saturday, will feature special haggling prices, a parade, clowns, balloons, and a carnival-atmosphere, three days of fun.

Sidewalk Sale For Hagglers

The fourth annual downtown merchants sidewalk sale begins tomorrow with the official opening scheduled for 7 p.m., featuring a parade along Front Street.

This parade, organized by Belleville's clown-master, Don Foster, heralds three days of carnival-like shopping. Goods will be colorfully displayed before each store with special attractions scheduled throughout the sale.

The Belleville JCs will operate a barbecue beef stand in front of the Royal Bank at Campbell and Front Streets from Thursday to Saturday; on Friday a Dixieland Band will entertain crowds; on Saturday at 1 p.m., Ron Leonard of the Toronto-based CTV Uncle Bobby television show will entertain the kiddies with his magic show in front of the Royal Bank.

Most stores will place their sidewalk items on tables with a colorful array of beach umbrellas to protect attendants both from the sun and showers.

Carl Kidd, a free-lance advertising promotor, formerly from Toronto and now living in Bloomfield, organized this year's sidewalk sale.

"This is the first year we've (the Belleville Downtown Association) brought in an advertising man for the sidewalk sale," said J. B. Corke, past president of the DBA.

Mr. Corke explained that it was Mr. Kidd's idea to feature the 'beat-down' theme to this year's sale.

"It's going to be something like the European bazaars, with special goods marked at a price which the customer can haggle down."

Mr. Leslie Gnaedinger, executive secretary for the DBA, who is working on the 1970 Downtown Belleville 'Beat-Down' Sale, outlined another major attraction that has been organized for the sale.

A clown will circulate along Front Street selling dollar bills to the highest bidder.

"He'll ask someone how much they'll pay for the dollar and then sell it for as much as he can get," Mr. Gnaedinger explained.

Even the young people of Front Street are getting into the act.

Throughout the sale, members of the Second Stage, the youth centre on Front Street across from City Hall, will be selling refreshments in the open area at the entrance to the Moira River parking lot.

"Everyone's going to be busy and there should be a lot of fun . . . a carnival atmosphere," Mr. Gnaedinger said.

Ocean So Polluted Atlantic Explorers Couldn't Brush Teeth

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuters) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl, leader of the successful Atlantic expedition on the papyrus reed boat Ra-II said Tuesday that some days he and his crew were reduced to wash because of pollution in the ocean.

"Of course there were exceptional days, but it was shocking to see how many things were drifting from Africa to America," commented Heyrdahl who also said that he has accepted an invitation to testify on ocean pollution before the United States Senate anti-trust committee in early August as a result of his voyage.

The explorer, busy with post-expedition chores since landing here Sunday after his hazardous 57-day crossing, said he and his seven-man international crew collected samples of pollution which will be delivered with his report to the permanent Norwegian mission to the UN.

The samples, he said, consist of solidified pieces of "asphalt-like lumps ranging from the size of rice or peas to potatoes."

He said he did some pre-expedition investigating on ocean pollution after his first unsuccessful attempt to make the crossing in Ra-I last year.

Before that first papyrus boat broke up 600 miles off Barbados forcing the expedition to be abandoned, Heyrdahl accumulated some "limited samples of pollution."

"You could not help seeing them (the oil blocks). Some mornings you dipped your toothbrush in the water and there they are. Sometimes we did not even think it wise to wash."

The Norwegian explorer said he believes that some of asphalt-like lumps came from tankers which sank.

He Learned from Apes

Dr. Donald Hebb, McGill University's new chancellor, spent five years working with chimpanzees at Florida's Yerkes Laboratories of Primate Biology, and says he learned more about human behaviour in that period than at any other time of his life. (CP Photo)

Thumbs Down On Universal Fingerprints

HALIFAX (CP) — Passport. Traveller's cheques. Vaccination certificate. Fingerprint card.

That last part of an air traveller's checklist is not in the cards for the future as far as the federal justice minister, John Turner, and some of his provincial counterparts are concerned.

The idea of universal fingerprinting was put forward by Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario supervising coroner, as a result of difficulties in identifying the 109 victims of the July 5 Air Canada crash near Toronto.

"I don't believe any more in universal fingerprinting than I do in universal identification cards," Mr. Turner said when asked for his views on the suggestion. He is here for talks with provincial attorneys-general.

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart of Alberta said the idea might have merit if there were national registration, as there was during the Second World War.

"Otherwise, the people would't buy it," he added.

Attorney-General Richard Donahoe of Nova Scotia said he has never considered the idea and has nothing to say about it.

Queen Picks Up Rent From Hudson's Bay Co.

The company, a tenant for 300 years, settled its account with payment of two elk heads, their racks of antlers rising majestically out of plastic wrapping protecting them from the rain, and two live and lively black beavers.

The beavers were in a tankful of murky water in front of the dais set up on this restored HBC stone fort on the Red River, 20 miles north of Winnipeg.

They were happily wet, unlike the rain-soaked crowd of more than 3,000 that had waited outdoors for the arrival of the Royal Family, and they turned out be a couple of little hams.

The company's original royal charter stipulated that payment of two elk and two black beaver be made whenever a reigning monarch entered the enormous area of present-day Western Canada over which the HBC ruled.

Prince and Princess Visit Nursing Homes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Princess Anne and Prince Charles toured two nursing homes in the Winnipeg area Tuesday, shaking hands, chatting and joking with residents about the day's inclement weather.

The prince congratulated a resident in one home who had just celebrated his 100th birthday.

"You will be getting a telegram, I hope," he added, referring to the congratulatory telegram the Queen sends those who reach that tenbary.

Another resident told Charles she had a diamond jubilee medal from his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and carried it in her purse.

"You should be wearing it today," he said, insisting to see the medal before moving to chat with another resident.

Princess Anne most often asked residents at both the Middlechurch Home and the Holy Family Home in Winnipeg where they were from.

One man was about to stand to meet the princess when she motioned him to remain seated.

He told her he was born in Northern Ireland and had been back for a visit.

"You went back to stir them up a bit?" asked Anne with a grin.

Competition's Foe

Auto Industry Starts Talking About Salaries

DETROIT (AP) — Wage contract bargaining between the United Auto Workers union and major industry leaders opens today and the outcome is likely to have a bearing on the prices of 1971 model cars.

Both union and industry sources have said there probably will be a strike, although the auto firms and the union have vowed they don't want one.

The UAW and General Motors Corp. start the initial negotiations at a ferocious session, followed by talks with Ford Motor Co. Thursday and Chrysler Corp. Friday.

In a statement issued today, Earl Bramblett, GM vice-president in charge of personnel, urged that "serious bargaining begin immediately."

Frequently in past negotiations little progress has been made until the old contracts were on the verge of expiration.

The current three-year contracts covering some 320,000 workers at Big Three plants throughout the U.S. expire at midnight Sept. 14.

In previous years bargaining over local issues at various plants has erupted into crippling strikes, some after national agreements had been reached.

Bramblett proposed the formation of a joint union-industry subcommittee to police the plant bargaining "to ensure that local issues are handled promptly and on a business-like basis."

The auto-makers have said that whatever settlement is reached will have a bearing on 1971 automobile prices.

Both sides took tough pre-bargaining stances.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said the companies would only be "getting warm" if they offered a 14-per-cent increase in wages and fringe benefits.

Company executives, confronted with sagging 1970 sales and declining profits, indicated they have no intention of yielding anywhere near such an increase.

The current average hourly wage in the United States auto industry is $4.02. The Big Three companies estimate that fringe benefits, such as pensions and insurance, add $1.75 hourly a worker to their labor costs.

The UAW has a strike fund of $113,000,000.

Union demands include "a substantial wage increase," an unlimited cost-of-living wage escalator, and a $500 minimum monthly pension after 30 years service, regardless of age.

To these demands, mandated by the union's 1970 convention, Woodcock has added a call for an increase in company contributions to supplemental unemployment benefit—SUB—funds, which support, among other things, a 1967-won guaranteed annual income.

The companies now contribute five to seven cents hourly per worker, the amount depending upon fund balance. There have been heavy in to recent months because of layoffs and one fund, that of GM of Canada, is empty.

Woodcock has said he sees no possibility of his union settling without a return to an unlimited cost-of-living wage escalator adjusted quarterly to the U.S. government's consumer price index.

The companies have indicated they have no intention of going back to such a formula, in effect from 1948 until 1967.

It was an industry demand for a limit on the escalator that erupted into a seven-week strike three years ago at Ford, the target for a pattern-setting contract.

The union finally agreed to limit cost-of-living gains to eight cents an hour annually.

Canadian Firms Start Bargaining

TORONTO (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. and General Motors of Canada Ltd. were to open negotiations with the United Auto Workers today for a new contract for about 50,000 Canadian autoworkers.

The talks at two downtown Toronto hotels begin two months before the current three-year contracts expire at midnight Sept. 14.

The Canadian contract with Chrysler Corp. will be negotiated at a joint session with the team from the United States, beginning Friday in Detroit.

GM has about 21,700 workers covered by the UAW contract; Ford about 15,600; and Chrysler about 11,000.

The current UAW contract with American Motors Canada Ltd. is for one year and expires Oct. 6. About 1,000 UAW members are at American Motors plants in Canada.

Dennis McDermott, head of the UAW in Canada, will direct negotiations for the union. Jack Taylor of Oakville, will head the UAW team at Ford talks and Dennis Tyce of Oshawa will head the GM unit.

On the company side, Ken Hallsworth, Ford's vice-president for industrial relations, and A. C. Stapleton, director of personnel, will lead the company negotiating teams.

Rate of Violent Crime Against Persons Rises, Against Trend

OTTAWA (CP) — The rate violent crime against persons rose five per cent last year, and federal statisticians say this goes against a longterm trend.

The rate of violent crime is being studied by the judicial division of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the years from 1949 to 1971.

While the study won't be completed until some time after next year's figures are compiled, the indication is that the rate of violent crime against individuals in Canada is not climbing significantly. Violence against property is, however.

In 1969, there were 79,162 crimes involving violence against persons, for a rate of 445.6 per 100,000. This rose in preliminary figures compiled for 1969 to 85,348 or 468.2 per 100,000 population. This is a five-per-cent increase in the rate.

DBS crime statistics do not segregate crimes of violence against persons from crimes not involving violence, or crimes involving violence against property.

However, in this analysis, crimes of violence against persons include murder and attempted murder, manslaughter, assault, wounding and rape and other sexual offences—though some of the latter could be non-violent.

Latest figures for last year show that the rate of violent crime increased among adults and declined—except in the case of wounding—among juveniles.

For DBS purposes, juveniles are counted as boys and girls under 16 in all provinces except where provincial authorities have provided for another age limit. In Newfoundland the age is 17, in Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia it is 18, and in Alberta it is 16 for boys and 18 for girls.

Efforts are now being made to have all provinces use a standard definition, but no change was made in the age limits during 1968 or 1969.

Justice Minister John Turner said recently the government intends to be tougher on crimes of violence. He said the cabinet will consider introducing stiffer penalties, making sure they are high enough to deter violent crimes.

The 1969 crime statistics, based on actual offences reported by police, included 341 murders, 216 attempted murders, and 44 manslaughters. These figures compare with 314 murders, 181 attempted murders, and 60 manslaughter cases in 1968.

The number of rape cases rose to 1,026 from 882, and other sexual offences including indecent assaults, were 9,723, almost unchanged from 9,732 in 1968.

The number of cases of wounding rose to 1,646 from 1,233, and assaults, other than indecent assaults, rose to 72,253 from 66,600.

For adults, these figures show a 5.5-per-cent increase in the number of murders per 100,000 of population. Murder attempts were up 16.4 per cent, and rape up 20 per cent in the rates per 100,000.

There were 15 murders reported in which juveniles were charged in 1969, down from 26 the previous year. Other violent crimes reported in which juveniles were charged were also down, except for wounding.

Probe Results Kept Secret

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (CP) — Whatcom County prosecutor James Thompson said Tuesday he has decided not to make public his investigation of a Canadian man's starvation death in the county jail.

Thompson said he has completed his investigation into the July 3 death of Robert Lyle Guest, 22, of London, Ont., but has nothing to announce.

"I have done all the investigating I am going to do," he said. "All I found has become substantially known anyway."

Thompson said he was swearing the results of an investigation started Monday by Skagit County Sheriff John Boynton and the police chiefs of Anacortes and Oak Harbor.

Guest died after a 20-day fast while serving a 30-day sentence for illegally entering the United States.

Both Sides Adamant in Multi-Million Dollar Checker Game

OTTAWA (CP) — The give and take of the postal dispute is getting more expensive all the time for both the postal unions and the government.

Last week, the Council of Postal Unions in a brief presented in a bargaining session with treasury board negotiators said that Postmaster-General Eric Kierans has estimated the post office deficit could increase to $130,000,000 from $80,000,000 this year as a result of the dispute.

The council said: "We see no logic in the government being prepared to soak the Canadian people $50,000,000 in extra losses this year rather than provide postal workers with their proposals at a total additional cost of less than $25,000,000 in two years."

The treasury board sets the cost of a settlement on the unions' terms a little higher.

It was estimated that labor's proposals would add $33,816,000 to the annual post office payroll of $168,000,000, compared with its estimate of $16,940,000 as the annual cost of the government's counter-offer. The treasury board says the extra cost would be both permanent and the basis from which future negotiations would take off.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury has suggested that the loss in postal revenues resulting from the dispute itself should be considered in the terms of an investment against inflation and amortized over a period of 40 years.

The postal workers, for their part, have also announced they are willing to absorb an immediate loss for the sake of a long-term gain. They mean the cut in their pay cheques as a result of rotating strike action.

Up to the end of June, in these terms, they'd invested more than 60,000 days among them at an average $24 a day—a total close to $1,700,000 in lost pay.

That instalment will be subtracted from pay cheques sent out this month to the workers. The hits is likely to be even more impressive in August because the post office last week began counter-tactics of closing local post offices when strike action hits at the main distributing centre for the area.

The unions protested their men are being locked out.

The effect will be to increase greatly the number of man-days lost in July and it will hit particularly hard at postal workers in the smaller centres—workers who have in the past shown themselves to be somewhat less militant than their counterparts in the main cities.

The total of lost hours may not be available until month's end.

Council spokesmen have assumed that the strategy is to divide their ranks and they insist it won't work.

"That's what Kierans hopes to do, I guess, but there's no way the unions will be split," says Alex Edey, a Hamilton official of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada.

"We've had no complaints at all from the membership. They're determined to win all over the country."

Possibly, too, they will get support from other unions in Canada. The Canadian Labor Congress appealed to its affiliates last month to contribute to a special fund for the postmen.

So far, the response has been limited with the only known contribution being $25,000 from the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers who themselves face negotiations later this year with the Crown-owned Canadian National Railways.

But the CLC secretary-treasurer, William Dodge, said last week he expects more money will come in the fall when union locals meet to discuss the labor body's appeal. Whether it would be enough to fund a national strike is altogether another question. The postmen have no strike fund of their own. The postal workers want wages ranging between $2.07 and $3.23 an hour raised by 60 cents. The government has offered 41 cents.

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario was hardest hit Tuesday in the series of moves and counter-moves by the postal unions and the post office in their long-standing contract dispute.

A total of 1,939 workers were off the job in 27 centres in the province.

Strikes occurred in Hamilton, Barrie, Kitchener and Petrolia and in single stations in Toronto and Downsview. The Hamilton and Barrie strikes were in their second day.

Postal officials responded by closing 21 tributary stations, sending 561 men home on grounds there was insufficient work for them. Among the centres affected were Burlington, Niagara Falls, St. Catharines and Waterloo.

Elsewhere, 205 workers at Regina returned to work after a two-day walkout, and postal officials reopened offices in Yorkton, Weyburn, Moose Jaw and Swift Current, Sask.

But 185 were on strike at two stations in Vancouver and another in Victoria.

In the meantime, postal negotiators are expected to resume talks here Thursday afternoon.

Quinte Vista

Shores of Ameliasburg offer fabulous views of Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte. Shown above is a vista along the Old Orchard Road, directly across the bay from Trenton. Here one can not only see the town and the Canadian Forces Base but also the Murray and Oak Hills rising in the distance.

North Shore Living

Along Ameliasburg's north shore, fronts of homes face the bay rather than the road. Shown above is one such residence, with its living room looking over a rolling lawn that falls off to the bayshore. The north shore has become a strip development of fine homes, most with adjacent private docks.

Ameliasburg Is A Quiet Haven for City-Weary Residents

By KENNETH SMITH
(Staff Reporter)

As Muskoka and Haliburton fill up with cottages and the choice of life-pollution combination makes the large cities of Ontario less attractive, the choice agricultural areas of the province have experienced a remarkable growth period.

Ameliasburg Township with its sweep of Lake Ontario shore, farm-girthed lakes and great expanses of Bay of Quinte coast has had undisputed gains in the last few years. There has been a land-office real estate business and property values have sky-rocketed.

The township used to be a low tax haven for both Belleville and Trenton-area. But this, in the words of one long-time Ameliasburg resident, has become a "well 'ot" the wisp."

"Taxes may not be as high as they are in the city," one resident explained, "but we still have to look after water and sewage in our own archives".

Services in Ameliasburg, however, have been expanded somewhat in the last few years: there is now weekly garbage collection, covered by a $14 annual supplement to individual tax bills, a dog catching service and a volunteer fire department.

One newcomer to the township revealed that the annual tax bill for his residence along the exclusive Redesrivelle Road amounts to more than the one of his friend who lives on Toronto's posh Bridal Path. Moreover the Bridal Path home was reported to be considerably larger.

Ameliasburg, however, was one of the first areas in Ontario to move to 100% tax assessment. The process which has not yet been completed in other areas.

Regardless of tax increases, people are still buying land in Ameliasburg at a steady rate and there is more new building in the township now than ever before.

Harry Burdee, the building inspector, reports that over $500,000 in new construction was under way in May alone.

Population of Ameliasburg has increased since 1964 when there were 3,978 residents in the township; in 1968 there were some 4,155 residents.

By comparison, population for the entire county of Prince Edward has declined from 20,337 in 1964 to 19,878 in 1968.

Senior citizens moving to Ameliasburg have been the key to that township's growth. Ameliasburg's resident population in the 65 to 69 age bracket increased to 145 from the total of 121 in 1964. Moreover, there were 224 people over 70 years of age in the township during 1964. This figure increased to 250 in 1968.

William Tatham, a Rossmore-based businessman, explained that recent years had seen the farmers and long-established residents joined by an increasing number of retired Toronto executives and retiring officers from the Canadian Forces.

What has lured people in move to Ameliasburg? Part of the reason, of course, is the natural unspoiled beauty of the township, a perpetual drawing card.

Moreover, development is now subject to the conditions of the official plan of the Ameliasburg planning area.

Mr. Tatham, on the township planning board when the plan was drafted in 1965-67, explained the rationale behind the plan by saying the board wanted to prevent an interspersal of commercial and residential building as well as to define a visible land use program.

"We didn't want welding shops and pickle factories mixed in with private residences," he said.

This eventuality has been overcome in the plan, for it provides that all commercial activity be established in the existing communities of Rossmore, Cherrytree Place, Redesrivelle, Albury and Ameliasburg.

Rossmore, at least has certain features which pose problems to potential commercial and industrial enterprises.

Several Ameliasburg homeowners have contended that the industrial and commercial tax base of the township should be expanded because, as one resident put it: "The homeowner is being asked to bear the bulk of the tax load".

Residential tax revenues in the township are now considerably in excess of those from the farms and of the 4,155 residents of Ameliasburg in 1968 most were commuters or retired.

Expansion in Ameliasburg has not only been in the line of single - family residences increasingly, the township has been a soughtafter site for prospective cottage owners.

Weller's Bay is one of the prime cottage locations in the township and Elwood Burris, who operates Driftwood Inn near Weller's Bay, explained that virtually half of the new people buying and building in the bay area are German, Dutch and Finnish Canadians.

By one report, 4.4 acres of Weller's Bay property cost $1,000 about 10 years ago. Now 10 acres fetch about $10,000.

Another piece of real estate cost $13,000 a few years ago and recently sold for $45,000.

Two developers have been particularly active along Weller's Bay. These are T. H. Hancock and Reg Hiscock.

Mr. Hancock got OMB approval for a subdivision of cottages in 1964. There are about 55 lots in this land development, with over half of these on the shore, the rest inland.

Certain of these lots are elshaped, interlocking with an adjoining lot on one side.

The Hancock subdivision has been sold to a Toronto firm and about 20 lots have been sold this spring alone.

Hiscock Shores, Reg Hiscock's development, on Sugar and Smoke Points along Weller's Bay is comprised of 78 lots. Mr. Hiscock reports that only ten or twelve of these are left.

All lots in this enterprise have water frontage and there is a stipulation of sale that cottage floor area must be at least 700 sq. feet.

Lots sold along Weller's Bay a decade ago for $400 are going now for $3 000.

People from Toronto are anxious to buy cottage property in the area and in comparison to Muskoka prices they are getting a good buy.

Clearly, Ameliasburg is in demand and the supply of land is diminishing.

If the land is expensive,, cottage builders are sparing no money either ,Mr. Hiscock reported that several of the cottages built on Hiscock Shores are in the $15-20,000 price range.

One house in the area bought a few years ago for $13,500 now commands a $19,000 price tag.

The Consecon area is soughtafter too. In the community of Consecon itself, there are four new places being built by Torontonians and a cottage on Consecon Lake bought three years ago for $5,500 recently sold for $18,000.

Land on Consecon Lake has been mostly sold, so what remains is for from cheap by the standards of a few years ago. As an example one 700 foot section along the lake is now selling for $45,000.

Robbie Lake ,the township's other land-locked lake, has seen considerable development too. There are now about 45 cottages around the lake and lots range in price from $2,000 to $4,000.

Harry Birdee, the township building inspector, reflected on the old Robbin Lake of 1925. At that time, he mentioned, lots sold for $75.

Two developers have been particularly active at the eastern end of the township. They are Jack Allin, a Belleville insurance broker, and George Prue, an ex-Torontonian now living in the township.

Mr. Allin bought his Allindale Park property in 1966. The development is on the east side of Pete's Point and in the draft plan was to consist of 25 lots, 18 of them away from the shore but with water access provided.

In 1968, Mr. Allin's draft plan for a sub division was tentatively approved with the proviso that certain conditions be fulfilled.

Subsequently, Mr. Allin applied to have the area zoned residential with the support of existing cottage owners in the area. This was turned down by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Allindale Park is zoned agricultural, although the official plan of the Ameliasburg planning area recommends cottage use for that portion of Pete's Point.

In February of this year, Mr. Allin appealed to the OMB that it allow Ameliasburg "to rezone as a summer cottage area that portion of Peak's (Alternately Pete's and Peeks) Point now zoned agricultural".

Many of the cottagers on the Belleville side of the point disapproved of this change in land use, some because they felt the change should be to a residential zoning category. The proposal was made recently by a Belleville dentist, Dr. John Clarke that cottage zoning be revised to the requirements of R2 residential.

Mr. Clarke said that if the present cottage requirement of 75 feet of frontage and a 15,000 sq. ft. lot were revised to 100 feet frontage and a 30,000 sq. ft. lot (the R2 requirements) several problems could be alleviated.

The decision on Pete's Point was brought down by the OMB on June 10, and the change of zone from agricultural to cottage was refused.

In the words of the decision, other cottagers on the point were "concerned not only about the prospect of additional dwelling units being used as permanent residences . . . but also about the danger of increasing pollution because of the soil conditions and the slope of the land towards the bay.

The OMB decision says "a feature of this area is shallow soil over fractured limestone, similar to that of much of the land bordering the Bay of Quinte, and overflow or seepage from septic tanks following the fractures in the rock and drains eventually into the bay".

The OMB concluding judgment was that it would be dangerous "to approve rezoning this land from agricultural to summer cottage at a time when council is making an effort to prevent the conversion of summer cottage areas into permanent residential areas."

On Massassaga Point, George Prue of Lakeland Properties has launched a major cottage development. Over the next 10 years Lakeland proposes to build over 250 cottages, a marina, and a nine - hole golf course.

Lakeland will dedicate more parkland to the cottage community than the five per cent of land area required by the OMB. Mr. Prue told the Intelligencer, and 600 gallon septic tanks will be used for each cottage. Trenton, Mr. Prue claimed are larger than the minimum required by health authorities.

Cost of lots will be as high as $100 per foot for a prime slice of bay frontage. The minimum cottage size on the shoreline will be 1,000 sq. ft. and 800 sq. ft. on an interior piece of land.

Lakeland Properties will not sell a lot without, itself, at least building one cottage. The first of the new landholders. This was proposed both as a common sense move and a means of quality control. It is not an unprecedented procedure. Mr. Prue contends that some of the finest developments in Canada (Don Mills and Kanata being examples — have had similar controls to standardize to some degree the external appearance of the buildings.

Two large cottages have already been built in the development; the buildings themselves cost about $15,000 each and have perimeter foundations, full insulation, stucco finishing, stone fireplaces, colored appliances and vanities in the washrooms. These cottages have been bought by Torontonians.

From one end of the township to the other, then Ameliasburg is changing. The township is becoming a prime vacation area and more and more even an exclusive residential enclave. There is planning however, the traditional farm and orchard character of the area has been safeguarded.

Motorboats May Be Banned from Roblin Lake

AMELIASBURG (Special)—Council has been called upon to consider closing the public swimming beach at Roblin Lake as a place for launching motor boats.

Last night Mrs. Walter Chafe, a member of the township recreation committee, recommended the action as a measure to guard the safety of children and adults using the bathing facility.

Earlier Mrs. Chafe had been delegated by the community centre board to investigate complaints for the protection of swimmers. Her report was to suggest ways of keeping the facility pollution free.

Council, before deciding will explore an alternative launch site at the nd of the public roadway along the west boundary of the township's centinudal park.

"You have a clean lake, why don't you fight to keep it that way," commented councillor Lyle Vanclief on supporting a decision the community centre board proceed with an "on the spot" inspection of the swimming beach before the July 27 meeting of council.

Deputy reeve Norman Post said he would be willing to ask the Department of Transport to ban all outboard motors from the lake to assure the safety of children in the light of Mrs. Chafe's investigation.

Council announced a policy to judge each application for renting space to trailer dwellers on its individual merits.

Permission was granted to school teacher Max Vandyke to rent space for the location of a trailer on Jack Fraser's place on lot 65 on the Redesrville Road. Council authorized a resolution advising the township solicitor to prepare a lease to run for a period of 18 months. Rent is to be charged the lessee at the bylaw rate of $20 a month.

Council and a representative of Robinlde Investments agreed on the final draft of an estate development set for the former Blakely farm on Highway 33 north of Consecon. The plan calls for 22 homes to be erected on two-acre lots. Construction is to commence immediately following final approval by the OMB.

Council received notice that the Ontario Water Resources Commission had started a capability study of Roblin Lake. The study arises from investigation of the site for the proposed Keele complex' east of the public school building. The source of the school's water supply is Roblin Lake and additional large recommendation would require a greater daily supply.

Dogcatcher Donald Tucker turned in collections from the sale of dog tags nearing the 450 mark for this year.

Council approved extra fire insurance for the museum complex in the village. Coverage was on buildings and contents totals $31,000.

Giant Culverts Installed

The installation of twin- giant-sized culverts under the road on the third concession of Ameliasburg-is the municipality's answer to an annual flooding problem in the area. The route links county road 23 and Highway 14. In the spring during the thaw it is usually inundated.

YMCA Now Open On Sundays

The Belleville Family YMCA has decided to stay open Sundays on an experimental basis. The Sunday Y program began July 12 when 66 people turned out to use the building's facilities.

The Y is now open on Sunday from 1.00 to 5.00 p.m. with the pool being attended for these hours. The sauna rooms are also available and the walled patio adjacent to the pool is open for sun bathing. Hotdogs and cokes are also sold on the patio from a kiosk run by Y volunteers.

Admission prices to non-members for the afternoon are 25 cents for a child, 50 cents for an adult, with a maximum of $1.00 for a family.

Yaz Backs Appraisal of Surface by Tying Record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, the all-star game's most valuable player, thinks artificial playing surfaces will be a boon for hitters and has the evidence to back his claim.

The Boston Red Sox star tied an all-star baseball record with four hits—three singles and a double—and played all 13 innings Tuesday night for the losing American League in the game won by the National League 5-4.

His four hits on Riverfront Stadium's Astroturf tied the mark belonging to Ducky Medwick and Ted Williams. Medwick rapped four hits for the Nationals in 1937 and Williams four for the Americans in 1946.

"I think it (artificial) is great for the hitter," Yaz said. "It's got to help some guys 30 points on their batting average and a lot of others at least 18 points.

"You can't believe the speed the ball picks up when it hits the surface," he said.

The Red Sox ace looked like a blazing target at exotic dancer Morganna Roberts when she bounced onto the field in the first inning. "If she was coming for me," Yaz said, "I was going to run over to the president's box."

Yaz wound up with his first single and the 444th of his career in the fourth inning off Jim Hickman, a disorderly conduct charge today in the incident after the incident.

Ex-National League president, Warren Giles, hustled into the National clubhouse, congratulated manager Gil Hodges and said: "They'll never beat us."

Jim Hickman of Chicago Cubs, whose single drove home Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose with the deciding run, said: "I was just trying to get the ball anywhere. It was a fast ball from Clyde Wright down."

Rose barreled into Cleveland Indians' rookie catcher Ray Fosse for the winning run and both were injured. Rose suffered a charley horse above his left knee and Fosse an injured left shoulder.

Winning pitcher Claude Osteen of Los Angeles Dodgers worked three losing innings after going in as a pinch runner.

Hodges wasn't particularly surprised that the American pitchers stopped the power-laden National batters for the eight innings.

"Here you've got the best pitchers against the best hitters and the pitchers can contain the hitters if they get the ball where they want it. That's what the American League pitchers were doing most of the night."

Rose Slams Home to Give Nationals Overtime Win

CINCINNATI (AP) — Any doubts about player interest in baseball's all-star game were dispelled Tuesday night as the National League continued their recent domination of the annual game 5-4 in 12 innings.

The victory was the eighth straight for the Nationals and was the sixth win in as many extra-inning duels in the long series.

Pete Rose scored the winning run in a jarring collision at the plate with Ray Fosse that sent the Cleveland Indian catcher to a hospital with a shoulder injury and left the Cincinnati Reds' flash nursing a painful charley horse.

Pittsburgh Pirates' Roberto Clemente, castigated for suggesting he might pass up the game because of a pain in the neck, showed up, played and helped the Nationals bring three-run rally in the ninth with a sacrifice fly.

Baltimore's Dave Johnson, hobbled by a damaged knee, labored through eight innings at second base for the Americans on the hot and hard Astroturf that blankets the Reds' new Riverfront Stadium.

Southpaw Claude Osteen of Los Angeles Dodgers, who had worked eight innings three days earlier, got into the game as a pinch runner in the NL ninth and wound up pitching three scoreless frames to earn the victory.

President Nixon, who joined the crowd shortly before game time, stayed to the finish. So did Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves, Willie Mays of San Francisco Giants, Frank Robinson of Baltimore Orioles and all the superstars who were out of their respective line-ups after the early innings.

The only drop-out was busty Morganna Roberts, an exotic dancer and compulsive player-kisser, who made a promised foray onto the playing field in the first inning . . . and was promptly hauled off to jail.

Jim Hickman of Chicago Cubs and Billy Grabarkewitz of Los Angeles, two of the NL's top hitters this season, smoked in the fans' first balloting for starting spots in 13 years, shared the spotlight with Rose in the climactic 12th.

Rose stroked a single with two out in the 12th and took second on Grabarkewitz's single. Hickman then lined a single to centre and Rose barreled into Fosse before losing the plate.

"It was a bang-bang play" said National League manager Gil Hodges at New York Mets. "It took someone like Pete to pull his way in there."

The all-star game has been the setting for crippling injuries in several top players in past years, but Rose plays every game this same way.

"If I can change the score, I'm not going to worry about getting hurt," he said.

Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, named the game's most valuable player after cracking four hits to tie the all-star mark, delivered a run-scoring single in the sixth, giving the Al a 1-0 lead.

Fosse contributed a run-producing sacrifice fly in the seventh and Brooks Robinson, Baltimore's 14-year all-star fixture, drilled a two-run triple in the eighth.

Trailing 4-1 in the ninth, the favored Nationals finally exploded. San Francisco catcher Dick Dietz provided the spark with a leadoff homer. Singles by Bud Harrelson of New York, Joe Morgan of Houston Astros and Willie McCovey of San Francisco brought home another run and Clemente tied it with a long fly to centre.

Osteen then held the AL at bay until his team-mates broke through again in the 12th at the expense of Clyde Wright, California Angels' no-hit left-hander.

Games Briefs

EDINBURGH (AP) — "We can't have juveniles fighting men," said a Commonwealth Games official upon the arrival here of all-India wrestling champion Ved Prakash. Prakash was listed on the athletes' lentry form as 11 years old, but assured everyone here Tuesday he is 16. No matter, said a Games technical committee, ruling that no boy under 15 could compete in bodily contact sports. "This is ridiculous," countered Indian team spokesman Mahant Giri. "Prakash has just been competing in the world wrestling championships at Edmonton. No one complained there. "Anyway, he is registered with the Interkash, who weighs 111 pounds and lost in the second round of the world championships, has been wrestling since he was five years old and regularly competes with wrestlers twice his age. "He beat his brother easily and he's 19," Giri added: "We must 'hot this thing out." said a Games official.

RISLEY, England (CP) — Canadian servicemen were struggling to keep their heads above water on Hierslip — Tuesday in the Risley shoot for top Commonwealth marksmen. The Surrey ranges were drenched with rain through most of the day — after a gorse fire that smoked out the shooting on a blisteringly hot Monday. In three matches shot Monday and Tuesday the most consistent Canadian service shooters were Cpl. Lucien Delarosbil of Quebec City; Pte. Ted Luscombe of Ladner, B.C., and Sgt. Ray O'Quinn of North Sydney, N.S. The 22-year-old Luscombe was placed third in the Sitting Challenge Cup event, shot from sitting kneeling positions at 200 yards. He had five bulls-eyes and an inner for 49, one behind the British winner who scored a possible 50. O'Quinn, 39, also chalked up a 49 but under the Bisley "counting out" system based on the placement of shots was given sixth place. Delarosbil, 32, with the 3rd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, got 47 of a possible 50 in the Stenhens rapid-fire event under service conditions, one less than the British winner. He was counted out to fourth. Luscombe scored a 46 in this event and O'Quinn a 45. O'Quinn was the top Canadian in the BSA shoot at 300 yards, getting 99th position with a score of 31 of a possible 35. Two Bisleys tied for top spot with 34. Other Canadians fairly well placed were three in the Sitting Challenge Cup event. These were Cpl. David Boudreau of Owen Sound, BCR, and Cpl. Bruce Smythe, 34, Kitchener, RCR, each with 47, and Master Warrant Officer, Les White, 43, of Edmonton, member of the Canadian Airborne Regiment, who had a 48.

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — Hong Kong continued its impressive fours gold medal in the Commonwealth Games bowls competition Tuesday, gaining its fifth successive victory by beating Wales 15-13. But Fiji, stole the fifth-round honors by humbling Canada 28-10 to grab its first points in the tournament. The unrated Fijians led 18-1 after five ends and easily resisted Canada's feeble efforts to recover. Canada's four, all of Vancouver, are skip Thomas R. Jarvis, 47, third E. S. de Sam Caffyn, 55, second James Denholm, 70 and lead E. Ted Hodgson, 71.

Pipes Playing In Edinburgh

EDINBURGH (CP) — As the last of hundreds of young runners carried the baton with the Queen's message closer to the ancient festival city for Thursday's opening of the ninth Commonwealth Games, Scots from all walks of life geared with pride in seeing a dream come true.

They provided a tinsel look and loads of good cheer for their first major sports spectacular. The traditional welcome—highland reels, tartan decorations, bagpipes and the best Scotch whisky—was laid out.

The Scots carved out a new $7,500,000 sports centre in a valley to handle the largest contingent of athletes in 40 years of Commonwealth Games history —nearly 2,000 from 42 countries.

Canada sent its biggest team yet overseas—162 athletes and 38 officials—but England had the largest entry—244. Australia, India, host nation Scotland and Wales each entered more than 100 competitors. But there were many countries with only one or two athletes.

While Scots celebrate with their Commonwealth friends, the Games village will be strictly tented during the 18-day show that ends Saturday, July 25.

For the last five days, over highlands and lowlands, hundreds of Scottish youngsters have relayed the Queen's message of goodwill for the Games. At the end of their marathon, they will have covered 700 miles and visited 56 Scottish towns.

When the last runner brings the gold baton into the new Meadowbrook Stadium, he will convey it to Prince Philip, who as president of the Games, will lead the inaugural.

In a complicated procedure, the Queen's message reads, as it is known, began on foot in Yellowknife, capital of the Northwest Territories, July 8.

Traditionally, the Queen's message to start the Games is carried by relay in a golden baton from wherever the monarch happens to be.

Canada's host at the last Games four years ago in Kingston, will lead the colorful parade of athletes and team officials.

The fickle Scottish weather poses a problem. High winds have been blowing. But Prince Philip has faced bad weather on such occasions before. He opened the 1967 Pan-American Games in Winnipeg in a downpour.

With the opening ceremonies out of the way, the athletes begin competition Friday in most of the nine sports listed—swimming and diving, track and field, boxing, cycling, badminton and fencing. Lawn bowling preliminaries were started earlier in the week because of the large field.

The swimming events are drawing a major share of attention because of a new Swissmade electronic timing system that can click off fractional times in the hundredths of a thousandths of seconds.

It will be used for the first time when the Canadians and Australians fight their expected battle for gold medals.

Some veteran timekeepers were not altogether happy about the new timing device.

"It could mean a swimmer with long finger nails getting the verdict in a close finish," one timekeeper said.

Medical Attention Tops

EDINBURGH (CP) — In contrast to complaints voiced by Canadian athletes about the lack of medical attention at previous international games, the 1970 Commonwealth Games team appears happy.

The medical team headed by Dr. Ted Percy of Montreal was arrived Tuesday beyond attention to pre-Games ailments.

Dr. Percy is assisted by Drs. Douglas Clement of Richmond, B.C., and Noelle Grace of London, Ont.

Montreal physiotherapist Bill Head and assistants Denis Ashley of Shawinigan, Que., and Richard Patenaude of Sorel, Que., supplement the medical treatment.

Coach Don Webb of Oshawa, Ont., whose star pupil Bev Boys of Pickering, Ont., suffered a punctured eardrum in a preliminary dive a week ago, said Miss Boys lost only 3½ days out of the water. Less than a year ago, a similar injury kept her out of the water for 10 days.

"These are the best medical facilities in the history of Canada at any Games," Webb said.

Chan Hon Chan of Montreal, a bantamweight weightlifter, agreed.

Stretched out on physiotherapist Head's table, Chan said he was being treated for an injury he received in training.

Dr. Percy said Miss Boys and Bob Eaton of Oshawa, Ont., also a diver, were the most serious cases among the ailing members of the Canadian team.

"Eaton has a bad attack of sinusitis and he won't be able to dive for about a week," Dr. Percy said. "Mostly, we've had to handle a lot of head colds, stomach upsets and illness brought about by change of food.

"Every little thing takes on great significance here—even a head cold—because of the nearness of the competition," the doctor said.

Webb said he has been kept busy treating injuries, many which "occurred months and years before the people came here."

Air-Tight Packing?

EDINBURGH (CP) — "It's like diving with a big earmuff."

That's how Bev Boys of Pickering, Ont., describes the waterproof packing of her right ear—a process she must undergo twice a day before workouts.

Neither team doctors nor her coach, Don Webb of Oshawa, would speculate on whether the irritation from the bandage, intermittent pain from her injury or the constant packing and unpacking would affect the 125-pound diver's performance.

"I'll know if it off is worse than getting it put on," she said Tuesday.

Miss Boys, 18, is considered Canada's top medal prospect in the three-metre and tower competition at the Commonwealth Games opening Thursday.

Webb said his star pupil punctured the eardrum during a routine dive on her first workout two weeks ago. It is the second time within a year she has injured her right ear.

A 45-minute packing process consists of inserting a rubber plug and lamb's wool pack to repel water. This is covered by waterproof adhesive tape and then topped with an application of plastic spray.

"Right now, bandaged like this, the ear only hurts when I hit the water," Miss Boys said.

"I don't consciously notice it after a while."

Webb said that other than discomfort he is not worried that Miss Boys will upset his diver's performance.

"I can't honestly say the ear damage has had any ill-effect on her equilibrium," Webb said. "She's not as sharp as she was, but this is normal."

Summer Recreation Programs Put 'White Elephants' to Work

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville residents are finally starting to get some mileage out of what probably has been the city's biggest white elephant — high school athletic facilities.

Moira and Quinte Secondary Schools are carrying on a summer program initiated by the former institution last year, in which the general public is allowed the use of school gymnasiums and equipment.

For years, opponents to the use of public property by the public have been responding like Johnny One - Note. "Who is going to supervise? What if some equipment is broken? Who is going to supervise? What . . ."

The answers are being provided by the summer program, which is working, and working well.

At Moira, a teacher and two students, under the general supervision of physed instructor Dord Smith, are looking after the program, which runs from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m., five days a week.

Quinte's venture, which runs from 1 p.m. - 9 p.m. is supervised by Jim Sled and Dewin Easton, a pair of high school STUDENTS.

Neither group has experienced any difficulties with the program, outside of minor annoyances like bicycle-riding on the school grounds.

A total of 200 students are registered at the seat - side secondary school with approximately 80-100 people utilizing the facilities in a day. "We had special times for the different age groups last year," says Smith, "but we haven't found that it was necessary so far. We get intermixing - students playing at one end of the gym and public school kids at the other." Basketball tends instructions are offered in the mornings for beginners.

While proceedings at Quinte aren't quite as organized as those at Moira, where they have the benefit of a year's experience, it nevertheless provides recreational time for an average of about 50 people per day.

Coupled closely with this free, public gym time, are other ventures that appear to be working out remarkably well. The summer basketball league has met with enthusiastic response and the competition available in the tough, four - team loop, should prove invaluable to city secondary school basketballers.

Plans are also being made for a twilight track and field meet at Moira, to which the organizers are hoping to pit some of the top "old-timers". Fly Ray and Glen Easton against the current secondary school stars.

The program, as they appear now, are first class, providing, for the main part, unregulated periods of time where people of all ages can relax and enjoy themselves, away from the demands of organized competition.

One possible improvement, however, could be to utilize the services of some of this area's top athletes in a series of clinics for the younger set.

Such standout performers as Carol Armstrong in archery, Price Morriss and Ken Carr-Brant in weightlifting and Canadian wrestling champions Robert Blitz and Harold Brant, just to name a few, could provide youngsters with the fundamental knowledge and encouragement to greatly increase the number of top-flight athletes in the community.

There are undoubtedly problems encountered with the continued use of these facilities, but to let these stand in the way of public benefit appears to be much the same philosophy as cutting off your hand to cure a hang nail.

The programs already in progress are outstanding. Why can't they be continued and expanded?

Ellis Junior leftfielder Cliff Scott fails to make contact in this bunt attempt, as catcher Wes May reaches for the ball, but more than made up for it with a seventh-inning game-winning homer. Scott's blast gave the Juniors a 5-3 win over Rollins Construction and a four-point bulge in top spot of the Commercial Softball League, over-their Tuesday night opponents.

Combines Scorch Intell With 5-3 Industrial Win

A disgusted fly ball and shish pitching by Doug Bolte who stranded 13 runners cost the Intell the game.

Bolte pitched the full seven innings for the Combines giving up nine hits and six walks while fanning one. He also provided the big blast for the Trainmen punching a three run homer in the top of the first. Marshall, Gates and McIlmurter added singles for the winners.

Dave Feeney was touched for the Intell loss, his first in nine decisions, although fanning a four hitter. He fanned three and walked twice in many.

Bill Hoard and Randy Derry each had two singles in a losing effort. A double by Pat Brown and singles from Ron Calhoun, Randy Johnstone, Feeney and John Edwards completed the Intell nine hit attack.

Lions Midgets Forced To Settle for Split

Bill Kirkham and Stan Brooks divided the Belleville pitching chores giving up eight hits while combining for 14 strikeouts and four walks.

Barry Culkin and Carm McCaffery each had two singles and Mike Geegan a double in salvaging the tie. Doug Dersnah, Danny Lupecette and Tom Coughlin had singles to round out the Belleville attack.

Juniors Take Titanic Battle

By RANDY DERRY
Staff Sportswriter

The battle of the titans proved to be just another game for the red - hot Ellis Juniors as they moved four points ahead of the Rollins Tuesday night by whipping the Constructionmen 5-2 in commercial league softball action.

In the first game at the Alemite the Ellis Hoisters blanked Point Anne 2-0 behind the three hit pitching of Bob Ethier.

The Juniors illustrated why they are in first place by pounding Rollins starter Wayne McConnell for seven hits including a long right field homer by Cliff Scott in the seventh.

The lead was short lived though as the Rollins tied it up in the fifth on a home run in centre field by diminutive Dale Akey.

The top of the seventh spelled the end for Rollins as the Ellis' picked up three unanswered runs. Back to back singles by Terry Meagher and Rod Ridley set the stage for Steve Ling's long triple. Ling was tagged out at home on a perfect peg from deep centre by Ralph Frost. Not to be denied of a homer though Cliff Scott sent the first pitch to him deep into right field completing the Junior's outburst.

"Everything was working tonight especially the upshoot and the curve," boasted winning pitcher Ted Wale. "That should almost wrap the pennant up for us."

Everything was indeed working for Ted, much to the dismay of the offlines fans and the 13 strike out victims of the Junior slugging.

Wayne McConnell was touched for seven hits in all and recorded eight strike outs.

Akey's homer and singles by Brian Smith and Wes May were the only blemishes on Ted's pitching performance.

"This was a big game for us tonight and it's nice to win it. The boys are playing real good ball," claimed coach Harold Reid.

Ellis Juniors 000 200 3 - 5 7 1
Rollins Const. 000 002 0 - 2 3 3

Don Gerdiner's single and two pass balls plus Bob Ethier's triple provided all the runs needed as City Hotel moved into a third place tie with Point Anne and Stinson's.

Gardiner's alert baserunning in the fourth gave the Hoistmen the early lead. Two innings later Gardiner started the ball rolling with a leisurely stepping into a Dort Holoway fastball. Ethier drove him home with a triple to deep left field but he himself was tagged out for missing home plate.

Ethier fired three hit ball and fanned 11 batters. Gardiner was the only City Hotel batter to reach second base.

Argonauts' Jonas Counts 16 Points To Bury Eskimos

EDMONTON (CP) — Toronto Argonauts, with an awesome display of offensive power, slaughtered Edmonton Eskimos 47-7 in a Canadian Football League exhibition game Tuesday night.

Quarterback Don Jonas picked up 16 points with four field goals from 26, 36, 33 and 50 yards, threw converts and a single to off a wide field goal attempt.

The former Orlando Panther also threw a 31-yard pass to end Tom Bland and handed off to fullback Cal Murphy, who went over from the Edmonton four.

Tom Wilkinson, Toronto's starting quarterback passed 11 yards to Bill Symons for one touchdown and combined with Jim Thorpe on a 52-yard passand-run play, both in the first quarter. Tom Johnson was good on one convert.

Jim Tomlin intercepted a Phil Horner pass in the fourth quarter and ran it 35 yards for a touchdown.

The Eskimos' only score came in the first quarter when Terry Swann took a Rusty Clark punt at his own 43 and ran it 72 yards for a touchdown. Dave Cutler converted, and that was the last time the crowd had a chance to cheer.

One unpleasant note for the Argos was an injury to Dave Rainey, all-star halfback, in the first quarter. Rainey ran a wide sweep and was tackled after a three-yard gain. He limped off and did not return.

The Eskimo offence was never a threat. The only bright spots were quarterback Clark and split end Tom Nettles.

Weslock Defends Ontario Title

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — A field of 134 golfers teed off today in the first round of the Ontario amateur golf championship.

The entry list for the 54-hole medal-play event, on the par-71 Aurora Highlands Golf Club course, includes six former winners.

The tournament, which consists of 18 holes today, Thursday and Friday, has added excitement with a big battle for berths on this year's Ontario Wilingdon Cup team.

Nick Weslock of Mississauga, fresh from his low Canadian score of 289 at the Canadian Open in London, Ont., is after his eighth Ontario amateur crown. He is defending champion.

Another strong contender is Kitchener's Gary Cowan, who scored even-par 290 at the Canadian Open, level with professionals Gary Bowerman and George Knudson, both of Toronto. Cowan captured the Ontario Amateur title in 1964 and 1968.

Kitchener's Gerry Kesselring is chasing a Willingdon Cup berth, three years after obtaining amateur reinstatement. Kesselring won Ontario Amateur titles in 1949, 1951, 1952 and 1953. Three others, Bill and Dave Mellor, the brother act from North Bay, and Jack Lowrey of St. Catharines, are onetime provincial amateur championship winners.

Dale Tallon, well-known for his Junior A hockey talents with Toronto Marlboros, is a contender as current Canadian junior golf champion, and Toronto's Wayne McDonald brings an impressive record of success in the United States.

McDonald, 1969 Canadian amateur champion, is a University of Indiana student who Sunday was named to the all-America team for the second year in succession.

Tournament co-ordinator Ross Thomson of Toronto expects a large number of low scores. "I've never seen so many three or better handicaps in one of my tournaments," the Ontario Golf Association official said.

While the Ontario Amateur winner is given a Willingdon Cup berth, the other three positions on the team are chosen from scores of today's and Thursday's rounds.

The 36-hole scores are combined with scores from the first two rounds of last month's Ontario Open at Guelph. The three lowest aggregate scores from this combination of 72 holes join this week's winner on the provincial amateur team.

Howe Working NHL Career On 25th Year

CALGARY (CP) — Gordie Howe's family retirement plan is geared to two more years of playing in the National Hockey League with Detroit Red Wings.

After 25 years as an NHL star, he plans to call it a career, Howe said in a recent interview.

"I'm pushing my luck as it is," he said. "I've got to watch this old body now."

"You hear of these youngsters demolishing steaks before every game? Heck, my stomach can't take that diet any more. I have to settle mostly for ground beef and that kind of thing."

Howe, 47, dropped in on the Calgary Stampede as part of a national tour as sports advisor to a department store. With him were his sons Marty, 16, and Mark, 15.

"I'm just about through sacrificing weekends with the family," Howe said. "There are too many of them and I want to have some left while the family is still young enough."

Marty and Mark are highly-regarded juniors in the Detroit area. Both played in a Junior B league last winter and will likely return to the same team in the fall.

Howe said the competition would be better for them in Ontario, "but then they'd be subject to the amateur draft and I wouldn't have any control over their futures."

Francis Seeks Fee For Expansion Efforts

SEATTLE (AP) — Anyone in search of a National Hockey League franchise might well follow Emile Francis as he locates New York Rangers farm clubs.

"We're thinking of asking a finder's fee," Francis quipped Tuesday as he chatted with reporters.

He was pointing out that the NHL seems to grow everywhere the Rangers farm.

"We were in Minneapolis five years and they were among the first to be picked in the first expansion," said the Ranger general manager.

"Then we were in Vancouver and Buffalo after that. Both these teams were added in the latest expansion."

Seattle?

"I think you have a major league facility here all the way. If you look at the four cities mentioned for possible expansion, only one has a major league facility right now-Seattle," Francis said.

Four cities mentioned by NHL president Clarence Campbell shortly after the league's recent meeting in Montreal were Dallas, Atlanta and Kansas City in addition to Seattle.

Seattle Totems, twice-Western League champions in recent years, have signed a working agreement with the Rangers.

Murray Costello, former Boston Bruin star and now executive director of the Totems, said he expects "some big money would step forward" if the NHL indicates interest in Seattle going big time in the next league expansion.

Costello said it's possible the present Coliseum seating capacity of 12,000 could be raised to 13,400 and he thinks the city has one big advantage if the NHL expands in 1973 or 1975.

"I think the league will have a scheduling problem because of Vancouver," he said. "They face a problem with three teams on the west coast (Los Angeles, San Francisco and Vancouver) playing only one game with a club on a trip. Four clubs on the coast would give them a chance to play two games with each club.

Koch May Miss Davis Cup Action

SAO PAULO, Brazil (Reuters) — Top Brazilian tennis player Tomas Koch may not be able to play in the Davis Cup inter-zone finals against Canada here, he said Tuesday.

Koch is injured from the United States Monday saying he was feeling physically fit after a bad bout with hepatitis, but rusty from his long absence from the courts.

He will start training today but if he finds he is badly out of form, Felipe Tavares will take his place against the Canadians, he told reporters.

The four-man Canadian team arrived here Sunday but because of rain, Tuesday was the first opportunity they have had to train.

Laurie Strong, 30, of Toronto, captain of the Canadian team, told reporters that Mike Belis, 25, of Montreal and John Sharpe, 31, of Toronto would do the playing for Canada in both the singles and doubles matches.

Soccer Awaits Gate Count

TORONTO (CP) — Another first for Canadian soccer?

An exhibition game Tuesday night between touring Varzim of Portugal and Toronto Portuguese was delayed starting while the Portuguese promoter counted the fans.

Olympic Pinto explained through an interpreter: "I'm on the hook for $1,500 here and I didn't think I could guake it."

He didn't.

Only 627 fans turned up for the game which ended in a 2-2 tie. The game grossed $1,355.50 of which Pinto received $862.50.

The game, scheduled to get under way 45 minutes late starting.

It was believed to be the first time a major exhibition soccer game had been delayed while the promoter counted the house.

Queen To View Derby

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rain fell most of Tuesday on Assiniboia Downs race track, but isn't expected to hinder the richest-ever horse race in Western Canada.

"This track drains well," said track secretary Bill Clubb late Tuesday, eve of the $70,000 Manitoba Derby which will be run before the Royal Family late this afternoon.

"The track was flooded a few hours ago. If the wind keeps up tonight and we get some sunshine the very next day, the track will be rated is slow."

Fourteen thoroughbreds will be running for top money of $42,000 and early odds have Verde Fantruche, owned by Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal, the favorite.

The bay filly, sired by Northern Dancer out of Obedella, was the morning-line favorite at 7-to-2 and will be ridden by Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B. She finished second in the Queen's Plate and is the only filly in the field.

Second-rated in the field of Canadian-bred three-year-olds is Dance To Market, owned by Verne Martin Jr. of Toronto and ridden by Chris Rogers. Observers believe Dance To Market's early speed will be a factor in the 1¼ mile distance. The colt drew odds of 4-to-1 on the morning line.

Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Princess Anne will be in the stands to watch the race on the last day of their tour of Manitoba.

Three entries are owned by Manitobans and only one has been given an outside chance. Turn To Macdlle, owned by the Turfers' Stable of Winnipeg was 5-to-1 on the morning line.

The other two Manitoba horses are Apiarian, owned by J.E. Davidson of Winnipeg, and Ccell Pilby's Parade Square.

Manitoba centennial sweepstakes tickets have been sold on the Derby offering $228,000 in prize money for six lucky ticket-holders.

Summer at Moira Lake

This tiny island situated in Moira Lake, approximately 20 miles north of Belleville is just part of the beautiful summer scene. It is also a favorite spot for canoers from nearby Camp Quin-Mo-Lac.

15 Mines Closed

Charleston Miners Halt Work

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Faced with a mounting stack of federal court restraining orders, a handful of disabled miners pressed on today with their attempt to halt coal production in the rich Appalachian fields.

Fifteen mines employing some 5,000 miners in three states remained closed by pickets early today, but leaders of the Disabled Miners of Southern West Virginia conceded that unless the stoppage spreads quickly it is doomed to failure.

The pickets were sent out to dramatize demands for more liberal pension and hospital benefits from the United Mine Workers union.

"Our numbers are small and we are running into legal troubles, and if we don't get help from other groups pretty soon, we'll have nowhere to go," one of the dissident leaders said.

Early reports today indicated that seven mines in southern West Virginia, four in eastern Kentucky and four in western Virginia, were shut down by pickets.

But no help had come from western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio areas which supported a similar stoppage three weeks ago.

Leaders of the disabled miners group had hoped for a general shutdown to put a severe strain on already low coal stockpiles of the U.S. utilities and to force concessions by the UMW.

Robert Payne of Iunann, W. Va., president of the disabled miners, and seven of his lieutenants were directed to appear in U.S. District Court in Bluefield today with membership rosters and financial records under a court order granted to Consolidation Coal Co.

Consolidation was one of 18 coal companies which have been granted temporary restraining orders against the picketing by federal courts in West Virginia.

The UMW has urged its members to leave the pickets lines and has told the disabled miners that not enough money exists in the union's welfare and retirement fund to meet their request.

The fund is based on a 40-cent-a-ton royalty charged on union-mined coal.

The Appalachian area employed 100,000 miners in 1969, or 81.5 per cent of the U.S. total.

Calcutta Deserted

CALCUTTA (Reuters) — A Communist-sponsored 24-hour general strike brought life in a near standstill today in stormy West Bengal, the hub of India's industrial activity.

Businesses, stores and industries all over the state were closed for the day—mainly out of fear of reprisals—and public transport was off the roads. There was little staff at government offices.

Calcutta, the West Bengal capital and leading commercial city, was deserted, with people keeping to their homes and no traffic on the usually busy streets.

Silence hung over the city, broken only by the roar of troop-carrying trucks and the occasional burst of home-made bombs.

In one Incident reported today, police fired at a group of men who tossed two home-made bombs at a police vehicle. No one was injured, police said.

Thousands of troops, policemen and men of the para-military border security force swept out on the streets all over the state.

Television's Western Stars Big Hits on Rodeo Circuit

A performer who works at it diligently can pick up better than $300,000 during the year in guest appearances at fairs and rodeos.

At this time Milburn Stone and Ken Curtis, who play Doc Adams and Festus Haggen on CBS's Gunsmoke, are at the Snake River Stampede in Nampa, Idaho.

They were at Greeley, Colo., on July 4 and on Aug. 5 they go to the Pike's Peak Rodeo at Colorado Springs, Colo. In September it's the New Mexico State Fair and in October they play a date in Oklahoma.

Stone and Curtis, along with Lorne Greene and Dan Blocker of Bonanza, are among the most sought-after for rodeo appearances.

"The first year Ken and I teamed up we played 10 dates," said Stone. "The next year we played 18 or 19 together. Even before my heart attack I said I didn't want to do that many."

Stone only plays about five dates a year now, but Curtis plays a number of singles. "Ken more than doubles his Gunsmoke salary, but he really works for it," Stone said.

Between rodeos and Gunsmoke, Doc puts in a lot of time fishing at his favorite spots, Lake Mead and Lake Mohave, near Las Vegas. At the end of this month he and Curtis fly to Minnesota to fish for muskies for ABC's The American Sportsman.

Stone and Curtis travel with the Frontiersmen and Jonnie and put on a musical act that includes a large sampling of their bickering from the series.

"We tried splitting up the singers, but it didn't work out that way," Stone said. "The audiences wants to see him nail me every time. It's the country boy comes to town."

Stone said he observes two rules on dates. "We turn down all private parties. There's always this guy who asks you to come out for a quiet dinner. And when you get there all of his friends are there and they've all had a snootful and start tugging at you."

Second, "We visit hospitals and the like. It takes up a lot of time and energy. But if you don't feel this way you shouldn't be there. You've been in their homes every week, you're old friends."

Revision of Criminal Code To Be Studied at Conference

HALIFAX (CP) — Criminal Code changes affecting drugs use, abortion, divorce, lotteries and drinking drivers come under special scrutiny of provincial justice ministers and attorneys-generals here in the next three days.

It is only the second such set of meetings at this level on non-constitutional issues and the first to be held outside Ottawa.

Justice Minister John Turner hopes to hear the heels of the provincial ministers who administer the criminal law on proposed changes to bail laws. He also will be sounding them out on their views about tougher penalties for crimes of violence.

At the same time, Mr. Turner will be looking for the first provincia reaction on the recommendations of the Le Dain royal commission on non-medical drug use.

The federal government has already turned down the proposal by commissioner Gerald Le Dain that possession of any drug be punishable only with a maximum fine of $100 without any imprisonment provision.

Mr. Turner will be carrying back to the federal cabinet the views of provincial attorneys-general about shifting marijuana from the harsh Narcotics Control Act to the milder Food and Drugs Act. . .

He said on the eve of the meeting that he has had no reaction from any province yet. The commission's report was sent to the provinces June 26, the day after it was tabled in the Commons.

Mr. Turner said he wants provincial co-operation on several other law-enforcement matters, particularly how the divorce law changes of two years ago are working in practice.

Mr. Turner said statistics are particularly poor on abortion, the new breath-analysis law, divorce and other social aspects of the law. He had already held discussions on improvements with Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, federal cabinet minister responsible for the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The laws making divorce easier to obtain now have been in force for two years. But the breath-analysis law, making it an offence to refuse to take a test for blood alcohol as well as to have a blood alcohol level above .08 per cent, has been in force less than a year.

Lotteries, made legal within provinces who choose to set them up, also are expected to provide some discussion.

Attorney-General D. V. Heald of Saskatchewan, where they aren't legal, is believed to have complaints about Quebec's provincial lottery tickets sing sold in his province.

The only previous non-constitutional meeting in January, 1966, on organized crime resulted in a continental law enforcement network which Mr. Turner said proved remarkably effective.

On abortion Mr. Turner said the federal government wants only statistical data of the numbers of operations performed and the locations, not the identities of individuals undergoin an abortion.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Revision of Criminal Code To Be Studied at Conference

HALIFAX (CP) — Criminal Code changes affecting drugs and abortion, divorce, lotteries and drinking drivers come under special scrutiny of provincial justice ministers and attorneys-generals here in the next three days.

It is only the second such set of meetings at this level on non-constitutional issues and the first to be held outside Ottawa.

Justice Minister John Turner hopes to hear the beefs of the provincial ministers who administer the criminal law on proposed changes to bail laws. He also will be sounding them out on their views about tougher penalties for crimes of violence.

At the same time, Mr. Turner will be looking for the first provincia reaction on the recommendations of the Le Dain royal commission on non-medical drug use.

The federal government has already turned down the proposal by commissioner Gerald Le Dain that possession of any drug be punishable only with a maximum fine of $100 without any imprisonment provision.

Mr. Turner will be carrying back to the federal cabinet the views of provincial attorneys-general about shifting marijuana from the harsh Narcotics Control Act to the milder Food and Drugs Act.

He said on the eve of the meeting that he has had no reaction from any province yet. The commission's report was sent to the provinces June 29, the day after it was tabled in the Commons.

Mr. Turner said he wants provincial co-operation on several other law-enforcement matters, particularly how the divorce law changes of two years ago are working in practice.

Mr. Turner said statistics are particularly poor on abortion, the new breath-analysis law, divorce and other social aspects of the law. He had already held discussions on improvements with Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, federal cabinet minister responsible for the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The laws making divorce easier to obtain now have been in force for two years. But the breath-analysis law, making it an offence to refuse to take a test for blood alcohol as well as to have a blood alcohol level above .08 per cent, has been in force less than a year.

Lotteries, made legal within provinces who choose to set them up, also are expected to provide some discussion.

Attorney-General D. V. Heald of Saskatchewan, where they aren't legal, is believed to have complaints about Quebec's provincial lottery tickets being sold in his province.

The only previous non-constitutional meeting in January, 1966, on organized crime resulted in a continental law enforcement network which Mr. Turner said proved remarkably effective.

On abortion Mr. Turner said the federal government wants only statistical data of the numbers of operations performed and the locations, but investigates of individuals undergoing an abortion.

Belleville Council Approves Ban on Obstructive Loitering

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

The downtown Belleville scene may soon have some of its more permissive highlights stoned dead.

Today, a city ordinance banning obstructive loitering on Belleville streets is ready for government legalization.

The measure was swiftly endorsed by city council last night — a final response to continued complaints mainly evoked by youth attracted to the city's downtown core.

Young people collecting on city sidewalks and lounging around business entrances have been a source of complaints to police and city hall.

The unanimous reaction of city government now is bylaw 9005 — an anti-loitering measure quickly given three readings last night to speed its presentation for provincial government approval.

The law — introduced by traffic chairman Ald. Arthur Keegan — prohibits three or more persons from standing on a street or sidewalk and obstructing traffic, after they've been asked to move on.

The authority for such warnings is not confined to police jurisdiction.

The bylaw specifically states that such requests may be issued "by a police officer or other person duly authorized".

The anti-loitering measure is an amendment to the city's traffic bylaw and will carry the same penalties.

An official at the city clerk's office today estimated fines under the traffic bylaw range up to $20. The anti-loitering law will be sent to the provincial transport department for approval, he said.

Ald. Keegan said the measure was necessary to authorize police to act when necessary. The bylaw was a composite of similar regulations in force at Kingston and Picton.

Mayor Russell Good said there had been various complaints about pedestrian obstruction on Front Street.

"Something must be done about it," he said. "It must have come to the attention of all members of council at one time or another just what's happening."

Easy Drug Law Under Attack

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada's Provincial attorneys-general have told Justice Minister John Turner they are opposed to recommendations contained in the interim report of the Le Dain inquiry into non-medical use of drugs.

Mr. Turner did not give the federal government's view Wednesday when the provincial ministers criticized the report, but he promised to convey the opinions to his cabinet colleagues "who now have to digest the report and decide what to do."

The attorneys-general and Mr. Turner resume their meetings today.

The Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island ministers had harsh words Wednesday for the report's views, and other ministers were reported to have told Mr. Turner of their opposition to changes in current drug laws.

Hughes Vs RCA In Bid On Job

OTTAWA — The controversy over who builds a domestic Canadian communications satellite is suddenly vibrant with million-dollar signals for Belleville.

Northern Electric — whose Belleville electronic plant is the city's biggest industry — has a stake in the contract up for cabinet discussion today.

Only one firm bid on the project is going before cabinet — an offer by Hughes Aircraft of California for a $30,000,000 satellite.

Reports Canadian Press: "Northern Electric Co. Ltd., . . with a major subcontract plant at Belleville, Ont. is linked with the Hughes offer.

"Company officials say Northern Electric would get about $5,250,000 worth of electronic orders if Hughes gets the contract. Hughes also has given Northern a letter of intent that it could handle similar work on other satellites Hughes hopes to sell in the United States and elsewhere.

"A Northern Electric official said the interpretation is that Hughes could land contracts for up to 15 similar satellites, which would mean may prospects and long - term job opportunities for some Canadians."

In Belleville, the Northern Electric plant is on summer holiday schedules and no executive spokesman was available for comment on the report.

Georges Hees, MP Prince Edward - Hastings, today told The Intelligencer whoever gets the contract, his understanding is that Northern Electric will still receive a share of the work.

Northern Electric, Mr. Hees says, are the Canadian experts for a particular component phase of the satellite, and will qualify for a sub - contract "no matter who gets the contract."

Queen, Philip Fly Home

WINNIPEG (CP) — Queen Elizabeth flew home Wednesday night wishing Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, her centennial hosts, all the best for the next 100 years.

The royal couple's chartered Air Canada DC-8 was airborne at 11:47 p.m. CDT from Winnipeg international airport. On arrival in Prestwick, Philip goes to Edinburgh for the Commonwealth Games while the Queen returns to London.

The final day in Manitoba began with an impressive display of pageantry with the family travelling by horse-drawn carriage to the south lawn of the legislature building where the Queen spoke to assembled MLAs and the largest single public gathering of her tour.

The number of people lining the route or on the legislature grounds was estimated unofficially at 125,000.

Thailand Minister Fears U.S. Is Facing Mental Breakdown

BANGKOK (AP) — Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand suggested Wednesday the United States is on the verge of a national mental breakdown that has affected its reliability as an ally.

As a result "it seems relations between Thailand and the United States will evolve toward a more selective basis," he said.

Speaking at an American Chamber of Commerce luncheon with U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger in the audience, Thanat said current upheavals in American society made it "difficult for those working closely and loyally with the United States to expect a well reasoned and balanced reaction from their disturbed partner."

Thanat, a former ambassador to the United States and architect of the military alliance that allows large numbers of Americans to be stationed in Thailand, declared this feeling was shared "along the length and breadth of Asia."

Unemployment Rises in June

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rose last month to 529,000 from 513,000 at mid-May, running counter to the usual trend of lower unemployment in June, the manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

A big influx of students into the labor force looking for summer work was mainly responsible for the increase, though unemployment remained high among other workers as well, the report said.

Unemployment totalled only 331,000 in June last year.

Because of the larger labor force, the number of unemployed as a percentage of the total work force remained unchanged in May and June at 61 per cent. But because unemployment rose contrary to the usual pattern, the rate of unemployment on a seasonally-adjusted basis rose to 6.8 per cent, the highest since 1961.

The statisticians compute the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment on the basis of more than a dozen factors which affect employment figures on a month-to-month basis. The economists regard the seasonally-adjusted rate as the important one in judging how well the economy is doing.

Time to Stimulate Economy--Hees

OTTAWA (Special) — George Hees, MP for Prince Edward Hastings, today said the latest rise in unemployment during June — from 6.2 to 6.4 per cent of the work force seasonally-adjusted — is the culmination of six months of steadily and rapidly rising unemployment, and indicates clearly that the government's persistent refusal to stimulate the economy, coupled with its stubborn retention of high interests rates, are driving the country into an increasingly serious situation.

"Another factor which is slowing economic activity is the government's proposal to withdraw the 21 per cent tax rate for small businesses and in future charge these small businesses the full 50 per cent rate. New business enterprises are not being started, and existing ones are not expanding, at anything like the normal rate, and this slowdown is contributing materially to growing unemployment.

"The time is long overdue for the government to start stimulating the economy by: 1) offering tax incentives to increase productivity; — to lower costs and prices and thereby increase sales and jobs; 2) have the Bank of Canada give the lead to the commercial banks and other lending institutions in steadily lowering interest rates: 3) declare that the 21 per cent tax rate for small businesses will remain unchanged," and will not be replaced by the 50 per cent rate which is now proposed in the government's White Paper on Taxation."

Tenders to be Called for West End Rink Project

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville's most ambitious current recreation project has now entered its most vital phase.

Tenders are now to be called for a city rink, projected as the centrepiece of a blueprint that may give westend Bellevillans the city's most diversified recreation area.

The total scheme could link the city - built rink, ball diamonds and soccer field to the facilities of nearby Centennial Secondary School and a soon-to-be-built million - dollar swimming pool and athletic track at the adjacent Ontario School for the Deaf.

City council last night approved the calling of tenders for the rink, after laboriously sparring over groundwork details of the rink sited near Harder Drive.

It also approved terms of a lease with the building's titular landlord — Hastings County board of education.

Neither move automatically guarantees the rink's reality.

But, by calling tenders council will gain real cost estimates on a project for which up to $175,000 already has been allotted under future capital works programs.

The lease — approved later last night by the school board — must also be examined by a solicitor.

And, before signing the lease, council wants to know how it affects a $20,000 potential provincial grant.

City property — on which ball and soccer fields will be developed adjoins Centennial's schoolgrounds.

Best site for the rink, recreation chairman Ald. Donald Scatter told council, was on school property and the school board had totally co-operated on the plan.

It will permit the city to build the rink and — as the official landlord — rent it at a nominal one-dollar fee on the 50-year lease.

After weighing all eventualities, such an arrangement was believed the "easiest, fastest and, possibly, cheapest way of producing this arena," said the alderman.

However, the venture "in community co-operation could pose a problem of formality" involving provincial subsidy.

Under the Community Centres Act, the rink could qualify for the estimated $30,000 provincial grant.

But the terms of the act demand that such properties must be owned by the municipality.

And, cautioned city manager J. R. Reynolds, "the act is very explicit."

Mayor Russell Scott said the lease would not be signed until the grant situation was clarified.

Ald. Scatter suggested the problem could resolved at "some future stage" and need not delay discussion on groundwork details.

Debating such details now council, despite the discomfort of a summer - heated chamber, painstakingly scrutinize the proposed lease clause by clause, and query details of the rink's blueprints.

The slop - flowing debate also produced an outline of the over-all potential of the west end recreation scheme.

The rink and playing fields would be strategically located close to Centennial and Sir John A. Macdonald public school, noted Ald. Scatter.

Thus, the complex readily fits contemporary community trends which closely ally planning of school and recreation facilities, he said.

In future, this trend will see an oval - closer alliance between both areas of community activity in an effort to meet the challenges of increased leisure time.

It's a direction fully approved and encouraged by senior government, said the alderman.

Indicative of this were signs that the Ontario government would make available for community use its planned $1,250,000 swimming pool at the OSD.

An all-weather track - and - field facility is also projected for the OSD.

Such a combination of recreation facilities would create a complex which "could rival any owned by any city in Ontario," said Ald. Scatter.

Ever on Sunday

A 32-foot-tall facsimile of Toronto model, Dini Petty, will greet Eastminster United Churchgoers on Sunday morning. The fiberglass beauty is part of a national promotion campaign for a tire manufacturing firm. Ironically, the "Open on Sunday" sign not only serves the adjacent service station but also the church across the street.

Police said this morning that the collision occurred at 1 p.m. yesterday on Highway 62, two miles south of Madoc.

A spokesman explained that the Tilley vehicle which was northbound passed a truck and then went out of control and collided with the southbound Dwire vehicle.

Three ambulances were required to take the 10 people involved to hospital.

Belleville city council met last night and approved appointments to three top city hall posts.

They were:

Gordon Bratt, 43, of Ottawa, project director with a government development agency in the Manitimes, as city industrial commissioner;

Douglas J. Wright, chief clerk, public utilities commission, as purchasing agent and personnel officer.

John C. Miller, general counsel, Ontario Securities Commission, as city solicitor.

Candidates Interviewed For Y Job

The hiring committee of the Belleville Family YMCA, set up to find a replacement for Y general secretary Bert Messacar, met in camera on Monday afternoon to begin its interviews of potential replacements.

The six - man committee was formed last week and three of the six members are required for each round of interviewing and for the selection of a new general secretary.

The three members who interviewed the first candidate were Frank Heisz, Neil Lockyer and Jack Mosley.

They are working from a list of seven candidates provided by Russ Davey of the YMCA National Council who visited Belleville last week for a two - day top session.

The man interviewed on Monday afternoon was a young Torontonian, a married man in his thirties who is a professional YMCA worker at the present time.

"We are looking for someone young but fully certified" Frank Heisz of the hiring committee reported this morning.

Canadian Airlift Praised in Peru

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF has won praise for its mercy mission to earthquake-stricken Peru from the chief of the Oblate mission in Peru, Rev. J. C. Lavigne.

Everyone down here has been high in praise of the RCAF. They did splendid work. For a long time they carried the brunt of the burden of rescue and relief.

"The Canadian Caribous were the only planes capable of using the small, primitive airstrips in the mountains. The thin air and tricky mountain drafts made their work very hazardous and they called for great skill."

BEADY FESTIVITIES

Ancient Egyptians beat each other over the head to observe the new year.

Council Tables Request For All-day Dance

John Kehoe — one of the key Toronto organizers of the ill - fated Brotherhood of Man Peace Festival—had another application before city council last night.

This time, Mr. Kehoe was seeking rental of the Memorial Arena, Aug. 2 for an all - day dance.

Council tabled action on the request when Mr. Kehoe failed to appear with details of the dance program.

Ald. Donald Scatter, recreation and arena chairman said Mr. Kehoe had been invited to attend the council meeting to discuss the plans.

Two weeks ago, council objected to a peace festival proposed for Aug. 9 and being held in the city. It was booked for the Quinte Exhibition Grounds and would have drawn an expected attendance from across Ontario and the northern United States.

Council's move led to a mutual agreement between Mr. Kehoe and the parks board that the festival be withdrawn.

The arena dance, as outlined in a memo to council last night, would run until midnight "utilizing various Toronto - based speakers.

It would be advertised only in Belleville area.

Zwick's Needs Fill To Contour Land

Some day what is now a garbage dump will be a prime recreation area east of Zwick's Island.

The concept needs plenty of groundwork before it becomes a reality — and already city council must negotiate a hurdle.

Conceptual plans unveiled last week emphasize the need for contours before conversion of sterile land to sterling recreation facilities can begin.

Plenty of sanitary fill is needed for the contour's landscaping.

Only problem is, city hall already has contracted with a disposal service to the dumping garbage at a new site by Thurlow township.

Quinte Sanitary Services Limited have a contract that starts Aug. 1.

But, a memo from the parks department, last night advised city council that sanitary landfill created by garbage is needed at the East Zwick's Isle until Dec. 31.

City manager J. R. Reynolds told council, city hall had been advised Quinte Sanitary Services is not prepared to extend the contract starting date.

Council concurred with a parks board recommendation to negotiate with the contractor for an extension.

Ald. Jack Wilson, recreation council decided.

Mayor Russell Scott said a need to terminate landfilling the area with garbage had been indicated by the A.W.R.C.

Continued dumping might render the nearby Bay of Quinte unfit for swimming for more years than now estimated.

The mayor said:

"At some point, the OWRC is going to say: 'Get out of there,'" added the mayor.

Parks board chairman Ald. Paul Russell said he was not aware the city had been "told to desist" from dumping at East Zwick's.

Ald. Orbith Jeffrey said the East Zwick's reclamation project still had "a tremendous hole" in need of fill. She doubted if it could be filled by Aug. 1 and therefore some negotiations on the dumping contract would be warranted.

Museum Site To Be Discussed

Directors of the Hastings County Historical Society will meet this evening to examine proposals for a new historical museum site.

Options are various: they range from leasing a stately old Bellerville home into a museum to building a totally new building.

Alternatives will be presented this evening and a tentative policy decision is expected.

The Hastings County Museum has been housed in the old Shire Hall on Church Street since 1961.

A new museum was suggested as a centennial year project but the city opted for the Zwick's Island park project.

Hughes Vs RCA

Meantime, the issue goes before cabinet here after much controversy and comment. An informed source says an educated guess as to the time needed to reach a decision would be two weeks.

The Hughes bid — for a satellite with a 12-channel capacity with an expected life of seven years — almost halved an RCA Ltd.- bid.

Since then RCA, 80 per cent owned in the United States but with a big electronics plant in Montreal, has been scrambling to get back into prime contention, reports Canadian Press.

RCA suggested last week it could take a contract on its lower - capacity satellite for $35,000,000 estimated cost, plus a fee to be negotiated later.

Communications Minister Eric Kierans told reporters after this proposal that he is not receptive to "cost - plus" bids. He said the only recommendation going before cabinet is the one by Hughes, which won approval from Telesat Canada Corp., the public - private body set up by the government, to operate the space system, and which eventually will be selling shares to Canadians.

Mr. Hees said Wednesday that "lack of trust" had developed between Mr. Kierans and his department and RCA in Montreal that made RCA "unwilling to sign a firm contract."

Canada's "many unfortunate experiences" with cost - plus contracting should rule out that arrangement said Mr. Hees.

But, the cabinet should make a further attempt to persuade RCA to agree to a firm contract at a ryhasonable price because of the "great advantages of having" this satellite built in Canada are obvious.

Besides the cost question involving taxpayers directly, the final decision involves the touchy question of Canada in context in the satellite and future capacity in this field. This involves taxpayers indirectly and has plenty of political ramifications.

The Electronics Industries Association of Canada opposed the Hughes bid, saying it would not provide enough Canadian content.

John D. Houlding, RCA president, told a Montreal news conference when he announced the revised RCA offer last week that a government turn-down would end RCA's space satellite program.

Without referring directly to this statement, a Northern Electric official said Wednesday some "fantastic statements" had been appearing in the press. Northern had considered selling its own news conference on the eve of the cabinet consideration but decided not to join "the mud-slinging."

Heath Macquarrie, Conservative MP from Prince Edward - Island and his party's communications critic, issued a statement last week saying it would be a deplorable setback to Canadian science to have the space satellite built in the U.S.

Advantages to Canadian technological and industrial development justified greater cost of producing the satellite in Canada, he said.

William Walsh of Tyendinaga

Personal Touch Counts

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MELROSE — Tyendinaga is William Walsh's township in every sense.

He became its municipal clerk in 1956 — the year the township hall was 100 years old.

But his community credentials as the township's lone administrative official have more local pedigree than a 14-year-old rural government appointment.

Bill Walsh bears a surname that dates to the earlier days of Tyendinaga's settlement.

Even today, that's still significant. Tyendinaga is a municipal entity where an obliging, personal touch still counts.

It's only minutes from the Quinte urban-industrial core of Belleville. Yet local inclinations still lean to the attitudes of a more pastoral age when a family name gave an individual community identity.

A heritage of these attitudes in the 1970s is that personal identity still is important.

In short, in Tyendinaga the emphasis is still on people, agrees Mr. Walsh.

It's a value that's applied to native and newcomer alike these days — creating a community environment that's being rediscovered.

The most recent phenomenon in his years in office, says Mr. Walsh, is the resettlement of the township — this time by urbanites, mostly from Toronto.

Farmland vacant for years now is being purchased along the township's concessions which furnish some of the most attractive rural landscapes in Quinte area.

However, it's not the only change that has occurred since he first took office.

In fact, change started the day he was appointed.

Mr. Walsh was only the eighth man appointed township clerk since 1850.

He also was the first full-time official to hold that capacity, he recalls.

To his time, separate individuals had been made clerk, treasurer and tax collectors.

His office centralized all functions — and records — in the township hall.

Local government has become a complicated process in the intervening years. While a series of functions have been centralized on the county and provincial levels, it still continues to evolve in sophistication.

Mr. Walsh has kept his qualifications up with the growth — his certificates including a Queen's University correspondence course, a municipal assessors' course and attendance last year at a clerks' institute at Syracuse University.

The academic qualifications must also be reinforced by a certain stamina on the job. Outside of regular office hours there are council sessions and public meetings to attend.

His telephone must always be available at home for taxpayers. His chore is to put people's mind at ease and help them — if possible," explains Mr. Walsh.

"But the people are considerate. They don't bother you unnecessarily," he adds.

As for the hours he puts in: "I often meant to keep track — but I never did," he says.

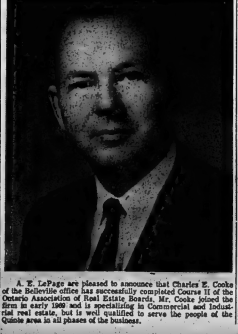
While his functions have undergone various changes, change has come gradually to the community itself.

While the urban and commercial sprawl is pushing into Sidney and Thurlow, Tyendinaga's neighboring Hastings County townships in the Bay of Quinte area — it has not yet "discovered" Tyendinaga.

Much of the township's spare timeable . . . . . Farmlands are snapped spare time by owners who find full employment elsewhere — in Belleville, Deseronto, Napanee.

The more and more people are turning to settling in Tyendinaga — which is a happy development, indicates Mr. Walsh.

"It is," he says, "an ideal community for living — here in Tyendinaga."



Blind Service Is Added

As of August 1, a new service to the blind in Belleville will be added to the program of the Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, a participating agency in the Belleville United Appeal.

Miss Alma Brault will come to Belleville from Kingston at least one day a week as a home teacher and, through personal home visits, will teach braille, typing, cooking, sewing and crafts.

In addition, Roy Lesperance, district CNIB representative, will make home visits in Belleville at least every two weeks.

This augments the home and hospital visitation program already operated in Belleville by Miss Myrtle Peck for the city's 65 registered blind people.

A. E. LePage are pleased to announce that Charles E. Cooke of the Belleville office has successfully completed Course II of the Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards. Mr. Cooke joined the firm in early 1968 and is specializing in Commercial and Industrial real estate, but is well qualified to serve the people of the Quinte area in all phases of the business.

Low Bid $3,605,587

Bayside School Tenders Opened, Defer Award Until July 20

Tenders for the construction of Bayside Secondary School on the Front Rd. were opened last night by trustees of the Hastings county board of education, but awarding of the contract was deferred until July 20.

Four construction companies submitted bids on the 1,200 - student school, to be built on the school farm at Bayside.

Konvey Construction Ltd. of Markham submitted the lowest bid for $3,605,587.

Highest bid was that of Brannlon Contracting, at $3,729,877. Then Kingston firms, Ball Brothers Ltd. and M. Sullivan and Son, also bid on the contract.

The amounts quoted include an additional $120,000 for extra mechanical and electrical work.

Irving Boigon of the architectural firm of Boigon and Heinonen of Don Mills, designers of the school, asked the board last night to consider the additional sum. It would be used for sheet metal ducts, fire extinguishing system, a chiller and cooling tower, fire hose, an intercommunication system, a telephone and public address system, electronics laboratory equipment, a TV antenna and wiring for the chiller.

"You could reduce the contingency fund to pay for the additional work," Mr. Boigon told the board.

"By a little juggling," he said, the extras would be included in the price. He said if the Konvey tender were accepted the cost of the school would be $4,000 over original estimates.

Konvey gave a target date of Dec. 1971 for completion of the school, with 60 to 70 per cent of the construction to be finished by September 1971. But Mr. Boigon cautioned that this interpretation did not necessarily include the classrooms.

The new school will include elevators for handicapped students and will feature precast concrete construction.

Trustees asked the architects to study the tenders and report back at a meeting Monday night, when the contract will be awarded.

Schools Used 11 Hours Daily For Recreation

Belleville schools are used a total of 11 hours a day for recreational purposes, the county board of education was told last night.

The summary of community use of schools is co-operation with the Belleville Recreation Committee, was released last night by supervisor of attendance and welfare officer Lendel L. A. Kelis.

"On the basis of five days a week, 52 weeks in the year, somewhere in the city at some location owned by the school board, a recreational program is in operation for 11 hours in each day," he told trustees.

This totals 2,720 hours a year, at 15 elementary schools, four secondary schools, school sites and future school sites and at the Quinte Secondary School Centre of East Bridge and Bleecker Ave.

Mr. Kelis presented a breakdown showing that summer playground programs are in operation for 780 hours in the year, and arts and crafts programs are conducted in school buildings for 130 hours.

Minor sports use school areas for 400 hours and sponsored youth organizations operating under the recognition of the Recreation Committee utilize the schools for 60 hours. Band practices and similar activities occupy 150 hours and social and recreational activities for teenagers, principally square dances, take up the remaining 1,200 hours.

Buffalo Suspect Returned to U.S.

A man, wanted in Buffalo, New York, on a charge of murder has been returned to the United States by seven OPP members.

Yesterday, Frank Spano, 50, wanted in connection with the gangland slaying of Gino Albizi, 35, of Buffalo, was returned to the Department of Immigration at Fort Erie. He was arrested Tuesday night while vacationing in Bloomfield.

A second man, Robert Metcalf, 43, of Depew, a former Erie County sheriff, was also arrested Tuesday a few hours after a county grand jury indicted him on a murder charge. He was arrested on a Buffalo street.

District Attorney Michael F. Dillon said both men were accused of shooting Gino Albizi, a reputed underworld figure.

"To my knowledge, this is the first successful investigation of a mob killing in Erie County in more than 20 years," Mr. Dillon said.

Contract Awarded For Renovation

Hugh Murray Construction Ltd. of Belleville was awarded the contract last night for the addition to Sir John A. Macdonald School in west Belleville.

The firm's bid of $189,000 was the lowest of six submitted to the Hastings county board of education.

The addition and site improvement plan was designed by Ernest Cromarty, architect, of Kingston.

The Murray firm estimated six months for completion of the building. Other companies submitting higher bids promised to complete the work in four to five months.

But superintendent L. A. Kelis said the month or two longer required by Murray for the construction was not vital.

"We already have the building there, and Avondale can accommodate the overflow until the addition is ready," he told the board.

A local firm, Finkle Machine, will be sub-contractor for the structural steel work in the addition.

Government Reports Available

For those residents of the Quinte area who are interested in the mechanics of senior governments and their data on various national problems and programs, the Belleville Public Library and Information department can be of considerable assistance.

The reference room acquires most significant government reports and studies. The third volume of the Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism report has just arrived and it makes for interesting reading.

This volume concerns the bread and butter issue of Canada's official cultural duality. It deals with the Quebecois in the work world and the problems he faces.

If regional disparity is a pressing problem in this country, the library has the details. They are found in a report of a federal study on the incomes of Canadians. The analysis is broken down into two ways — by provinces - regions and by labor force characteristics.

The whole question of intergovernmental fiscal arrangements in Ontario is dealt with in a new study that has recently arrived at the library. Provincial - municipal financing relationship is the prime subject of this volume.

The Transients

"We can't find work anywhere and we don't have money. We were up in Alaska and there's hundreds of kids hanging around waiting for something."

Thus spoke a group of young transients on a Vancouver beach. They are among the hundreds who have been en route across the country and if Mayor Tom Campbell has his way Vancouver will not be the end of the road.

But they have been to Alaska, or at least some have, so where do they go now? South to the United States? Hardly, for among them are draft dodgers and whether they belong in that category or not these rootless young people are not welcome there either.

Mayor Campbell is opposed to State Secretary of State Pelletier's plan to use Vancouver's Reatty Street armory as one of 15 across the country for the use of the young transients.

We can understand the Mayor's misgivings about this; he says he wants to rid the city of draft dodgers, deserters and hippies. On the other hand would it not be better on many other grounds, including humanitarian, to try and accommodate these young people for say a night at least, then tell them to move on?

The Vancouver District Council of Churches is reported trying to help young transients seeking work and lodging. This of course is the ideal solution and it is one which governments will have to tackle if we are not to be faced with a social problem of the first magnitude.

Is there no work that these young people can be given to perform? There must be many among them who are willing to work in some capacity? Has the government got no ideas beyond that of providing shelter in the armories? Nothing say in the forests or fisheries or canning factories of British Columbia?

If the federal and provincial governments really addressed themselves to the problem of finding useful employment for these young rovers they might come up with something positive in combatting what is a growing social problem in Canada. It could be a means also of channeling the kids back into the "straight" world which, let us face it, is a pretty good one if you cooperate with it. The only one too, which constitutionally affords a man such basics as food and shelter, not to mention money.

No Two Alike

The modern generation — what is it really like? Well, you have the kind of young people discussed in the above editorial — and like all human beings they have in their makeup both the good and the bad.

One who is in a position to judge youth pretty well is Apollo 11 moon flight astronaut Michael Collins, now a State Department assistant for public affairs. A major part of his work lies in helping the government improve its relations with young people and in recent months he has visited many campuses and addressed many college commencement exercises.

It is difficult to generalize," Collins told the Associated Press' Howard Benedict. There are kids, he said, who sincerely believe that U.S. foreign policy is formed every night by a phone conversation between the secretary of state and five international bankers. And there are 4-H clubbers who "are as conservative as Barry Goldwater." The great bulk, he said, is somewhere in-between. He believes too that the kids are "more informed, more concerned, more activist and more left wing than previous generations."

Interesting observations these, from a man who is one of America's modern heroes. Although within the activism of which he speaks are enshrined many of the ills of our day, they nevertheless are part of the human process, for good or ill.

A Lost Subscription

A letter on this page today brings home to this newspaper in particular the grass roots implications of the postal situation. A former resident and subscriber for many years has been obliged to cancel her subscription, at least for the time being.

The Islington reader of course is not alone in her dismay at the eccentricities of Canada's postal service, if such it may be described at this point.

Both union and government must share the blame for the present impasse. Because of their obdurate stance the movement of mail is erratic and uncertain. The public of course remains in the middle — the principal victim of an irresponsible confrontation.

'Demos' Have Had It Mostly Their Own Way

Fall May See Increased Security On Parliament Hill

OTTAWA — The Honorable Members of the Commons, home now three weeks of their three - month summer sitting, will be considering, among other things, what they are going to have to do to counter the rising threat of mindless demonstrations to peace, order and good government.

It is not so much the mounting peril of violence on the streets of this so - recently quiet Capital by the lunatics of the New Left that bothers them.

For the parliamentarians seem content to leave the radicals to the police, while doing nothing to help the forces of law and order, but often grieve the scorchiest a helpful persuasive assist.

But now with violence lately coming in off the streets to invade their one-soup compound behind the high wrought iron fence of Parliament Hill, the concern of the politicians is for themselves.

Worried about the danger of the "demos" to the parliamentary process, to say nothing of the physical peril to their own persons, the MPs left the problem of security in the hands of a special police - shooting leaving for the ease and safety of home.

There is a problem, too — the problem of the police backing off in the face of violence.

And there frequently, has been a backoff with the RCMP, in charge of Hill security, standing off to one side in a "who, me?" stance when fires have been lighted on Parliament's Main Walk, legitimate visitors and tourists intimidated, and the very fabric of the Centre Block home of the Commons and Senate blog battered in mob action.

The "demos" have been many and varied.

Stalinists have showered revolutionary leaflets on the heads of the MPs.

The Members have been rudely splashed by a blood bomb and shaken to their core by a dynamite blast six feet from the doors of the public gallery, so powerful it got to every marble - walled, washroom.

A bomb has gone off down the corridor, from the Commons' Chamber.

Various feuds, and objects hard enough to hurt have been thrown to the floor of the House where, unprotected, sit the MPs like so many clay pigeons.

A goodly group of hysterical women have chained themselves to the seats in the galleries and with their shrieking and screeching forced the adjournment of the House.

Hundreds of angry Western Quebec and Eastern Ontario dairy men, besieging the Centre Block, have used the sparse shrubbery at the foot of the Peace Tower as a toilet.

And that is just a partial list of acts of violence that have had nervous MPs casting worried lances at the packed galleries of the House and their guarded doorways.

In self - defence, the Commons and Senate have doubled the parliamentary Protective Staff.

Security men in plain clothes line up with the crowds and sit quietly on the watch among the spectators in the galleries.

No packages or parcels may be taken into these galleries and coats must be checked outside.

Tickets for gallery seats, previously handed out by MPs to visitors with casual encounters, now will be serial numbered and recorded.

None of this has been enough to contain the kooks who more and more seem to think Parliament is for protest.

What now, then?

Ad hocus, the MPs are thinking over several suggested security measures which may be applied next October when the Commons re-convenes.

Among them:

a. Detention cells for troublemakers taken into custody. Until now there has been no guard-room cells where they are held, for the arrival of police. The Chief of the Protective Staff has sometimes used his glass - enclosed office in the basement of the Centre Block for one or two offenders, but there have been times when it has been so overstuffed the security man could do nothing but let the overflow go.

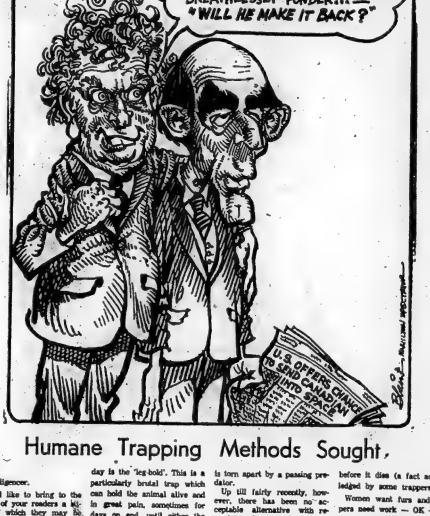
b. The arming of the security force who today are secret of feeling threatened. Just about the only "weapon" at hand in the House is the mace of the Sergeant at Arms.

c. Enlisting the RCMP for beside Centre Block patrols. Until now, the federal police have jurisdiction outside the Commons and Senate or the grounds of Parliament Hill.

D. Temporary closing of the Centre Block against the public, press and even parliamentarians themselves when trouble threatens as happened during the recent visit of Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

E. Barring public entry at all except one of the six guarded doors of the Centre Block, with only the Main Entrance to Confederation Hall left open, with stepped - up security patrols.

f. Issuing identification, to staff, press, MP's and Senators who forget to carry their photo-identification cards.



g. Enclosing the floor of the Commons — located at a level well below the galleries — in a plexiglass dome.

This last is the only measure the worried parliamentarians were not ready to accept when they left for home.

"Too much like a fish-bowl," said Conservative financial critic Marcel Lambert of Edmonton.

"Might make the spectators think we are human and a sort of zoo," fretted New Democratic Whip Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg.

There is a certain content of ham in politicians, like a English performing before a real live audience — and their yen for the theatre could overcome their concern for security.

Humane Trapping Methods Sought

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to bring to the attention of your readers a situation of which they may be entirely unaware, i.e. the way in which animals are trapped for their furs in this present day and age.

Unfortunately, still the most widely used trap in Canada today is the 'leg hold'. This is a particularly brutal trap which can hold the animal alive and in great pain, sometimes for days on end, until either the trapper puts the animal out of its misery, it has starved or frozen to death, it escapes to die elsewhere by chewing through its own limbs, or it is torn apart by a passing predator.

Up till fairly recently, however, there has been no acceptable alternative with regard to a humane trap. As far as we can see, the only way to trap an animal humanely is to use a trap which will kill instantly and so avoid the lengthy suffering the animal endures before it dies (a fact acknowledged by some trappers).

Women want furs and trappers need work — OK — We accept that. What we don't accept is that the furs have to be taken in such an agonizing way. We are sure many women who admire fur garments at present have no conception as to what is involved in order to get these very furs.

We are members of the Canadian Association for Humane Trapping, which is attempting to do something about this situation. We cannot sit by and let millions of animals die in this way every year when alternative methods are available and new ones being developed. We feel that the first step is to pass a law to make illegal the use of this 'leg-hold' trap. We have enough faith in people to believe that when they realize what is involved to obtain a fur coat by present day methods, they will protest the use of this medieval contraption, which incidentally is banned in the UK and some parts of Europe.

Anyone interested in this subject could approach the CAHT at Box 694, Station F, Toronto 5, Ontario.

Adult Entertainment

Matinee Shows and the Kids

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Our grandson, who is 11 years of age, was visiting us for the weekend and we thought he might enjoy going to the show on Saturday afternoon. When I looked in your paper to see what movies were playing, I found that both movies were advertised as "adult enteritainment" and one "age restricted". Thinking that they would have a matinee for children I phoned the theatre to inquire and was told that only the advertised movie was showing and "it was an adult picture but the children could come and see it if they wished to do so."

What has happened to the matinee they used to have for children on Saturday afternoon? How do we expect our young people to grow up to be the type of people needed as future citizens to govern our country in the future as it should be governed if we are going to present them with this type of trash? Maybe I am too old-fashioned but I don't believe that this type of show should be shown on a Saturday afternoon when many young people attend.

'Intell' Loses Subscriber Because of Erratic Mail

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is with sincere regret I am closing off my subscription to your interesting paper. The incredible postal situation has rendered delivery too sporadic.

For 21 years I have been a subscriber and have always enjoyed reading The Intelligencer. For the past 15 years it has been me in touch with Belleville where I spent 16 very happy years.

I shall miss the paper and perhaps, in the future when Mrs. Kiernan and his fellow Cabinet members resolve their dispute and are ousted, once more I'll be a subscriber.

In the meantime, I wish you every success — especially with Richard Jackson's column.

Europe's Oldest Settlement Uncovered in Yugoslavia

UNESCO Features

Because a young archaeologist followed up his branch, Europe's oldest settlement has been discovered at Lepenski Vir in Yugoslavia — just in time, for a dam will shortly cover the site under a vast reservoir.

When Romania and Yugoslavia decided to build the dam jointly, writes Jean Vidal in the April issue of the Unesco "Courier", Dragoslav Srejovic, a lecturer in the philosophy faculty of Belgrade University, was given the task of seeking Stone Age culture on the banks of the Danube.

For centuries fishermen had been drawn to Lepenski Vir ("the whirlpool of Lepena") because the fish trapped by the turbulence of the rapids provided magnificent catches. Srejovic reasoned that prehistoric fishermen would also have been drawn there and digging proved him right.

Nine early dirt - carbon testings of the settlement date it to around 5,900 B.C. — older than any other European settlement so far unearthed — what was found was of extraordinary interest.

The site, dominated by the trapezoid - shaped Treskavac mountain, lie in a deep valley which is also trapezoid and the foundations of the hundred houses uncovered show that the houses themselves were trapezoid shaped. Another way trapeze shaped.

The Lepenski Vir buried their dead inside their homes beside the hearth — though they had fallen asleep with their hands resting under their heads," as Srejovic put it. This seems natural because the homes were comfortable, sheltered from the prevailing wind and planned to allow easy movement.

Belleville Diver Expects Bodies to Be Found Today

CORNWALL (Staff) — Search for bodies in the sunken hull of the laker Eastcliffe Hall is hampered today by high waves in the St. Lawrence, diver Stu Meeks of Belleville reported this morning.

Two bodies remain trapped in the wreckage of the freighter that sank Tuesday with a loss of nine lives.

Speaking from the temporary morgue set up in a tent at the Cyrsler Park Marina, part of Upper Canada Village, Mr. Meeks, a Belleville ambulance operator, said the bodies of Captain Richard Groulx's son Alain, 16, and an unidentified crewman were found this morning.

"The Groulx lad had obviously been sleeping below at the time of the sinking," said Mr. Meeks. His body was recovered by the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority divers working around the stern of the vessel in 70 feet of water.

The crewman's body was brought to the surface by Ontario Provincial Police divers.

Mr. Meeks is one of eight divers, including OPP personnel and two members of CFB Trenton's Flying Frogmen Scuba Club, who are working around the bow of the freighter.

Earlier this morning Mr. Meeks reported that the search of the hull would be completed today. But later he said rising winds have sent high waves rolling over the diver support boats, slowing search efforts.

All bodies recovered so far have been found within the wrecked hull of the freighter. The Belleville diver said there is a slight chance of those remaining being washed out of the hull by swift currents at the site. When exploration of the hull is completed, he expects all bodies will have been recovered.

"The bow is demolished," reported Mr. Meeks. "The underwater scene is littered with debris, wire, ropes, lines and the three hatch covers that blew from the air pressure as water poured into the sinking vessel".

Visibility 70 feet below the surface of the St. Lawrence is "pretty good," according to the diver — about three feet with lights.

Mr. Meeks went to the disaster scene Tuesday evening, taking his rescue boat with him. It has been in use since then. The search was called off yesterday at 3.30 p.m. when the main dive support launch developed engine trouble.

The Eastcliffe Hall sank three minutes after striking Cryster Shoal, about one mile off the Cryster Park Marina.

Mr. Meeks said the laker is lying on bottom, about 300 yards south of the marked channel toward the American side of the river.

Reserve Visit Doubly Welcome

TYENDINAGA (Staff) — The Mohawks on this reserve are not alone in feeling that the contributions of native peoples to Canada's cultural identity needs more emphasis.

A feeling for native culture for such a new cultural direction is the classroom.

It's a process that now may be slowly getting under way, the Bay of Quinte Mohawks learned yesterday.

Visiting the reserve were almost 30 school teachers, participants in the first education project of its kind in Ontario.

They were members of the Teachers of Indian Children program — a five - week course now underway at Peterborough's Trent University, that puts the emphasis on native culture.

The day - long visit here was a highlight of the project — the first mass visit by the teachers to an Indian reserve.

Like all field trips, its purpose was to underline course content with actual experience.

The program — a department of education certificate course — is designed to instil a feeling for native culture among the teachers.

"It's something native peoples have been demanding for some time. That teachers have some contact with their culture," explained Walter Currie, assistant superintendent of the department's supervisors.

For native peoples that cultural identity is vital in a white-dominated society.

"It's the basis of their ability to walk with pride in that society — for their self-pride, self - awareness and self - identity," said Mr. Currie.

There are also ramifications for non - native Canadians, he indicates.

"I think any Canadian person just simply has to examine his knowledge of the native people," he said. "What he has learned in school is either very limited or negative — and this needs to be corrected. It's a culture, al heritage that belongs to every Canadian and adult."

Not all teachers on course, will be educating native children, said Mr. Currie.

"Some have come simply to broaden their awareness of native culture."

Course instructors represent various native bands and include teachers and government officers.

Food yoked of much of yesterday's tour was the Mohawk school on the reserve, where teachers met with reserve residents to discuss a wide range of cultural concerns.

From there, they fanned out to view reserve facilities.

Easy Drug Law Opposed

Attorney-General D. V. Heald of Saskatchewan blasted the report for demonstrating "quite clearly its evident anti-police bias and its pro-drug stance."

Attorney-General J. Elmer Blanchard of Prince Edward Island accused the commission of accepting evidence which supports favourable attitudes to marijuana while qualifying or negating evidence on the harmful effects.

The remarks of both men, made at secret sessions, were distributed to reporters later. Comments by other attorneys-general were not made public but informants who attended the meetings said they supported the two ministers.

African Nations Seek Economic Independence

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Various African countries which have won political independence in recent years are moving now to pin down their economic independence as well.

Within the last few weeks four countries have taken the ultimate step—nationalizing banks, insurance companies, mines and oil companies as well as major commercial and industrial enterprises.

Other countries, including Kenya, are trying persuasion, encouraging banks and others to take a more active role in development.

Nigeria chose to require banks to incorporate locally, rather than nationalize them. The move kept profits in the country and bankers running the banks.

"Nationalization is an antiquated economic philosophy . . . most countries of the world today prefer joint state and industrial participation," says Kenya economist Jerry Osoda.

A British banker in Eastern Africa observes: "Nationalization frequently kills incentive, lowers efficiency and burdens the organization with the excessive manpower and paper work of government."

Then why nationalize?

Governments with announced policies of socialism, or a swing to the left, do it to support their political philosophy and to put black faces behind desks.

In introducing his "common man's charter" last October, President Milton Obote of Uganda said: "The guiding economic principle will be that the means of production and distribution must be in the hands of the people as a whole. The fulfilment of this principle may involve nationalization of enterprise privately owned."

On May Day he announced a 60-per-cent government takeover of banks, mines, insurance companies, oil, distribution companies and major industry, with government control of imports and exports.

Later Maj.-Gen. Mohamed Siad, president of Somali's Supreme Revolutionary Council announced nationalization of banks, oil-distribution companies, insurance firms and an Italian-owned electric company.

Sudan's revolutionary government proclaimed "an end to foreign domination" as it too nationalized banks, insurance firms and major industries in pledging the bulk of foreign trade.

Algeria has nationalized the holdings of five major oil companies. Sierra Leone is starting talks for a 51-per-cent takeover of iron-mining operations. Diamond mining became government business in July.

In several countries compensation remains to be negotiated, with some countries discussing payment over a 15-year period.

Seven Children Die

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (CP) — A bus loaded with children on an overnight excursion skidded in the rain Wednesday and pitched down a bank, killing seven and injuring 32.

The bus apparently flipped end-over-end throwing some of the children out and then landing on top of them.

Communists Resented

South Vietnamese Quit Youth Parley

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Vietnamese delegates angrily withdrew Wednesday from the World Youth Assembly, charging Communist disruption. "fascist maneouvres" and brutal behavior by United Nations employees.

The South Vietnamese delegates said in a letter to Chairman Lars Thalen of Sweden that:

—They had been prevented from speaking by a "permanent campaign of unruly disruption" by Communist delegations.

—Their interpreter, Tran Khanh Van, was "collared and nearly strangled" by five UN guards for merely interpreting their request to take the floor in the World Peace Commission Tuesday.

—They had been subjected to "fascist manoeuvres," "racial bias" and "the brutal behavior of employees of the United Nations."

A UN spokesman said a preliminary investigation showed the interpreter had left the peace commission meeting voluntarily after shouting from the floor.

Aswan High Dam Soon in Operation

CAIRO (Reuters) — The Aswan High Dam on the Nile River, symbol of Egypt's economic revolution, will soon become fully operable, a decade after work on it began.

Soviet and Egyptian engineers now are installing the last of 12 giant turbines. All will be in working order by the July 23 anniversary of the overthrow of the monarchy in 1952.

Completion of the $550,000,000 project fulfils one of the most cherished dreams of President Gamal Abdel Nasser. It also provides another reminder of the extent of Soviet influence and of Egypt's debt to Moscow.

In the present warlike situation, celebrations will be muted and original plans for a large gathering of Egyptian and Soviet leaders at the site in Upper Egypt have been abandoned.

The 364-foot high dam and its surrounding installations bristle with anti-aircraft defences. The dam, which will add $559,000,000 to Egypt's national income, is considered a prime military target.

The project was born in an atmosphere of big-power rivalry and intrigue.

The United States and Britain originally offered to give $70,000,000 for the first stage and the International Bank another $200,000,000. When the U.S. backed out, the other offers were also withdrawn.

Nasser angrily announced he would nationalize the Suez canal and build the Aswan dam with the profits. He did take over the canal and ran it successfully after the failure of the 1956 Anglo-French Suez invasion.

Eventually, in December, 1958, the Soviet Union agreed to provide a $350,000,000 loan, repayable at low interest.

The benefits of the dam to Egypt have already been immense.

The Nile god, who brought poverty or plenty according to the rainfall in distant Ethiopia, has been tamed. The waters piling up behind the wall in Lake Nasser are distributed scientifically, according to requirements.

Instead of one crop a year, there are several. There are no more lean years and no more floods.

Some 1,200,000 acres of new land will come under cultivation and an extra 1,000,000 tons of rice each year will be available for export because of the dam.

Fire-bomb Is Hurled At Sarnia

SARNIA (CP) — A fire-bomb was hurled at a downtown grocery store early Wednesday, forcing a young couple and their baby to flee an apartment above the store.

The resulting fire caused an estimate $10,000 damage. Police believe a broken beer bottle they found in the doorway of Smyth's Grocery had been filled with a flammable substance and hurled at the store.

Fire Chief Clifford Hanson said the bombing had to be the work of "some kind of lunatic."

Mr. and Mrs. Roger La Prati were sleeping upstairs when Mrs. La Prati smelled smoke. They grabbed their 14-month-old child and fled.

Jack Smyth, owner of the store for 12 years, could give no reason for the bombing.

Fortune in Drugs Seized By U.S. at Detroit Border

CHATHAM (CP) — About $2,500,000 in drugs being taken from Canadian to the United States were seized at Detroit last month, Police Chief Gordon Preston of Windsor told the Rotary Club here Wednesday.

He said there is an apparent change in the direction of the illicit drug traffic across the border at Windsor and Detroit. For many years authorities worried about drugs coming into Canada, the chief said.

UAW Canadian Director Rejects Wage Curbs If Prices Free

TORONTO (CP) — At the opening of negotiations between the United Auto Workers and car manufacturers, the head of the Canadian branch of the union has left no doubt that the union will ignore government guidelines.

"We are not going to get caught in the situation where we are not going to get and the corporation is free to run its prices and everything else," Dennis McDermott, Canadian director for the UAW, told a news conference Wednesday. His comments were made prior to opening of separate talks with Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. and General Motors of Canada Ltd.

Prime Minister Trudeau should first impose controls on us about wage controls," he said.

"He's trying to saddle us with the job that he ought to be doing himself."

Mr. McDermott said there was a possibility of a strike, although he hoped a strike would not occur.

Negotiators for the companies who said they would not want a strike.

A. G. Stapleton, GM's director of personnel, in a prepared statement, said:

"We are interested in . . . reaching an agreement as quickly as possible that will be fair to all concerned. We believe that such an agreement can be reached, as long as both parties to the negotiations bear in mind that wage increases must go hand in hand with the long-term productivity trend.

The "long term productivity trend" will be affected by competition from imports.

Ken Hallsworth, Ford's vice-president for industrial relations, said imports now account for more than 30 per cent of Canadian sales, and the foreign manufacturers' sales were increasing. Sales of North American manufacturers are currently down about 25 per cent compared with last year.

Both Mr. Stapleton and Mr. Hallsworth declined to comment on the possibility of car price increases in relation to wage increases. But they did disagree with the contention of Mr. McDermott that wages had no connection with car prices.

"Certainly wages are an integral part of the cost of the product," Mr. Stapleton said.

Mr. McDermott said wages, pension benefits, voluntary overtime and benefits for workers temporarily laid off would be major items of discussion.

Both union and company representatives agreed that negotiations in the United States would directly affect talks in Canada.

The contracts between the UAW and Ford, General Motors and Chrysler Corp.—the Big Three manufacturers in Canada and the U.S.—expire on Sept. 14. The Canadian workers achieved parity with U.S. workers in the last contract and both sides concede that parity will not be an issue this time.

There is, however, one issue affecting parity. The last set of contracts had a cost-of-living factor with a "cap". The cap limited increases in wages due to cost-of-living increases but the last contracts allowed for any excess to be added in the next contract.

The excess amounts to 38 cents an hour for U.S. workers and slightly more than half that amount for Canadian workers.

The union contends the 38-cents-an-hour should be added before negotiations for an increase for the coming contract period. The companies contend the 38-cents-an-hour should be part of the increase in the coming contract.

The current wage for an assembler, the most common job classification, is about $3.80 an hour.

Negotiations between the UAW and Chrysler Corp. for both Canadian and U.S. workers open Friday in Detroit.

There are about 80,000 UAW members employed by the Big Three in Canada and about 120,000 in the U.S.

The current UAW contract with American Motors (Canada) Ltd., covering about 1,600 employees, expires Oct. 6.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE CHATTEN

Chatten — Cassidy

St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed was the scene of the July 4 wedding of Mary Judith Cassidy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cassidy of Tweed and Wayne Joseph Chatten of Belleville, son of Mr. Jesse Chatten, Foxboro and the late Mrs. Florence Chatten. Rev. C. E. Baker officiated at the ceremony and organist was Rev. Sister Rita Gleason. The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white silk organza, appliqued with yellow flowers and featuring a yellow scalloped bertaine, a cummerbund at the waist ending in a bow at the back, and puffed sheer organza sleeves. She wore a three-tiered floor-length veil of tulle and cap of organza roses outlined with pearls and carried a cascade bouquet of miniature yellow carnations entwined with ivy.

Maid of honor was Miss Barbara Johnson wearing an A-line floor-length yellow taffeta brocade dress with round neckline. She wore yellow ribbon loops of the same material in her hair and carried a bouquet of asters and white miniature carnations.

Best man was Jack Chatten, brother of the bridegroom and ushers were Bob Cassidy, brother of the bride and Bill Chatten, brother of the bridegroom.

The couple will reside at 346 Sidney St., Belleville.

Mao Tse Tung's Wife Active Again As Patroness of Proletarian Culture

TOKYO (AP) — Mao Tse-tung's actress wife, Chiang Ching, has returned to prominence in China as patroness of a proletarian culture preparing the nation for war and revolution.

Four years ago she blossomed into a full-fledged Communist party leader in the forefront of party chairman Mao's successful struggle to purge party foes led by President Liu Shao-chi.

She was named last year to the party politburo, but then appeared to subside into bureaucratic obscurity.

Now a series of articles in the Chinese press shows she is active in sponsoring new art forms, refurbishing old ones and lending encouragement to the Maoist movement called "revolutionary realism and revolutionary romanticism."

She recently was identified with a new piano concerto, The Yellow River, described as "the first piano concerto to portray such a great theme as people's war."

A Red Flag commentary says the composition "portrays the heroic and lofty aspirations of the Chinese nation and the glorious history of struggle of the Chinese people, the great victory of the war of resistance to Japanese aggression under the direct leadership of Chairman Mao and the great victory of Chairman Mao's thinking on people's war."

Chiang Ching gets general credit for the new concerto as extended in a recent statement by Mao's "proletarian revolutionary line in literature and art."

She is more intimately associated with this line in the opera The Red Lantern, now enjoying a boom on the Chinese stage. The opera is described as "the first great basic achievement of the revolution in Peking Opera initiative by Comrade Chiang Ching among the revolutionary art workers."

It was her answer in 1965 to the opera stars who had snubbed Mao. It is the symbol of her triumph over them.

Mao's ideas about Chinese literature, music and art were spelled out in Yenan 28 years ago. Chinese propagandists have launched a campaign to celebrate the anniversary in convenient means of linking Mao and Chiang.

As Mao sees it, art and culture are political weapons.

The hero of Red Lantern, Li Yu-ho, scorns death. He sings: "I look up and see the red flag of revolution; the flames of resistance are spreading across the sierras; in past, fresh flowers will bloom; new China will shine like the morning sun."

It is no accident that Japanese militarists are the villains of both the concerto and the opera: Peking today sees the Japanese military machine as being revived at the urging of the United States.

The emphasis on war and revolution springs also from the threat of Soviet Russia on the Chinese borders, the spread of the Vietnam war to Cambodia, the world atmosphere of rebellion Mao extolled in a recent statement.

In China the cultural leader can have enormous stature, Thus Chiang Ching again occupies a position of power, as she did during the cultural revolution. It may stay in it exceeds that of her purely political or military associates.

YWCA Opens Hostel For Transients

TORONTO (CP) — The YWCA has opened up a hostel for the summer where transient girls can sleep and have breakfast for 25 cents a day.

It's an unpretentious place. Bare bulbs hang from the walls and a bed in a one-inch foam rubber mat on the floor.

When she registered, she had to pay her quarter and also fill out an application for general welfare assistance. The Y collects $3 a person for bed and breakfast from the Toronto welfare department.

House rules say that girls have to be in by midnight and cannot stay longer than four days. But exceptions are made often.

"We try to see what the need is," said Cindy Mifsud, a graduate sociology student and one of the four girls on staff.

Lindsay is an 18-year-old French-Canadian girl who came to Toronto from Montreal looking to find a job.

For the first time in three weeks she is getting three meals a day. She has breakfast at the hostel, lunch at an emergency welfare place and a cheap dinner at the snack bar in the Y.

She didn't finish high school and has no job experience, and has been job-hunting unsuccessfully for a month.

Having been on the road all day looking for jobs, she usually spents the hostel's amenities—ping-pong and TV—and is ready for her foam mat early.

TIME OUT

LONDON (AP) — Prospective fathers should be allowed time off from work to help their wives during "the final stages of a wife's pregnancy," a report by British civil service union leaders contends.

Mental Health Said to Be Biggest Health Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — Mental health is the biggest public health problem Canada faces, says Geneva Lewis, newly elected president of the Canadian Public Health Association.

Mrs. Lewis, director of public health for the Ottawa-Carleton regional government, says not enough is known about mental illness to set up an effective program to prevent it.

"We are very concerned about what's behind the rise in the venereal disease rate among the young," she says.

"What's behind the kids who are so alienated from society, and what's behind the high suicide rate in this country"

Next to traffic accidents, suicide was the biggest cause of death among Canadians in the 20-to-24 bracket, and Ottawa is also concerned about the rise in venereal disease that has about 825 people had been treated at a special clinic during the first quarter of 1970.

"We have to find out what gave rise to this angry generation. All these things seem to indicate there's something wrong with our mental health."

Mrs. Lewis says she does not believe the theory that family breakdown has generated these problems. In fact she is not convinced there is a family breakdown in Canada.

"I think the problem stems from the fact we are still in the transition period from being an urban society here," she said.

She also suspects that the recent rise in demands for equality for women is part of the total picture. Mrs. Lewis is convinced most women work for economic reasons.

"Women have brains, they are educated, and they wonder why they can't use this."

Mrs. Lewis says there has been a terrific increase in venereal disease among persons in the 25-and-under age group and that public health officials in Canada are concerned there might be an increase in tuberculosis among young people who leave home for the hippie way of life.

As for the drug problem, from a public health point of view it was fraught with controversy.

"Society in general has never had to handle this before. There have always been drug addicts, but they were small in number.

"There's a tremendous fear associated with drug use which leads, in some areas, to mismanagement in treatment programs. We are just not geared to handle it in Canada, and it's not one of those black-and-white things, either."

Next to the general area of mental health, Canada's second biggest public health problem was dental health.

Cool Environment of Bay Shores Inspires Artists

AMELIASBURG — Recommended for Quinte area womenfolk determined to beat the heat this summer — art classes held on the bayshore in the township every Wednesday afternoon.

The classroom is in the open air under tall shade trees with the exposure to the prevailing west winds off the water.

The opportunity to learn a hobby in cool leisure atmosphere has so far attracted nearly two dozen local women (married and single) with a variety of other interests.

Artist Donnah Cameron assisted by her daughter of the same name started the first class early in July. The course, of four week duration, is devoted entirely to water color painting.

Assignments for pupils began with instruction in the basic procedure for stretching the paper they paint on. Yesterday most of the eager group assembled for the second-period of instruction in painting, with great enthusiasm in spite of the humid environment troubling the majority elsewhere.

Mothers May Still Invite the Young Man to Dinner

By DORIS CLARE

Perhaps you think the day is long past when mothers simply wouldn't think of being forward enough to invite the dinner a young man who had caught a daughter's fancy? I'm here to tell you that it isn't so. Daughters still need help and mothers are still backward about giving it to them — some mothers, that is.

The girls who eventually link up with the best marriage partners are the ones who have had a chance to mix with an assortment of boys. Where the home is "open house" and the mixing included getting together on pizza or a four - layer hamburger, this is super.

One mother told me all she needed to do was keep the refrigerator well stocked. The young people knew their friends were welcome and that there would always be tasty snacks in the fridge.

Ladies, your exuberant visitors aren't going to see it if there is a tear in the wallpaper or a stain on the paint. They are too busy looking at one another to notice mere details like whether the roof is caving in.

Dear Doris: Would "Budding Talent" be interested in joining a workshop of budding writers? The object is, of course, to share constructive criticism and help one another in various ways.

I took a course in creative writing at the Nova Scotia School of the Arts, but this is not easy for anyone who does not live in Nova Scotia. — Help Answered.

Dear Help: I have passed your message along to her, as she does live in your area.

Little informal workshops are one good way to get some practice at writing and to share ideas. For the most part, writing is 90 per cent the disciplined job of putting thoughts on paper, revising, re-writing, polishing.

Then when your written words are about as good as you can make them, your fellow strugglers can help tremendously by reading and discussing what you have written.

There are workshops like the one you mention in a number of Canadian cities — and they are doing a job for the kindred spirits who willingly submit to this kind of going over.

Dear Doris: I have a blue rolling pin which was given to me by my father. He was 80 years old when he died three years ago.

Before the pin was given to him by his mother, who got it from her mother and he said it came from Bluebeard's home.

I would like to know where I could get the history of Bluebeard. — Just Art.

Dear Art: In your library. The story of Bluebeard, first printed in 1967, was based on the life of Gilles de Rais, a marshal of France, who was hanged in 1440 for many heinous crimes.

It doesn't say whether he baked or hopped people with the pin; in fact, don't mention it.

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope for private reply.)

Wisconsin Teacher Once Smallest Baby

BRISTOL, Wis. (AP) — Three well-worn scrapbooks, a bonnet and a blanket are the only mementos that Jacqueline Benson Feicht has of the brief season she was accorded as the world's smallest baby 34 years ago.

Medical authorities gave the 13-ounce infant little chance for survival. But after 4½ months in an incubator and forced feeding through a tube to her stomach, Jackie was released from a Chicago hospital. She reached her normal weight and size by the time she was 2 and doctors hailed her survival as a medical miracle.

Interest in Jackie's infancy was renewed recently when Sally R. Giles of Seaside, Calif., wife of naval officer Roger Giath, gave birth to a one - pound, seven - ounce girl.

The baby, Laura Elizabeth, was three to four months premature, and did not survive.

Little of her former life in the limelight has rubbed off on Mrs. Feicht, a kindergarten teacher and wife of a Milwaukee social worker.

She and her husband Emil are childless but are preparing to adopt four children of American Indian ancestry—a family of three brothers and a sister. Mr. and Mrs. Feicht live with his parents in this small town and operate a dog breeding business in their spare time.

Mrs. Feicht recalls—with annoyance—the public aspect of her singular medical history. She says one photograph of her as an unclothed infant that accompanied annual stories on her birthdays throughout the years caused her intense embarrassment as a teen-ager and a rough time as a teacher.

"You try and convince a bunch of 5-year-olds that you're Miss Benson and that picture is of you and not your baby," she said.

The phone calls and letters from her public still occur. "I swear, they must all come from old women who had children at the same time Jackie was born," said her husband. So do the many letters express a few words of encouragement and often refer to similar situations in their own families.

The scrapbooks, the doll-size bonnet and blanket made for the young Jackie by some admirers are not on display. She is less than lukewarm about her early fame and noted the record for the smallest baby to survive has gone to an English woman who weighed 11 ounces at birth. "But," she added, "she wasn't born in a hospital like me, so it's not official."

Her husband said Jackie was reared as a "china doll-type child," an attitude which precluded many normal activities.

His wife concurred, remarking that at one time she wanted to emulate the nurse who almost singlehandedly cared for her after she was born and the doctors all but abandoned hope.

Jackie said that as a high school pupil she wanted to enter the profession of her old nurse, Katherine Gallagher, but after three months as a nurses' aide she decided she lacked the necessary stamina.

"Now that's ridiculous," exploded her husband. "Anybody knows it takes as much energy to watch over a class of kids as it does to be a nurse." His wife laughed appreciatively.

Raised in a protected atmosphere, did she develop an insular self-sufficiency as a result?

"I will say this," she replied, "I am a very aloof person. I prefer to be alone."

In that early struggle to survive Jackie may have also developed a strong-willed determination to accomplish a job at hand, despite opposition or advice.

She'll tube-feed an ailing puppy if necessary and, like her old nurse who ignored the pronouncements of medical authorities, she'll persist wherever there's a flicker of hope.

"I'll try beyond the point of reality," she said, "sometimes to the point of my own destruction."

The Dutch Make Good Horse Shoe Cookies

By MARY MOORE

There is a reader in this audience who sends recipes using egg yolks but she did not give her name and address.

There is another reader who sends a recipe for Gold Egg Yolk Cookies at the end of March who has sent her recipe for Dutch Horse Shoe Cookies using four egg yolks. Her name is Mrs. Den Boer so we can be sure she knows her Dutch cooking.

I tried these and they will add welcome variety to your cookie - baking. The children will love the little horse shoe shapes.

DUTCH HORSE SHOE COOKIES

(Mrs. Den Boer; stamped with by Emma)

1 3-3 cups sifted but not sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup (¼ cup plus 2 tbs.) butter (fairly hard)
4 large egg yolks (divided — see below)
1¼ cups unsifted icing sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. salt

Into heater bowl measure all ingredients except half of one egg yolk and beat until blended. If desired scrape down sides of bowl and chill dough. (I did not chill dough because I used butter like that in horse shoes.) They should not at least one and one-half inches apart. I think.

To reserved ½ egg yolk add one tbsp. water and mix. Neatly brush top of each cookie with it to make them shiny when baked. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. They bake in about 18 to 12 minutes so watch them closely. As soon as edges begin to color gold they are done. Carefully remove from pans and cool on cake racks.

Thank you Mrs. Den Boer.

Stewardess Requests A Few Kind Words

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Now that you've befriended the mailmen, the meter readers, the night janitors and the data processors, how about a kind word for the stewardesses?

ANN LANDERS

I am a stewardess who speaks for hundreds of girls who work as hard as any group of females in the world. Our major gripes are as follows:

(1) The Passenger who comes aboard aboard with a wig box, a makeup case, six dresses in a hang-up bag, a satchel of books and gifts, a steam iron and collapsible ironing board plus as much duty-free liquor as the law allows.

(2) The Passenger who throws his coat at you the minute he enters the plane.

(3) The Passenger who flies the same route every week and shrieks when he sees the same meal.

(4) The Passenger who is unhappy because the stew can't look out the window and pinpoint "where are we now?" This usually occurs at night in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean.

(5) The Passenger who becomes annoyed when he is refused a third drink, even though the stew has told him three times it's against government regulations.

Print this please. We'd be ever so grateful. — A FLY GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: As one who flies often I can attest to the fact that most stews do a great job in spite of the rudeness and lack of consideration they encounter daily. Almost every time I have talked with stews their job immensely and says the nice people are in the majority and that they make up for the others.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband sells insurance. He must make evening calls. Some of his clients are widows, divorcees and women whose husbands travel. I never gave this much thought until my neighbor asked me some questions — such as, "Do you know where your husband is at all times? If you had to reach him, could you? Has he ever called you from a client's home to let you know where he is? Has he ever come home at night too tired to make love?"

I always trusted my husband completely. Now I'm beginning to doubt him. I've checked his shirts for makeup and perfume but I can find no evidence. His does go out at least two evenings every week, however. What does this sound like to you? — ON THE ALERT.

DEAR ON: It sounds like your neighbor has a mouth that would make the Grand Canyon look like a buttonhole. Her questions are designed to raise doubts in your mind and make trouble.

Try turning things around and you may be reassured. For example, has your husband ever come home and found you too tired to make love? — Well . . .

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read the letter from the mother who was unhappy because her well-to-do son, who lives several hundred miles away, lets weeks pass without calling her. She was dying to hear his voice.

Well, my well-to-do son lives right in this town and I'm dying to hear his voice. What's the matter with children today that they don't give a thought to their parents? We did without a good many things so our boy could go to a good school, and amount to something. Now that he is a big success, he is too busy to pick up a phone and say, "Hello Mom, hello Dad, how are you?" Do parents have to die before their kids really appreciate them? — IDAHO CITY SQUARE.

DEAR I.C.S.: Not always. But usually.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Allies Can Be Burdensome

One of the problems of being partisan is that you are sometimes more embarrassed by the people who are on your side than by the enemy. This happened to me not long ago, when like family engaged in a "walk-in" through Chicago's Lincoln Park.

The city's Park Commission had stupidly decided that dogs should not be allowed in the parks, either leashed or unleashed; and we dog-lovers rose up in arms (or legs) to protest this latest bureaucratic asininity. Hundreds of us trooped through the park with our pooches.

But among us genuine dog-lovers were many dog-nuts. They didn't think dogs should be leashed in the parks; in fact, they consider children, bicyclists and non - dog - owners to be the real menaces. They are for what they call total "freedom" for canine activity.

Now this is as stupid, unfair and one - sided as the Park Commission's edict that no dogs should be permitted in the parks. All dogs should be leashed, except in special runs or enclosures that ought to be provided in city parks. The rights of dogs don't outweigh the rights of small children or of people who happen to be afraid of them.

The dog-nuts in our midst thought otherwise, and they outshouted the rest of us. Basically, they prefer dogs to people, for some twisted psychic reasons of their own — and they can see no wrong in whatever dogs may do, or be allowed to do.

As a "dog-lover (but not idolater) I am willing to march and protest on behalf of Mary's civil rights, but I am not going to encl@gpe or defend her civil wrongs. Most people, however, seem incapable of staking out a reasonable area of freedom for themselves without being willing to impinge upon the freedom of those who feel differently.

At the heart of every conflict about "liberty" is the need for a proper and just definition of what "rights" really are, and where they end. As Bernard Shaw once observed, "It is impossible for the smoker and the non-smoker to be equally free in the same railway car."

We have to devise a way of giving each faction as much freedom (which, note carefully, is not the same as "maximum" freedom), so that while nobody is as free as he would like to be, yet nobody's freedom seriously limits the freedom of others. "Freedom" as a battle-cry should not include the liberty to fold up the public's grass in the name of the noble race of canines.

"I couldn't find a thing wrong with him, Mrs. Butterworth, but I'm sure you can do better than that."

Suspended Worker Held

Chrysler Foremen Slain

DETROIT (AP) — A man firing a M—1 carbine killed two foremen and a production worker at a Chrysler Corp. auto plant Wednesday.

Police took into custody a plant worker, who had been suspended earlier in the day. Police said they were holding James Johnson, 35, of Detroit for questioning.

Police identified the dead as Gary Helux, 32, of St. Clair Shores, Hugh Jones, 44, of Detroit, and Joseph Kowalski, 36, of Detroit.

Witnesses said a man entered the Eldon Avenue axle plant at 5 p.m., walked up to a foreman and started firing.

"I was standing right there watching him when he shot this guy five times," said Edward Lacey, 35, of Detroit.

Then he shot the second foreman. And the third guy tried to talk to him and he shot him.

Lacey said the third person had tried to talk the man into putting down the weapon.

All the dead, who were in their 40s, were employed in the brake-shoe department.

Plant guards subdued the man and turned him over to police.

The Frogs Let George Win It

ST. PIERRE, Man. (CP) — Roger, the first contestant, struggled in his captor's hand at the starting gate, rolling his eyes skyward in agonized bewilderment. Fred suddenly, he leaped boldly sideways and daubed his little body against the wire mesh fencing.

A man with a booter hat and urgent expression waddled over and dropped his small leather-pouch marker beside the body of the flailing frog.

The crowd of a thousand broke into cheers below the platform in the park and the great St. Pierre frog-jumping contest was under way.

Roger had done badly. It was his first big event—this highlight of St. Pierre's two-day centennial celebrations—and his three frightened jumps had taken him just over a foot from the starting gate.

Next in the gate came Henri, who jumped about two feet into the air for his one foot forward. The judge with the tape measure, Mr. Justice Louis Deniset of the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench, rushed to the spot where Henri had landed at the end of his third bounce and measured the effort with the bright silver measure.

And then George, the last contestant in the first heat was at the gate, a great black speckled frog with a wicked lizard sweep to his face. Out he sprang, a great powerful leap, and right away the crowd sensed a winner.

George just bounced down the track as if he was off home to Joubert Creek six miles away, to see his girl-friend.

The crowd oohed and aahed. Judge Deniset rushed up and confirmed E. George was out front with three bounds, totalling a 1¼ inch over the seven-foot mark.

Although seven frogs followed George to the post, none matched his champion-ship stride.

Thirteen frogs had been scheduled to jump in the event, but Dr. Jean-Louis Forgues, the home veterinarian, pronounced the frog entered by St. Pierre Mayor Fernand LaVergne unfit for competition having too low a body temperature.

Reason for Early Use of Jet's Brakes Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Reconstructing the wing of the Super DC-8 jetliner that crashed July 5 killing 100 persons has confirmed that premature deployment of ground spoiler braking devices caused the disaster, department of transport investigator Arthur LeCheminant said Wednesday.

He said the investigation is continuing to establish whether the premature use of the spoiler — flaps which break the flow of air over the wing and reduce lift—was due to mechanical failure, pilot error or a combination of both.

Mr. LeCheminant's report was made after DoT, provincial police and Air Canada investigators, along with Ontario supervising coroner Dr. H. B. Cotnam, had examined the right wing of the DC-8, reassembled in a hangar from hundreds of charred and shattered fragments.

The DoT report said the spoilers caused the airliner to fall as it came in to land at Toronto's International Airport. An exceptionally heavy landing followed which caused the outer right-hand engine to break away, damaging the wing, and started a fire at the inner right engine.

The aircraft then took off again, apparently intending to circle the airport and try another landing.

"The aircraft climbed out after touchdown with fuel leakage and fire unknown to the crew at this time," Mr. LeCheminant's report said.

"Fuel leakage and fire contributed to in-flight explosions in the wing fuel tanks about two to three minutes later.

"These explosions caused a critical loss of right wing structure and the No.3 (inner right) engine which resulted in an uncontrollable right turn. Loss of altitude and impact with the ground occurred."

Reed Glenn, another DoT investigator, said the ground spoilers, normally activated after the aircraft has touched down to reduce landing distance, can be activated in three ways.

Normally they are raised automatically when the landing gear touches the runway. They can be activated in a similar way by the aircraft's nosewheel touching the ground, which provides a backup feature.

The spoilers can also be raised from inside the cockpit if a crew member pulls a lever.

In an interview with the Globe and Mail, a pilot who has flown similar aircraft said there are 10 spoilers on the aircraft, five on each wing.

The cockpit lever controlling the spoilers "isn't a lever you could nudge accidentally . . . It's a prominent lever on the pedestal with a tension spring in it. It needs a real pull."

"I can't imagine an experienced pilot activating the spoilers by accident. It's too big a procedure."

Missed Convert Costs Alouettes Win Over Calgary

MONTREAL (CP) — A missed convert by Pierre Guindon on Terry Evanshen's touchdown held Montreal Alouettes to an 8-8 tie with Calgary Stampeders in a Canadian Football League exhibition game Wednesday night.

Guindon's convert attempt went wide and disappointed the 12,144 fans who saw the Alouettes come back on a touchdown with a 1:13 remaining on the clock.

Evanshen scored on a 30-yard pass from rookie quarterback Tony Passander. It capped an 85-yard " downfield march directed by Passander, who called the Als' offence for the entire final quarter.

Montreal tried desperately for the winning point on the last play of the game, but Sonny Wade's punt from the Stamps' 30-yard line fell short of the goal line and Calgary ran the ball out of bounds.

The Westerners were ahead 8-2 going into the final two minutes of the game on two field goals by Larry Robinson and a safety touch. They led 3-0 after the first quarter and 5-1 at half time.

Montreal's single points came on missed field goal attempts by Guindon and Gino Berretta, from the 31- and 38-yard lines respectively.

Calgary had a great chance to score early in the second when Montreal's Dick Smith fumbled on the Alouette five. But the Easterners held firm on three line plays and quarterback Jerry Keeling was stopped on the one-yard line.

The Stamps scored their safety touch on the next-series of plays when Passander was tackled behind the goal line by John Helton.

Robinson's second field goal at 2:33 of the third quarter put the Stamps ahead 5-1. Berretta's single at 11:34 cut the margin to six points.

Montreal coach Sam Etcheverry said he was disappointed his offence did not move the ball better.

"If it wasn't for our defence tonight we'd have probably been slaughtered."

In the Calgary dressing room, coach Jim Duncan said because it was his team's third game in a week "we were glad to get out of it alive."

Montreal's total offence was 331 yards, Calgary's 285. The Als completed 29 of 55 pass attempts for 285 yards net compared with the Stamps' 73 yards net on eight of 24 attempts.

Major League Sluggers Having Last Laugh

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Only two years ago hitters were moaning loudly and pitchers smiling quietly as the boss on the mound dominated the game. Now who's grinning and who's groaning?

Whether it was because of the lowering of the pitching mound, a shortening of the strike zone, expansion, the new artificial fields or a livening of the baseball, 1976 has become the year of the hitter—at least as the second half of the season began today.

In 1968, there were only six .300 hitters in the major leagues —only one in the American League—and just 1,995 home runs, bringing a cry that longrun games were turning off the fans.

Things picked up last year when there were 12 .300 hitters and more than 3,000 homers, and by the first half of this season, bats were booming more than ever.

And the way hitters like Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox talked at the all-star game Tuesday after playing on Cincinnati's new Astroturf, the second half of the season will bring more of the same.

As play resumed today with 12 games, there were 39 hitters batting .300 or better and already almost 2,000 home runs in the majors.

Cincinnati, keeping in tune with the times, is the top hitting team in the majors with 153 home runs and a team batting average of about .277. Those figures, along with improved pitching over last year, have made the Reds the only runaway leaders going into the last half of July.

The Reds have a 16-game lead at the all-star break in the National League West, a division that had a tight four-team race last season when the Reds finished fourth.

The biggest surprise in the American League has been California Angels, who were in last place, 22 games back, at this time last season in the West. The Angels now are second to Minnesota, five games behind.

Cincinnati's pitching staff has been perhaps the biggest surprise of all. The Reds added rookie Wayne Simpson and Jim McGlothlin and Gary Nolan returned from arm trouble to join holdover Jim Merritt. All four have a chance at 20 victories. No team has more than four 20-game winners in one season.

Merritt has 14, Simpson 13 and McGlothlin and Nolan 11 each, joining nine other National League pitchers who have 10 or more victories. The American League has nine.

Merritt's single points came on missed field goal attempts by Guindon and Gino Berretta, from the 31- and 38-yard lines respectively.

Calgary had a great chance to score early in the second when Montreal's Dick Smith fumbled on the Alouette five. But the Easterners held firm on three line plays and quarterback Jerry Keeling was stopped on the one-yard line.

Wilson Sold

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers sold baseball pitcher Earl Wilson to San Diego Padres Wednesday for the $20,000 waiver price.

Wilson, 4-6 with Detroit this season with a 4.41 earned-run average, had been relegated to the bullpen lately after two straight bad starts.

He was expected to report immediately to the National League Padres.

Wilson's 11-year major-league record is 129 victories and 103 losses. During that span he has slugged 34 homers, three shy of the major league record for a pitcher.

Royal Effort By Levesque Filly

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fanfreluche crowned a royal performance with a great stretch drive Wednesday to win the $70,000 Manitoba Derby and give jockey Ron Turcotte his "first derby victory."

The only filly in the field of 14 Canadian-foaled three-year-olds made her move on the final turn to finish just ahead of Top Call in 1:54 1-5. She won $42,000 for her owner, Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal ahead of Top Call.

Second-favored Dance To Market went out in front early but faded wide on the final turn and came in third.

"It was just a tremendous race for a filly," said Levesque after the race. "She hasn't raced much this year . . . it was about her 13th start."

Levesque was presented with the Challenge Trophy and a Manitoba tartan jacket by Queen Elizabeth following the race which was watched by the Royal Family on the last day of their tour of the Northwest Territories and Manitoba.

Fanfreluche, narrowly edged out in the Queen's Plate in Toronto last month, is a daughter of the Northern Dancer out of Cihoulette

The sun shone in temperatures that reached the 80s, but it couldn't dry out a field made muddy by a heavy downpour Tuesday.

Asked whether the mud bothered his mount, Turcotte, of Grand Falls, N.B., replied:

"If she didn't like it she wouldn't have run it."

The bay filly, trained by Johnny Starr, paid $4.20 to win, $2.80 to place and $2.60 to show.

Top Call, owned by Irving Tenney of Toronto and ridden by Lloyd Duffy, Charlottetown, paid $4.20 and $3.40.

Dance To Market, owned by Vern Martin Jr. of Toronto and ridden by Chris Rogers, paid $3.30 to show.

Tinga Bulldog of the Bah Tinda stock farms of Calgary, finished fourth and made the best showing of the Western Canadian entries in the richest-ever event in the West.

Manitoba centennial sweepstakes tickets also were sold on the race with a Victoria Man and Winnipeg Woman holding tickets worth $70,000 each.

Finishing fifth in the derby was Fanfreluche's running mate, Croquemitaine.

Starr said he was surprised the colt didn't do better.

"If Croquemitaine had the heart of Fanfreluche, he'd be a great horse," said the trainer.

Levesque chatted for a time with the Queen, a life-long racing fan, who told him she knew of Northern Dancer and Nearctic.

Starr said there are no immediate plans for Fanfreluche's next race, although she likely would run in a filly race in Fort Erie, Ont.

"We like to take one thing at a time," he said.

Commonwealth Elite Meet For First Time in Scotland

EDINBURGH (CP) — The Commonwealth called its family of elite athletes together today for the first time in an ancient land where Scots have been sports fanatics for hundreds of years.

Prince Philip was scheduled to open the first Commonwealth Games on Scottish soil amid elaborate ceremonies starting at 11 a.m. EDT.

Nearly 2,800 athletes from 42 countries, the biggest Commonwealth gathering in history, were to march into Meadowbrook Stadium to hear Prince Philip read the Queen's message of goodwill to her family.

A Scottish runner, the last of hundreds, will deliver it to him in a gold baton after a journey that originated in the Northwest Territories, where the Queen was on a royal tour.

Jamaica led off the marchpast and Scotland was last—traditional placings given to host countries. The Jamaicans were hosts for the 1966 Games in Kingston.

The honor of carrying the Canadian flag went to Ralph Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., the hellwether of the Canadian swimming team.

Canada entered the second-largest team in the ninth Commonwealth Games—162 athletes and 38 officials—and was surpassed only by England's 344 members.

The Scots massed their best pipers and dancers for the spectacular ceremonies as the Royal Artillery Regiment prepared a 21-gun salute and 3,000 pigeons waited to be released.

The RAF planned a flypast by 12 jets over the $7,500,000 sports centre.

The chilly and windy Scottish weather brought a plea from Arthur Turnstall, general manager of the Australian team, to organizers not to make the athletes stand about at the ceremonies for too long.

"We want to be on guard against chills and muscle troubles—and that's what could well happen in weather conditions which our people are just not accustomed to," Turnstall said.

The wind has been so gusty that its practice hurdlers have found the hurdles blowing over and one pole vaulter, Mike Bull of England, said:

"I was scared the wind would carry me away from the landing pit."

But one Canadian track expert said bad weather could be a blessing in disguise for at least one member of the team, distance runner Jerome Drayton of Toronto, who changed his name from Paul Bunlak in 1969.

Parsons Top Quinte Soccer

The Belleville Parsons easily disposed of third place Quinte Transport and thus retained their command over the rest of the Bay of Quinte Soccer League.

The 3-0 victory kept the Parsons in first place and undefeated in the standings. In another game at Batawa, the Belleville Eagles whipped the Bata Braves 4-1.

The Parsons had complete control of last night's game and only some outstanding defensive playing by Quinte goalie Al Allan and his defensive line kept the score as low as it was.

Dennis Jones opened the scoring early in the game booting the ball into the net through a maze of players. Eighteen minutes later Lloyd Rose raced down the left side and curled a long shot into the upper right corner of the net. Bob Rutherford continued Parsons domination in the second half heading in a beautiful shot early in the half.

At Batawa the Eagles gave up an early goal to White but before the half came to a close Charlie Nesterenko converted a goal mouth feed into the lieing goal.

The Eagles began to fly in the second 45 minutes scoring three unanswered goals. Tony Gonzales accounted for two of the Belleville tallies with John Thompson firing the other goal.

Parson Sandwich?

Parson forward Peter Klinkard gets sandwiched between two Quinte defensive backs as he heads the ball towards the net. Klinkard was a continual threat for the Parsons in their 5-0 victory over Quinte Transport in Bay of Quinte Soccer action Wednesday night.

Belleville United and Circle TV couldn't find the chink in each others armour enough times last night as they fought to a 2-2 standoff.

Mike Evans with two and Tony Meagher with one accounted for the United goals

'Abrams' No-Hitter Fails To Gain South Hastings Win

Ted Abrams came up with a once-in-a-lifetime pitching effort as he fired a no hit shutout to lead his Plane's Concrete teammates to — a tie?

The stumbling block in Abrams' route to a win was Shannonville pitcher Glen Berwick, who had HIS no - hit bid ruined by a scratch fifth - inning single.

The two South Hastings righthanders completely dominated the hitters throughout the 8-8 contest with only one fly ball reaching the outfield.

Abrams used a blazing fastball to set down ten batters in the seven - inning contest. A fourth - inning shot by Bill Baerbrick, that bandcaffed the Plane's shortstop ruined his bid for a perfect game, and a last - inning throwing error accounted for the only other Shannonville baserunner.

A drive down the third baseline by Plane's Bernie Coughlin accounted for the only safety of the game, as third baseman Larry Lewis was able to get his glove on the drive, but couldn't come up with it.

The lanky righthander fanned ten batters, while walking four. His fielders committed one error.

Barberstock pitched himself out of trouble in the sixth inning, when an error and a walk plus two stolen bases, gave the home team runners on second and third with none out. The Shannonville hurler then pulled out the stops to fan the next three batters.

The Tennessee pitcher allowed seven hits and five walks, while striking out nine Latta batters. Terry McTaggart was the victim of eight Belleville hits. He struck out 11 and issued two bases on balls.

Steve Rushlow belted a triple and single for the winners, with Brian Coutanz adding two base hits, Glenn Carleton, McTaggart, Randy Burks and John Noakes collected the other safeties.

Keith Dickey with two singles, Terry Casselman with a triple and Doug Geen's double were best for Latta.

City Untracks With Second Straight Win

Last year's Commercial League softball finalists City Hotel are off to another untracked as they swept into third place by whipping Point Anne for the second time in a row, this time by a convincing 6-0 score.

In the first game of the doubleheader Rollins picked up their sixteenth win of the season a 9-0 forfeit from Corby's. The win kept Rollins a mere two points behind the first place Ellis Juniors.

It was all Bob Ebber for City Hotel Wednesday night as the stocky southpaw fired a one-hit ball and picked up twelve strikeouts. The Hotel-man hurler had a no-hitter going until the sixth when Point Anne right - fielder Dennis Maher led off with a broken bat single. In all Ebber faced only 22 batters in picking up the City victory.

The big blast for City was Gary Gow's two run homer in the Hotelmen's five-run fourth inning outburst. Gow also picked up a single to pace the City 11-hit attack. Rusty Garvin had a double and single; Larry Potter and Ken Greenwood two singles apiece and Don Gardiner a triple to round out the City hitters.

Point Anne starter Jamie Hunter gave up five of the City runs in his three inning stint before giving way to Don Holoway in the fourth. Together they allowed 11 hits while fanning two and walking two. Dennis Maher's

Women Athletes Under Siege At Edinburgh

EDINBURGH (AP) — The chastity fence around the women's quarters of the Commonwealth Games Village was in danger of crumbling Wednesday—under the determined assault of 1,000 male athletes.

The latest move in the athletes' campaign to free the women was a 16-foot surfer net under a seven-foot barbed-wire fence.

"Somebody is trying to dig their way in," said security guard John Shepherd. "We've filled in the hole this morning. If they get any more desperate we'll have to bring in some guard dogs."

The campaign against the fence surrounding female athletes from 42 countries was started by women who painted the letters "S-E-X" on doors and windows of their billets. Quick replies from the men's side of the fence were mainly unprintable, but examples of respectable slogans were "We shall be overcome," "Help us do our thing," and "Here I am girls."

Workers Wednesday from the team managers to clean up the girls' dormitory windows were largely ignored. New additions to the window gallery included personal advertisements such as "Risque Rene of Canada."

"We must clean things up" said England's assistant team manager, Chris Davidge, "or they are making the Village look like a lavatory wall."

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cat quarterback Joe Zuger, who missed much of last season's Canadian Football League action with finger injuries, today has another finger in splints. The latest injury came Tuesday when centre John Wyman mangled the ball to Zuger, causing a dislocation of the middle finger on the quarterback's left hand. Zuger was taken to hospital for X-rays and a splint was placed on the finger. Zuger, who also performs T1-cals' punting duties, was scheduled to open September last season when he suffered an injury to his little finger and ring finger on his left hand.

BARCELONA, Spain (AP)—Manuel Santana and Juan Gisbert defeated Jaime Fillol and Ion Fransiovic and Nicola Spear in doubles Wednesday to give Spain an insurmountable 3-0 lead in the European Zone A Davis Cup tennis final. The Spaniards scored a 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 doubles triumph to make today's two singles matches in the windup of the best-of-five series meaningless. Santana and Manuel Orantes scored singles victories Tuesday. Spain next meets the winner of the American Zone final between Brazil and Canada which takes place this weekend.

Canada-Brazil Have Cup Quarrel

SAO PAULO, Brazil (Reuters) — Augusto Zappa, the Argentine president of the International Davis Cup playoffs for North and South America, was expected to arrive here today to referee a series of differences before play begins this weekend between Canada and Brazil.

The most serious dispute is the alleged refusal of the Canadian team to play on indoor courts if rain prevents play at Pacembu Stadium.

When Brazil and Colombia played the South American qualifying games here last month the finals was held on the Pinheiros Club indoor courts because of steady rain.

But tournament sources say Laurie Strong of Toronto, captain of the Canadian team, insists on sticking to the regulations which call for outdoor, uncovered courts in natural daylight.

The sources said Strong had at first also insisted on not playing Brazilian balls into play. But he bowed to the regulations which stipulated that the choice of balls is up to the host country.

The Brazilians would like, and do have suggested, that the draw be made today but the Canadians were holding out for Friday because the first day the draw should take place 24 hours before the matches.

Brazil's reason for seeking an earlier draw was to give greater publicity to the tournament.

One source said Canada's No. 1 player, Mike Belkin, 25, of Montreal, was suffering pains in the calf of one leg.

Brazil's Thomas Koch looked good on the courts Wednesday after an enforced absence while he recuperated from a bout with Hepatitis

Fans are looking forward to a singles' match between Sharpe and Koch which they said should produce exciting tennis because of the similarity of their techniques.

The reserve Canadian players are Strong and Peter Burwash, 24, of Toronto.

Best Days Behind

NEW YORK (CP) — Two old soldiers went to battle in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night, and when the smoke had cleared they must have both sensed the ultimate decision— they were just two old boxing warriors who would not see better days again.

Emile Griffith, 38, former world welterweight and middleweight champion, might have sensed to himself that his 15-round decision over Dick Tiger of Nigeria in 1966 was no fluke by beating the aging warrior in a lacklustre exhibition. But 8,971 Garden fans booed his performance.

Griffith won Tiger's middleweight title four years ago and Tiger had vowed he would not even the score if they ever met again.

All that Griffith proved in winning a unanimous 10-round decision over the 41-going-on-42-year-old Tiger was that he also is not the fighter he was a few years back.

Griffith, 157, looked good in landing three or four solid right-hand leads in the first round, but Tiger, 167, showing his age and the effects of an eight-month layoff, landed a good right hand in the second round that shook Griffith and after that Griffith showed little inclination to mix with his hard-punching opponent.

That set the pattern for the rest of the fight, with Griffith jabbing and running. Tiger landed the occasional punch but couldn't put any combinations together to do any harm to his running adversary.

Streit Straight

THORNHILL, Ont. (CP) — Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonhill, Ont., turned in her second par-breaking round in as many days at the Toronto Ladies Club Wednesday to take a straight-hold on one of berths on the Ontario women's amateur golf team.

Mrs. Streit, who was five-under par 70 Tuesday at nearby Bayview, added a two-under 71 and picked up another 15 team points, giving her a total of 30.

Under the point system, golfers who beat the course standard receive a maximum 15 points for their gross strokes over par, one point is deducted from 15.

Gayle Borthwick of Toronto, who also bettered par at Bayview Tuesday, was in at three-over par 76 Wednesday and has 26 points.

A field of 18 is vying for the four berths made up of low-aggregate 18-hole rounds at Bayview and Toronto Ladies and the first 36 holes of the Ontario women's amateur championship next week at Windsor Essex.

Weslock Tears Aurora Course Apart with 66

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Nick Weslock, defending champion and seven-time winner of the Ontario Amateur golf championship, established himself as a heavy favorite to repeat with an outstanding round of 18 holes Wednesday.

Weslock tore apart the 6,525-yard Aurora Highlands Golf Club course in the opening round of the 54-hole medal play event with a five-under-par 66.

He heads into today's second round with a three-stroke lead over Burlington's Paul Williams, Donald Shorten of Aurora and Joe Zibner of Woodbridge.

Only five others in the field of 131 managed to break par. Ken Trowbridge of Bolton, Ken Richardson of Milton Wallwaik, Thornhill's Ted Durey, Bob Jarvis of Fonthill and Pat O'Donnell of Kingsville all shot 70, one-under-par.

Dale Tallon of Toronto, Oakville's Mike Millman and Tom Woodall of Woodbridge followed at even-par 71 with eight others, including Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener, Brampton's Wayne McDonald and Leo Bradshaw of Toronto, grouped at 72.

Weslock's strong round virtually ensured him a position on Ontario's Willingdon Cup team. The squad is selected by compiling the three best aggregate scores from the first two rounds of last month's Ontario open at Guelph and the first two rounds of the current tournament plus the amateur champion.

After 54 holes of Willingdon play, with today's 18 holes to count, Weslock has 207 and a six-stroke lead on Tallon.

Six players are in the running for the other two Willingdon spots.

Kesselring, Kitchener's Gary Cowan, Williams and Jarvis are tied at 214, one ahead of Woodall and Durey.

The defending champion from Mississauga, who is the oldest in the field at 52, admitted that he never stops learning, even though he has been playing competitive golf for 33 years— "the year that Sam Snead got married."

Weslock was low Canadian at the Canadian open at London earlier this month with a 286. "I learned from watching the pros at London," he said. "They work the ball instead of slugging it.

Weslock took command Wednesday firing seven birdies and eight pars after going one-over-par on the first two holes.

"The 15th was a beautiful hole," the leader said. "I hit a sand iron one bounce and it the hole (for a birdie two). wedged right into the pin."

Wayne Abbott of Hamilton Glanford carded an insignificant 81, 16-over-par, but he caused big gasps and a surprised gallery with his first shot of the day on the 18th tee.

Using a nine-iron on the 12-yard par-three finishing hole Abbott collected the first hole-in-one of his seven-year competitive golf career.

"I just aimed at the pin and let it go," Abbott said. "I pulled the trigger and that was it."

Golfer Perfects 'Big Finish'

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Wayne Abbott, a 30-year-old golfer from Hamilton Glendale, staggered in Wednesday with a 16-over-par 81 in the first round of the Ontario amateur golf championship. But he will remember his first shot.

Abbott, who has been playing golf for seven years, sank his tee shot on the par-three 135-yard 18th for a hole-in-one.

Despite his high score, Abbott was all smiles as he left the official scorer's tent.

"Yes it was my first," he said.

The Hamilton golfer used a nine iron and the ball pitched five feet above the hole, took a backspin and barely dropped in the cup.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Asian War Takes Toll of U.S. Folk

A few nights ago a colleague said, "I wish you'd write about the war in your column. About how it affects the health of most Americans. I'm certain that there'd be less tranquilizer business if the war ended tomorrow."

I said, "Are you kidding? Do you know what happens when a tragedian gets the urge to play a comedian? And when a comedian has the yen to play Hamlet? They get batted down. People say, stick to your business."

I told him of course I realize how the war affects people. I mentioned a column I had written, published on Feb. 12, 1968. It began: "Nervous? There's a war on. Remember?"

In it I quoted a letter from a man whose son was a marine in Vietnam. In part, he said, "I have been very nervous lately. My ulcer is kicking up. It's the war. That's what's causing my anxiety. I'm wondering if he will get home alive and how he will get home: whole or in pieces."

And I commented, in part: "If the war lasts much longer it will produce emotional effects in most of us (recognized or not) that will affect our physical well-being.

"For some it will mean the beginning of an ulcer; or the worsening of one already present. I can assure you it will not help those with high blood pressure, or diabetes, or heart disease."

My colleague wondered about the reactions to that column. I cited a few. From a reader of the Los Angeles Herald - Examiner came this note: "You too? Bravo! Your column was great. But do you think they'll ever listen to us, the frustrated, angry citizens? I'm going to send your column to the President and just hope it gets through to him. If there's just something we could do to regain our once great and proud nation." — Mrs. R.

And from a reader of the Record in New Jersey: "I had to write and tell you how courageous my husband and I thought you were in your column on international affairs. No doubt you will be criticized for what you said, but a great majority of us go along with your line of thinking. If only more people in positions of influence would have the courage to speak out as you did perhaps it would help bring the war to an end." — Mrs. B.

Criticism? You bet. Here is a letter to the Editor which appeared in the Miami News titled Dr. Steincrohn's diagnosis wrong!" To the Editor: "I think Dr. Steincrohn's medical advice is sound, but recently he struck a sour note. He quotes a third party, but evidently these are his sentiments — It would be well for Dr. Steincrohn to keep his nose out of international affairs and the Vietnam War in particular. His column is for cures for the ill and the prolongation of life."

(Write about the war, dear colleague? I'd do so every day if I thought it would do any good. Especially when I suffer hearing the regular Thursday evening news reports of how many of our boys were killed or wounded during the previous week.

This is not a political column. I realize it is reserved for those who suffer from heart attacks, cancer, arthritis, ulcer, hypertension, emotional problems and scores of other burdensome ailments.

But where do we draw the line? Who is to say to a doctor interested in preserving health and life: "Stop short. Remember it's not in your domain to talk about ending the war to prevent festering war wounds, amputations and deaths."

Isn't it? How can I live with myself if I do not add my small voice to the growing chorus of Americans who are saying: "Let's bring our boys home."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

Friday, July 17

Your birthday today: Overplanning comes out poorly in the year ahead. Your interests are better served by remaining free to move with opportunity into fresh directions. Impulsive moves characterize your life for a year or two — providing exciting improvements. Today's natives tend to be independent and determined to bring their own ideas into reality.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): Keep on an even keel through routine. Use your intuition to find clues for self-improvement. Give other people a chance to tell you things.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Today your energy is sufficient. Find time to speculate and if you hit on something check to see whether you might really get to it.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): In relative quiet, smooth out group differences. Go over your records, insurance coverage. Some matter requires prompt correction or something essential has been skipped.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): You must offer reasonable cooperation today if you want anything. Temperament will produce nothing. Seek light entertainment, but do not overdo food or drink.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): In striving for speed you may miss details that later take all the zip out of the project, so just settle down. There are fewer interruptions and distractions at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Whatever is to be done should be performed simply but completely. Children and their turmoil create interesting distractions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): A normal but slightly variable day in which casual changes create inconvenience. Confidential projects are more readily attended.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): There are too many preparations for the future to take care of today, but do what you can. Drastic changes are out. Romantic ideas blossom this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): An average balanced day with a little something done on several of your major interests. Depend on your own intuition rather than advice. Emotional expression comes easier now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): How you have to choose between pushing personal affairs or tending your work. It may be good if you let up a little and avoid making changes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Attend to neglected problems, uncompleted projects, and wind up the week's work as completely as you can. Count your blessings this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 20): You will be better off keeping your finances confidential today. Social activities are promised, including interesting new contacts.

Canada Is 'Saved' From Glut of Bologna

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian meat dealers have been rescued from an untimely and unprofitable burial in surplus hamburger, bologna and bologna meat, thanks to an agreement among the Australian, New Zealand and Canadian governments.

Canada appealed to its Australasian trading partners to suspend shipments of "frozen boneless manufacturing meat" for a time because the Canadian market faced a glut.

The governments agreed Tuesday and officials now are dickering about the duration of the trade suspension, which will be two months at the outside, an official estimated.

Australia was so accommodating, in fact, that it over-responded. Tuesday's announcement in Canberra said the temporary suspension of shipments to Canada would apply to all Australian beef, veal lamb and mutton.

An Ottawa official said Wednesday that Canada was concerned only about the boneless manufacturing meat, not ready-to-cook lamb chops and veal cutlets.

The glut of manufacturing meat became a threat when the United States called a halt two weeks ago to imports of the Australasian variety by way of Canada.

About a dozen Canadian dealers—packers, importers and brokers—had built up the transshipment of Australasian meat to the United States into a flourishing business. This year, the business built up to a rate of about 50,000,000 pounds annually.

But the arrangement violated a U.S. program of "voluntary restraints" on meat imports, provoked complaints from U.S. producers, prompted U.S. warnings to Australia, New Zealand and the Canadian dealers and led to the ban June 30.

The suspension is likely to last only as long as it takes Canadians to eat their way out of the problem—a matter, perhaps, of several million pounds and six to eight weeks.
